CHICAGO SPIRIT DOOMS LAKE PORT

War Department Official Declares City Has Failed to Awake to Needs of Its Harbor.

MEANS DEATH TO TRAFFIC

Only Herculean Efforts Can Build Up Again the Rapidly Dwindling Water Commerce.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—"With the spirit that prevails today in Chicago that city has no future as a commercial port. It had its opportunity. It failed to take advantage of it. Now the tide has set against it and only Herculean efforts can save the water traffic that remains."

This statement was made today by a high official of the war department who for years was interested directly in the development of Chicago as a lake harbor. He spoke earnestly on the failure of the people to realize the serious consequences of their neglect and made gloomy predictions as to the future.

Anecdote Illustrates Point.

The official said the attitude of the city reminded him of a small boy who came to his father and asked to be thrashed.

"For what reason?" asked the father.

The youngster declined to answer, but insisted upon the whipping. After the punishment had been administered his father asked again for an explanation.

"Why, I ate all the jam in mother's cupboard," the boy responded, "and I felt I should be punished for it."

"Now, Chicago," the official continued, "is in a somewhat similar frame of mind. It has lost a great deal of its traffic and is certain to lose more as the result of its own negligence and the development of other ports. In a word, it has eaten its jam and is crying because of the offense.

City Lacks Self-Reliance.

"Chicago never has been disposed to help itself, so far as its harbor is concerned. It always has looked to the federal government to force it to do things which it should have done itself. It clamored for congress and the war department to improve the Chicago river, which is a stream lying entirely within the jurisdiction of the state and with which the federal government properly has nothing to do.

"It induced the secretary of war to issue an order that no more center pier bridges should be built in the section of the Chicago river improved by the government.

"It depended upon the war department to order the lowering of the tunnels in the Chicago river. It has made appeal after appeal for other improvements which were purely local in character.

"Had the city been alive to the importance of its commerce, it would have gone ahead and made improvements without waiting for the federal government to act. The people of the city do not have to go farther than Milwaukee to see the effect of civic enterprise.

Object Lesson in Milwaukee.

"Milwaukee has widened the river upon which it lies and has built bigger and better bridges in order to prevent interference with navigation. It has facilitated government improvements at the entrance, arranged for adequate docking space and, in general, has pursued a policy of sound common sense. The result is that Milwaukee's trade has grown steadily.

"Now look at Chicago. There has been sporadic interest manifested in the city's development as a port. From time to time plans for improvements have been proposed, usually theoretical in character, and the city has refused to accept any government engineer's plan.

"They will not get anything out of the government because they will not accept anything the government is willing to give them. There is a certain coterie of impractical idealists constantly expounding views of no practical value and they insist these views must be adopted, else they won't play. They criticise any one who differs from them and make it difficult for real help to be afforded.

Importance as Port Is Gone.

"It is conditions such as these which make it almost impossible to aid the city. So far as I can see Chicago's importance as a commercial port is gone. Trade has moved to ports where it can be more easily and expeditiously handled. Moreover, the railroads have the city in their grip.

"The water front on the south side is in the possession of the railroads. The north side is occupied by residences and there is only a small area at the mouth of the river which can be used for harbor purposes. The city must blame itself for its situation. It always has been after the war department because the department would not take it by the throat and compel it to improve its harbor and approaches.

"It should not be forgotten that the rest of the United States does not care whether the trade goes to Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, Superior, or any other port. If Chicago is to regain any of its lost ground it must act in the future itself."

Awaits Engineer's Report.

The official I am quoting spoke with some heart because he really is interested in Chicago and desires that it should take advantage of its superb geographical situation. He is awaiting the arrival of the report of the engineer officer at Chicago, which will propose a plan for the improvement of the harbor, and he intends to use his influence if the scheme be satisfactory to have congress adopt it. This report was called for by the law which Congressman Mann of Chicago was instrumental in having passed.

"Chicago may depend upon it," Mr. Mann said today, "that it will get from congress all the money for the improvement of its harbor which its commerce demands. It is not the fault of the federal government that the commerce of the city has fallen off.

"Chicago enjoyed its greatest measure of lake carrying trade in the days when the city was the western terminus of lake navigation and freight was transferred by the railways to lake steamers for transportation to the east, and from the steamers to the railways for distribution in the west.

"Duluth and Superior have superseded Chicago as the western terminus of lake navigation."

WOMAN MILITANT CHEERED BY MEN

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, Explaining Suffragettism, Captures Orchestra Hall Audience.

INJUSTICE AS THE SPUR.

Leader of Movement in England Says It Was Born in Oppression of Sex, Now in Revolt.

Stone throwing as an aid to the cause of woman suffrage was so skillfully championed by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst in an address delivered at Orchestra hall last night that an audience of 700 men and women, such as generally rank among the most conservative of law abiding citizens, applauded and cheered enthusiastically.

The leader of the militant suffragettes in England had a number of things to say which left in memory indelible impressions.

"Let me tell you why I am a militant suffragette," said said in the middle of an address which continued for an hour and a half.

"I was register of births and deaths once in Manchester. One day the master of a house in the city found a new born babe in his yard. He left it there, so that from exposure it died within nine hours. He called the police and the officers were more humane. They applied restoratives and wrapped the babe in warm clothes, but it died.

Girl Sentenced; Man Censured.

"In that man's house there was a young girl servant. She was tried for murder and convicted and sentenced. But at the trial she said that the master of the house where she was employed was father of the child. He was present, and did not deny it. Helpless and frightened, she had taken the child to the yard, not knowing what else to do. That man received only the censure of the coroner's jury. The picture of that helpless child on trial for murder made me determine to do something for the protection of women at any sacrifice.

"You have your white slave traffic here in Chicago. I tell you, men and women, that traffic would be wiped out in a day if women had a vote. Do you know why those women are ruined and driven to lives of degradation?"

But Mrs. Pankhurst Disagrees.

A voice from the rear of the auditorium interrupted the speaker, crying in shrill tones: "It's because the men are bad, bad, bad!"

"No, that's not the reason," Mrs. Pankhurst continued. "I do not blame the men. It is because they have been brought up from childhood with a low view of the status of womanhood. They have been taught that they are cheap and it is no wonder that women are regarded as natural prey.

"Once give women the right to vote and they will secure for themselves the proper wages such as will enable them to live as they ought.

"Men, you have been trying to do too much. You have been taking care of your own affairs and of our affairs, too. Now we want to help you and after we get the vote you will be glad of it. Where is there a great man among you who has not had a noble and intelligent woman for a mother. We strive only to uplift all womankind.

Patience Fails; Try Force.

"You must not criticise our methods of securing what we want unless you know the conditions. We tried every way that we could to get attention from those in authority. We failed repeatedly so long as we did it patiently and took rebuffs with resignation.

"Then we took to stone throwing. It seemed to be the only method the men could understand. But even then no stones were thrown until we were refused permission to call upon the prime minister and lay our petition before him.

"Then two of our women threw two stones through the windows of his house. That marked the real beginning of this militant movement and made it a political question of the hour.

"One of the women was sent to prison for four months at hard labor. All she did was to throw one stone and shout "Votes for women," but her punishment was three times as severe as that meted out to a man who ruined a little girl and twice as severe as the penalty imposed upon a fiend who nearly burned a child's hand off in a fire.

Militant Methods Last Resort.

"We tried every possible means to get our interests before the men who had told us they were in sympathy with the movement before we resorted to militant methods. And, to tell the truth, these men are responsible for the agitation now stirring all England. Because these men have been unwilling to bring to an issue the matter they promised us they were supporting when they got our aid in the election.

"We began to study history, and we found that the laboring men blocked meetings and interrupted speakers, and finally burned public buildings. Then the laboring men got votes.

"We are adopting the same tactics. There are no public meetings in England held by the Liberals with cabinet ministers as speakers. All the meetings are by ticket, police guard the doors, and even then they don't dare fill the hall, for fear women sympathizers will get in.

Pokes Fun at Asquith.

"The other day Mr. Asquith spoke in a military hall. Ten thousand women and sympathizers gathered outside and Mr. Asquith was afraid to go home by the front door. They took him out through the stable and a horse blanket thrown over his head so that he could not be recognized.

"They got him to the postoffice building, and his presence there was discovered and more trouble enaued. So, to take care of him, they put him, the great prime minister of England, in a mail shute and got him out of the building that way.

"Men and women, it is the old problem that confronted you when you broke away from the mother country. It is possible that your men in those days had meeting after meeting in which they set up their claims and argued what should be given them, but it was not until the Boston tea party and the events that followed that the future held promise of the independence you now enjoy.

"Men advance in England the threadbare argument that women do not want the vote.

RAID TENNES' GAMBLING HOUSE

Detectives Get Into Secret Handbook Headquarters.

VICTIM GIVES POLICE "TIP."

Telephones Confiscated; Many Records of Bets.

Mont Tennes, who four times has been the victim of bomb explosions in the gamblers' war, again has been subjugated momentarily—this time by Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler, who last evening caused to be raided the clearing house of Tennes' city handbooks at 125 Clark street.

Since Chief of Police Steward started his war on gamblers, including handbook men, Mont Tennes has played a game of hide and seek in the old ramshackle office building in Clark street. Trusted employes were stationed around the front and sides of the building to notify the "regulars" where to go when they got in the elevator and climbed the stairs from the front entrance.

Six of them, including one man who was booked as the keeper of the gambling house, were arrested finally, however, and taken to the Harrison street police station, from which they were released on bail of $400 each.

Twenty-five Phones Used.

The headquarters are in rooms 29 and 30 of the building on the third floor. From these two rooms the handbook operations all over the city are directed by one of Mont Tennes' trusted lieutenants. It takes twenty-five telephones to keep tab on the business of this gambling combination and these telephones were among the articles confiscated from the rooms.

Assistant Chief Schuettler has been keeping tab on the operations of ennes in the building for a month, and has had two or three telephones jerked out of rooms in various parts of the building at different times, but without succeeding in capturing any of the handbook men.

This mystery was explained following the raid of yesterday. The telephones, torn out by the police previously, were "phony" 'phones, or a blind to prevent the true location of the clearing house to be discovered.

Rooms 29 and 30 cannot be reached directly, but by a circuitous route which leads through two other office rooms. The outer doors are locked and barred.

Chief Schuettler was "tipped off" to the true state of affairs by a man who lost a large amount of money on the "ponies," and immediately prepared to make a "killing" himself. The rooms in the clearing house are located directly on a fire escape, which is also the emergency escape for the inmates of the place.

Fire Escape Fails Them.

Men were posted at the foot of the fire escape and in the halls of the building, making escape impossible for the gamblers inside of the room. When it became known inside that a raid was about to be made on the place three men crowded out on the fire escape, but, observing two plain clothes men below, went back into the room and gave themselves up.

They were taken to the Harrison street police station, where they gave their names as follows:

Edward Waters,	C. E. Steffa,
Tony Francis,	George Larkin,
Samuel Levi,	Al Larkin,
William Blight,

Larkin was booked as the keeper of the place and the others as inmates. They were released on bonds signed by George Murray, 1044 Carmen avenue, who is said to be Mont Tennes' bondsman for all handbook operators.

According to the detectives who made the raid, this clearing house of Tennes' is the largest in the city. More than fifty handbooks are said to be served from it.

Records of 500 Wagers.

There was found the records of more than 500 wagers of races which took place on Thanksgiving day, but there were none for yesterday. From the records of the bets taken the names of several of Tennes' supposed agents were found on the tops of the lists. The sheets were marked with such names as:

"Strauss," said to be an agent at Van Buren street and Wabash avenue.

"Fisher," said to be William Fisher, a Blue Island avenue handbook agent.

"Stahl," believed by the police to be Fred Stahl, handbook agent, at Twenty-second street and Indiana avenue.

"Maple," believed to be an agency at Maple and North Clark streets.

"Dennis Foley," believed to be an agent at 14 South Halsted street.

"Sim," believed to be Simon Tuckhorn, Wabash avenue and Harmon place.

"Meyer," said to be an agent at Milwaukee avenue and Chicago avenue.

"Wurster," believed to be an agent at Washington street, near Clark street.

"T," believed to be Tennes' own private record.

"Phil," said to be either Phil Green, Thirty-first street and Indiana avenue, or Phil Waxler, Harrison street and Wabash avenue.

"Shep," believed to be an agent named Shepard, at Fifty-first and State streets.

Place Fitted Up Secretly.

All of the telephones in use by the syndicate of which Tennes is one of the heads, were placed in the rooms in the building by private linemen, according to the police.

PREACHER VICTIM OF AUTO FORGIVES THE WOMAN DRIVER

The Rev. Thomas Stephenson, Bruised by Mrs. F. C. Greene's Motor Car, Refuses to Make Complaint.

The Rev. Thomas Stephenson of La Grange was knocked down at Jackson boulevard and Wabash avenue last night by an electric motor car driven by Mrs. F. C. Greene of 631 Lincoln Park boulevard. He refused to make complaint against Mrs. Greene and she was not arrested, although there was no number on her car.

The clergyman received first aid from Dr. C. D. Wall, ambulance surgeon, and then was taken into the Wellington hotel, where Dr. H. S. Fletcher, the house physician, found he was bruised about the head and body and his left leg was lacerated.

E. E. Morton, general counsel for the Erie railroad, who witnessed the accident, said:

"The car was not running fast. I don't think it was the fault of the woman who was driving."

Mr. Stephenson, who is 50 years old, is pastor of First Baptist church at La Grange.

"It won't take me long to feel as well as ever," he said. "I am sure she did not mean to run me down. I don't blame anybody."

URION BOMBARDS SCHOOL DESIGNER

President Tells Board Architect Perkins His Report Is Filled with D—d Nonsense.

HOT CROSS EXAMINATION.

Official Asked to Explain Alleged Extravagant Expenditures and Belated Reviews.

President Alfred R. Urion of the board of education put School Architect Dwight H. Perkins on the grill for two hours yesterday at the meeting of the buildings and grounds committee, charging extravagant office expenditures and delays in making reports. He ended by demanding a report, ordered three months ago, be made at the next meeting, indicating the board would get another architect to do the work if the report is not ready at that time.

The president's attitude was that of a lawyer on cross examination. He fired pointed questions direct at the architect and demanded quick answers. He refused to be satisfied with the answers explaining delays and questioned the architect's plea that he was asking impossible work.

Mr. Urion criticised the architect's partial report on measurements of interiors as too complicated and as "d—d nonsense." The committee asked for the measurements three months ago to be used as a basis for determining salaries of engineers and janitors.

President Opens Attack.

The grilling began after the architect had presented a report asked two weeks ago on the cost of constructing modern utilitarian school buildings of the type of the Libby school. The report was that such buildings can be constructed with modern requirements for $175,000 each, at a saving of $40,000 over buildings of the type which have been erected more recently.

The report was approved by Joseph Downey, chairman of the committee, who demanded the report after a tilt with the architect at the last meeting. The chairman and architect paid compliments to each other and indicated that they had smoked the pipe of peace together. Their complimentary speeches were cut short by the president's attack.

"I want to ask the architect if he can save money by making several buildings on the same set of plans," said Mr. Urion. "I want to know the difference in the architect's department between the cost of a plan for one building and for six buildings. We have a large corps of employes in the architect's office and I want to know if they are all needed."

Fails to Appease Urion.

"I can answer that approximately, but one set for six buildings would need changes for different foundations demanded by the localities. There is also the cost of supervision," explained the architect.

"I want to know the saving in architect's expenses for six buildings on one set of plans," insisted Mr. Urion.

"I would say on six buildings we could save $15,000."

"I assume if the architect has too much of a force he will dispense with part of it," said Mr. Urion to the committee.

"I want to say that the cost of the architect's office is not in such buildings, but in planning additions is the great expense," said Perkins.

"Yes, but we want to begin saving money," said the president.

"I want to ask the president if he doesn't believe we have been doing that for the last five years?" was the next question coming from the architect.

"To be honest, I do not believe it," was the answer. "I have spent many evenings with you trying to get this information."

Sharp Retorts by Architect.

"You have spent three evenings with me, though you have made twelve or fifteen appointments."

"I have never learned how much could be saved."

"I have tried many times to show you."

"I am confident that the architect has done his best and he will do this as we want to have it done," said Trustee O. F. Greifenhagen, breaking into the dispute and defending the architect.

"I want to ask a question, but I don't want to grill the architect," said Mr. Downey. "I want to know why there was an expense of $25,000 on the Garfield building."

"I am glad you mentioned that," said Perkins. "I didn't want it built the way it was ordered. I drew the plans as ordered. I am not responsible."

"Well, we will pass up the past," said the chairman. "This is a beginning of less expensive buildings."

Urion Reopens Bombardment.

The architect was allowed to go, but soon was recalled to present the report asked three months ago in answer to a list of seventeen questions submitted then by the committee. He presented the tabulated scheme on which he was working to obtain the information, the principal item of which was the area in square feet of the interior of all the schoolrooms and area of the several school grounds.

"When we asked you these few questions you presumed we wanted all this d—d nonsense?" demanded Mr. Urion after he had the tabulated form.

"You wanted the total, and I couldn't get it without the items," answered the architect.

"When we asked for the area of the rooms you thought we wanted the number of seats, windows, skylights, and boilers?"

"I had to get all of this to answer the questions asked," was the reply. "I was asked to report and recommend a system of compensation for engineers and janitors."

Demands "Concrete Answer."

"We asked a few simple questions and you have brought a lot of unnecessary details," rejoined the president. "You wouldn't have this scheme finished during the life of the present board. Mr. Chairman, I asked for a concrete answer to our questions. If the architect can't give it soon we can get somebody else to give it.

"I think all this work was necessary," said Mr. Greifenhagen, again defending the architect.

"I move that the architect be ordered to report these answers at the next meeting," said Mr. Urion.

The architect protested that ten men could not do the work in that time, and there was an oppressive silence until finally Trustee Koester seconded the motion. Greifenhagen again protested it was folly to demand the impossible, but the motion prevailed.

DODGES SHOT TO SEE JOHN D.

Holland Count in Auto Charges Rockefeller Domain.

EJECTED BY THE BUTLER.

Bullets Miss the Intruder Bent on Mission.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—A young man from Holland, who signs himself Count de Vries and dresses with immaculate taste, has made three furious but futile attempts to see John D. Rockefeller at Forest Hill.

Once today in an automobile he dashed past the guards at the entrance to the Rockefeller estate at the rate of sixty miles an hour.

The count was shot at, but not hit, and managed to reach the Rockefeller front door. He walked in, but was met by the butler, who, aided by guards, thrust him out. Then the intruder was forcibly ejected from the grounds.

This automobile sally followed two other attempts, one earlier in the day and one on Thanksgiving day. The count, who is stopping at one of the best hotels, has come all the way from Holland to interest Mr. Rockefeller in a scheme to drain the Zuyder Zee and turn its present bed into a smiling land of gardens and homes.

Count Is Willing to Wait.

As yet the count has failed to reach the oil magnate, but he said tonight that he would stay here until he gets an audience. If he doesn't get a chance here he intends to follow the oil magnate to New York.

The count, who arrived on Monday, did not make an attempt to see Mr. Rockefeller until Thursday, when he thought the rich man might be in a mellow mood following his Thanksgiving day dinner.

The visitor found the gatekeeper, however, like a rock in his path. Although he explained his mission to Pat Lynch, who has been on the Forest Hill gate for ten years, the keeper was not impressed and the count was forced to turn back without getting within gunshot of the oil man's mansion.

This afternoon the count renewed the attempt. Again he was turned back by the gatekeeper.

De Vries then played his best card. Going away for a few minutes, he suddenly returned in his auto at high speed and rushed past the gatekeeper before Lynch was aware of his approach.

Dashes Past Guards.

The guards, hearing the gatekeeper's cries, ran out and tried to stop the auto, but the car was going too fast. Then one of the men fired his revolver, but the bullet struck the ground just behind the speeding auto.

The count reached the steps, burst into the front door, and had gone almost to the Rockefeller dining room, when guards, warned by telephone, rushed to the butler's aid.

Seen at his hotel tonight, the count was not downcast. Twirling his wee mustache and complacently smoking his pipe, he sat ruminating.

The project of making Holland sea dry is still feasible, he declared. It will require a great deal of money, but at Forest Hill and Pocantico there is a great deal of money.

It will cost 40 cents to hear Mr. Rockefeller talk next Monday night. He is scheduled to speak at the ninth annual meeting and banquet of the Men's club at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church. Supper is to be served at 6 o'clock. As admission is by ticket only, all who desire to attend are asked to buy tickets. The Rev. W. W. Bustard, pastor of the church, also will speak.

DAGGER OR A WHISKY FLASK? GIRL FRIGHTENED IN SUBWAY.

Young Woman at Lake Forest Says Bandit Threatened Her; Police Say It Was Man Taking a Drink.

Was Miss Irene Farr, a pretty Kenosha girl of 17, threatened by a man with a dagger in the subway at Lake Forest or did she merely mistake a whisky flask for the death dealing instrument?

Miss Farr and her parents Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Farr appealed to the Lake Forest police to search for the mysterious stranger but the police say they have solved the problem by the mere declaration that the girl was frightened by a man who in that local option town was forced to seek refuge in the subway while he took a drink from a bottle.

Miss Farr attends Ferry Hall and according to her story was rushing through the subway underneath the tracks of the Northwestern railroad to board a train for Milwaukee.

When about half through the subway she says she was stopped by the strange man with the dagger. She ran.

THE WAY TO A MAN'S HEART

Is Through His Stomach—If You Doubt It, Read the Simple Romance of This Pair.

A romance which had its inception five months ago in a woman's sympathy for a hard worked city fireman will culminate today in the marriage of Theodore Holm, a member of truck company No. 19, to Miss Katherine Mickel.

Five months ago, after a hard night at a fire, Holm was on the roof of the truck house in Chicago avenue hanging up his wet clothes. He had been in the thick of smoke and flame and appeared ready to drop in his tracks. Miss Mickel, who was living in a house adjoining the headquarters, asked him if he did not want a cup of coffee.

He did, and shortly afterwards Miss Mickel brought over a neatly spread tray on which were some soft boiled eggs, a delicious bit of broiled chicken, and a pot of coffee. From that instant Holm was afflicted by an agitated state of mind that did not abate until he had won the young woman's promise to wed.

DIES FROM TOO MANY DANCES.

Waukegan Woman Drops Dead on Way Home—Friends Blame Her Popularity.

Mrs. Joseph Wyda of Waukegan dropped dead while returning home from a dance Thursday night. She had danced every number.

Her body was found on the sidewalk in Twelfth street by two neighbors. Death is believed to have resulted from overexertion at the dance.

One of Mrs. Wyda's friends suggested she should "sit out" a few dances, but she was popular and she accepted every invitation.

HALT ON "GRAFT" CALLED "EXTRAS"

Long Ignored Ordinance Regarding Such Claims to Be Enforced Rigidly Hereafter.

HEAVY LOSSES TO CITY.

Vast Amount of Money Paid Out to Contractors Without a Show of Legal Authority.

Hundreds of thousands—possibly several millions—of dollars of the city's money has been paid out illegally to contractors for "extras."

For some unexplained reason, the city ordinance, which expressly prohibits the payment of any extras on contracts without an order of council authorizing the expenditure has been overlooked and disobeyed by heads of departments, the law department, and the finance committee.

To the Merriam commission belongs the credit for the discovery of this long "lost" section of the municipal code. If it had not been for the commission's activity in unearthing irregularities in municipal expenditures this provision of the law might have continued dormant, and department heads would have gone ahead authorizing extra work, and then reporting to the finance committee that it was "all right," and the council would have ordered the payment upon recommendation of the finance committee.

Many bills for "extras" ordered by department heads are now awaiting payment, but the finance committee made a beginning yesterday of turning them down—"killing" them it is called in the committee reports—having been apprised by Assistant Corporation Counsel William D. Barge that the second paragraph of section 1845 of the revised municipal code of 1905 has been discovered.

Ignored Rule Brought to Light.

The paragraph which has been peacefully reposing upon page 439 of the revised code for four years in type of the ordinary size, but conveniently inconspicuous to the city's legal lights and those who were desirous of favoring their friends the contractors with large bills for "extras" follows:

"Where any contract is entered into on behalf of the city with any person or corporation for the doing of any work or job no extra work upon the undertaking or job authorized in such contract shall be ordered or authorized to be done by the commissioner of public works or by any office or agent of the city which will involve the expenditure of any money over and above the amount specified and fixed as the contract price, in and by such contract, unless the express authority of the city council be first procured for such extra work and for the expenditure of the amount to be paid therefor."

There is no equivocation in the language of the ordinance, and no chance for a misunderstanding over its interpretation, but if the directions therein contained are not sufficient there is another paragraph in the section which plainly specifies what shall be done in case the commissioner of public works shall deem that in order to complete the work extra work, not provided for in the contract will have to be done.

Duty of the Commissioner.

Here it is in plain language:

"Said commissioner shall submit a report in writing to the city council, setting forth fully what extra work is desired and the necessity therefore, and the amount of money necessary to be expended in and about such extra work."

The practice, however, has been diametrically opposed to the statute, at least under Commissioner of Public Works Hanberg and the administration of the finance committee by former Ald. Frank I. Bennett and by Ald. Snow. That is to say, it was not always overlooked, but usually, and there has been no well defined rule as to which work should be ordered by the council and which by the department head.

(There is some consternation in the city hall as to the outcome of the outstanding bills for "extras," since this section has been unearthed. Mr. Barge says plainly that the city cannot be held liable, and yet it is conceded that the work will have to be paid for, so the question is where is the money coming from. It is held by some of the lawyers in the council that the money will have to come from the department head who ordered the extra work, and as the commissioner of public works is—or has been—the final authority in these cases, and it has been upon his recommendation that the finance committee has ordered payment for extra work already performed, the lawyers say the contractors will have to look to him or his bondsman for their money.

Snow Discovers the Rule.

Since the payment of $46,000 to McGovern for "rock" excavation has been aired before the municipal efficiency commission the finance committee has been scrutinizing with minute attention all bills for "extra" payments which have come to it from the department of public works. Last week a letter came to the committee from Commissioner Hanberg—signed by himself and not "per Paul Redieske"—recommending the payment of a claim for extra work by Paschen Bros. in connection with their contract for the building of two sublighting stations.

With this letter was one from City Electrician William Carroll saying he had authorized the extra work and approved the amounts. Just what prompted Ald. Snow to remember about the ordinance provision for council authority is not shown, but he sent the recommendation of the commissioner of public works to the corporation counsel with the following letter:

"I hand you herewith communication from the city electrician requesting authority to pay extras on certain contracts in favor of Paschen Bros. on account of additional work done in building electric light substations at 835-7 South Wood street and 4703-4 Wentworth avenue. I don't understand that authority of the city council was secured before the extra work involved in this claim was ordered. I desire to know whether under such circumstances the city is legally liable for the payment of such a claim."

Holds City Is Not Liable.

The reply to this inquiry was written by Mr. Barge and is in substance:

"If it is the fact that this work has been done and no council order for it has been given, it is now too late to pass a valid order of that kind. Section 1845 of the revised municipal code of 1905 requires the passage of the order before the extra work is done. We therefore advise you that the city, this work having been done without council order, is not liable for it."

There was nothing for the committee to do in face of this opinion but place the claim on file, and Paschen Brothers will have to look elsewhere for their $209.

A claim from Edward H. Duffy, contractor, amounting to $342.25, for extra work done in connection with the construction of a manhole and connecting sewers on twenty foot conduits at Thirty-ninth street and Cottage Grove avenue, met with the same fate. This claim was sent to the committee by Commissioner Hanberg, "per Paul Redieske, deputy commissioner," and the amount of the extras in this case was a little more than one-third of the total amount of the contract.

Mr. Redieske explained that in this instance Duffy was the lowest of eight bidders and obtained the contract at $909. He was working on specifications from the bureau of engineering, presided over by John Ericson, city engineer; and when he had excavated fifteen feet it was discovered that he could not strike the sewer. Duffy thought the sewer was seven feet south, but he found it was nine feet north.

Thinks "Extra" Claim Is Fair.

"Accordingly work was stopped upon this excavation until an agreed price could be made with the contractor for the necessary change and location of manhole," said Mr. Redieske. "His proposition is to make additional excavation, repairs to pavement, readjustment of lines of connecting sewers, for $342.25.

"The city engineer states the amount is reasonable and fair for the extra work. Owing to the fact that an apparent leak in the water main near this point was undermining the pavement, and in order to avoid any further expense, the contractor was ordered to immediately begin filling up the old excavation to a point above the water line. In view of all the circumstances related above I respectfully ask that an order be passed allowing this amount as an extra on Mr. Duffy's contract."

The claim was filed with Paschen Brothers. It will be a new experience for Mr. Duffy to have his claims for extras held up in this manner, for, according to testimony which came out before the commission, he has been among those favored with payments on large bills of this nature.

Larger Claim Is Turned Down.

Another and larger claim was also turned down by the finance committee. The claimant in this case was the Empire Construction company, and the amount was $2,832. This claim is made up of several items, which are all explained in a letter from City Engineer Ericson to Commissioner Hanberg, and by him transmitted to the finance committee. The largest item is for $2,075 for "waterproofing shaft No. 1 of the Blue Island land tunnel," and it was explained that when the Empire company opened this shaft, which had been constructed by George W. Jackson, Inc., it was found to be leaking badly. Mr. Ericson says he was out of the city at the time, but some of his assistants got figures from the Empire company for waterproofing the shaft and submitted them to the commissioner of public work on June 24.

"My assistants informed me the commissioner was understood to authorize the work to proceed, but that they were the next day instructed by letter to hold the matter in abeyance until the question of payment could be looked into," said Mr. Ericson.

Mr. Lynch, the president of the company, having received the verbal instructions of the engineer in charge to go ahead, bought his material and waterproofed the shaft, and for that reason Mr. Ericson "recommended that the bills be paid and the items charged to George W. Jackson, Inc." Mr. Hanberg concurred in this recommendation.

Coleman Taking Needed Rest.

Business Agent William Coleman is still enjoying his repose at Lake Beulah after the harrowing sessions he had with the Merriam commission early in the week, and his views about the most recent exposures concerning purchases from the Chicago Fire Appliance company could not be obtained.

Fire Chief Horan and Chief of Police Steward, on whose requisitions many of the articles were purchased, had nothing to say, except that they made requisitions for material and did not specify from what firms or persons they should be bought.

It was learned yesterday that shortly after the Smith-Connery combination got hold of the Chicago Fire Appliance company the officials of the Babcock Fire Extinguisher company, which had been supplying the city with a chemical fire extinguisher and sundry parts for fire engines, discovered they were not getting any more orders. An investigation revealed the fact that the Smith-Connery combination was getting all the business, and it was tipped off to them that they might get their orders through the Chicago Fire Appliance company.

Instead of accepting the tip, however, the Babcock officials went around the city hall day after day, crying fraud so loud that within two months the usual orders began coming their way once more.

Ericson Makes Letters Public.

Ever since City Engineer Ericson was attacked for his connection with the McGovern voucher for "shale rock" excavation he has been explaining things through the medium of his "news bureau." The "bureau" has made public certain letters which passed between Mr. Ericson and L. E. McGann, commissioner of public works in 1899. The letter from City Engineer Ericson is dated Dec. 12, 1899. Mr. Ericson asks Mr. McGann in this letter if he may be permitted during the coming year "to accept such private engineering practice as may be offered to me, provided that such private practice does not in any manner interfere with my duties as city engineer or conflict with the city's interests."

To this request Mr. Ericson has the direct consent of the elder Carter H. Harrison, then mayor, to whom Mr. McGann submitted his letter. But in the meantime, on Dec. 16, 1899, to be exact, Mr. Ericson notified his partner, Karl L. Lehmann, that he would withdraw from the partnership of Ericson & Lehmann. This withdrawal occurred a year and nine months after he was appointed civil service city engineer, and nearly three years after he had first taken the position.

The charges against Ralph A. Bonnell, the suspended assistant engineer, will be heard by the trial board some day next week unless Mr. Bonnell obtains a continuance. In the meantime the police have ceased looking for the "stolen" book with the "shale rock" records, and Capt. Wood said "the only man who can tell us about that is Bonnell." This matter will be investigated by the trial board, as one of the charges against Bonnell is "removing city records."

KERENS FOR AUSTRIAN POST; BACON WILL GO TO FRANCE.

Taft to Keep Hill at Berlin—Montague Leads for China—Low Still Considered for London.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—President Taft has almost finished the preparation of his slate of diplomatic appointments. He has decided to send to the senate immediately after congress convenes the following nominations:

RICHARD C. KERENS of Missouri, to be ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

ROBERT BACON of New York, to be ambassador to France.

DAVID J. HILL of New York, to remain as ambassador to Germany.

Seth Low of New York continues to be considered for the appointment as ambassador to England. A. J. Montague, ex-governor of Virginia, is in the lead for the Chinese mission, although no definite selection has been made.

So far as Mr. Kerens is concerned, the president has given assurances to the Missouri delegation in congress that he will nominate him as ambassador to Austria.

The president first determined to appoint Mr. Kerens last spring, as reported then in THE TRIBUNE. By his direction Secretary Knox asked the Vienna government if the Missourian was persona grata and was informed that he would be received by the emperor. Since that time no action had been taken, and Mr. Kerens' friends had been apprehensive that in the rush of business his name may have been overlooked. The senators and members who have talked with the president, however, are satisfied that the nomination will be submitted to the senate as originally arranged.

PERJURY CHARGE OVER COUNSELMAN

Judge Chetlain Expected to Issue Bench Warrant as Result of Divorce.

HIS TESTIMONY SHOWN.

Told Court He Didn't Know Why Wife "Deserted" or Where She Was.

Judge Chetlain and Frederick R. Babcock will confer this morning on the procedure to be followed against Willis Counselman, who divorced Mrs. Lulu M. Counselman early this month after a hearing which appears to have been a sham. The anticipated procedure is that the judge will issue a bench warrant against Counselman charging perjury.

This would hold him to the grand jury, where he would fall into the hands of State's Attorney Wayman. Mr. Wayman said last night he would take prompt action if the case came before the grand jury, and he added that he felt sure justice would be done Mrs. Counselman before the case was ended.

It is possible also that Counselman will have to answer before the same grand jury charges of contempt and bigamy for marrying Miss Clara French a few days after the divorce from his first wife was issued, despite the specific injunction of Judge Chetlain that he should not enter wedlock again for a year.

Learns of Insanity Hearing.

Judge Chetlain postponed beginning action against Counselman to learn the wishes of the relatives of the divorced woman. These relatives felt the court was under responsibility to take the initiative, said Mr. Babcock, brother-in-law of the divorced Mrs. Counselman. Then Judge Chetlain learned that Counselman himself had his wife adjudged insane and sent to the Elgin asylum in January, 1904, the date he set forth in the divorce hearing as the time of her desertion.

"I have the right to issue a bench warrant charging perjury against Counselman, and the chances are I will do so tomorrow," said Judge Chetlain. "If I find perjury (and that is likely, because the records show Counselman knew his wife was in an insane asylum when he says she deserted him) I will appoint a special attorney to prosecute him, and I, as examining magistrate, will bind him over to the grand jury, after which the matter will be up to State's Attorney Wayman.

"I did not take any decisive action today because I understood from a telephone conversation with Mr. Babcock that the family considered itself lucky to be rid of a fellow like Counselman. Something will be done tomorrow. If it is true that Counselman has become the husband of Miss French he also is guilty of contempt and bigamy.

Sees Perjury Charge Basis.

"The mere suppression of facts does not constitute perjury. Yes, yes, it was perjury for him to say he did not know what became of his wife, when, as a matter of fact, he had her committed to Elgin. I knew nothing about her mental condition or the insane records against her in the County court when the case was heard and the decree signed, but there won't be another case of the kind.

"Hereafter I will inquire into the mental capacity of the missing defendant. If my suspicions had been aroused I would have asked Counselman the question. She should have been represented by a guardian ad litem.

"Yes, I believe Counselman is in contempt for having married again within a year, especially in the face of my special injunction. I have ruled that the marriage of divorced persons within one year, even outside of Illinois, was not legal, but Judge McEwen ruled to the contrary. Judge McEwen has been sustained by New York judges and I have been sustained by Wisconsin judges, but none of the Supreme courts has passed upon the question. I believe it is contempt until my ruling is reversed.

"Then securing that decree by fraud, with subsequent marriage, makes him guilty of bigamy. But, again, I am told that he denies the new marriage. But remember the rights of the wife are safe for three years. I had hoped that the family would take the initiative, but I guess I will have to act of my own motion after all."

Impounds Divorce Records.

The records, which were impounded early in the morning, show how easy it is to procure a divorce in Cook county under prevailing conditions. Counselman and his witnesses, who testified to few material facts, were asked the simplest of questions, not one of which would throw any light upon the mental capacity or standing or identity of the defendant.

The certificate of evidence opens with the title of the case and then proceeds:

"I, Arthur H. Chetlain, one of the judges of said [Superior] court, do hereby certify that the above cause coming on to be heard before me, to-wit, the third day of November, A. D. 1909, being one of the days of said term of said court, the complainant, to maintain the allegations in his said bill of complaint heretofore filed, herein contained, introduced the following evidence, to-wit:

Present—Mr. M. L. Thackaberry, solicitor for the complainant.

"No defense."

Testimony by Counselman.

Willis Counselman, the complainant, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Examination by Mr. Thackaberry:

"What is your name?"

"Willis Counselman."

"Where do you live?"

"Chicago."

"How long have you lived in Chicago, Cook county, Ill.?"

"Twenty-two years."

"Are you a married man?"

"Yes, sir."

"When were you married?"

"In 1901, Jan. 11, at Kenosha."

"To whom were you married; the defendant in this case?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are you living with her now as your wife?"

"No, sir."

"How long has it been since you lived with Mrs. Lulu M. Counselman?"

"Over five years."

"Have you seen Mrs. Counselman during the last three years?"

"Not since 1904."

Doesn't Know Why She Left.

"Do you know why she left you?"

"No, sir, I do not."

"Have you ever asked her to come back?"

"Yes, sir."

"Has she ever replied in any way?"

"No, sir."

Here Judge Chetlain took the witness in hand and asked:

"What was the trouble between yourself and wife?"

"No trouble that I know of."

"What happened the day she left?"

"Why, I don't know that anything happened."

"Did you expect that she would leave?"

"No, sir."

"Did you come home and find her gone?"

"Gone—yes, sir."

"Does she know that this suit was commenced?"

"I don't know."

"What was her last known address?"

"Kenosha."

"She was living there?"

"She was the last I heard."

"Were there any children born of this marriage?"

"No, sir."

Treated His Wife Well.

"Did you treat your wife well?"

"Yes, sir; I think I did."

"You gave her no cause whatever for her conduct?"

"No, sir; I don't think so."

That was the end of Counselman's testimony. There is nothing on record to show that Judge Chetlain asked Counselman "repeatedly" where his wife was, or to show that Counselman said, "She was living with her parents."

M. E. Cook was the next witness. He is a business partner of Counselman and in his examination by Thackaberry these questions and answers were given:

"Do you know the complainant in this case?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long have you known him?"

"About eighteen years."

"How often have you seen him during the last three years?"

"Every day."

"Are you in the same office?"

"Yes, sir."

Partner Bolsters Up Case.

"Do you know whether he has lived with his wife or his wife has lived with him at any time during the last three years?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Have you been in his house during that time?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you ever seen her there?"

"No, sir."

Examination by Judge Chetlain:

"Do you know her?"

"No, sir."

"You don't know anything about their trouble?"

"No, sir."

"Did you know or hear at the time she left about her leaving? Did you hear of her leaving some three years ago?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did you hear?"

"Just that she had left."

"Who told you, the complainant?"

"Mr. Counselman."

"And that is all you know about it?"

"Yes, sir."

"And they have been living separated and apart ever since?"

"Yes, sir."

F. H. Ilse's Examination.

Frank H. Ilse was next called and examined by Thackaberry as follows:

"Do you know Mr. Counselman, the complainant in this case?"

"Yes, sir."

"How well have you known him during the last two years?"

"Familiarly."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I used to visit the house perhaps at the rate of twice a week. I used to take dinner with him frequently and spent all night there frequently."

"Have you ever seen his wife there?"

"No."

"Do you know whether they have lived together as husband and wife at any time during the last three or four years?"

"Not to my knowledge they have not."

Judge Chetlain took the witness and asked:

"Did you know the defendant?"

"I did not."

"Did you know her by sight?"

"I never saw her."

Ignorant of Mrs. Counselman.

"What do you know of her leaving?"

"I know nothing at all."

"Except what he has told you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you know where she is now?"

"I do not."

"All that you know is that after you became acquainted with him he has not been living with her?"

"That is it, yes, sir."

Next addressing Thackaberry, the court said: "You may have it written up and I will look it over," and the stenographer answered: "Which was all the evidence offered and received in hearing of said cause."

Then follows:

"And forasmuch as the matters and things aforesaid do not sufficiently appear of record herein the complainant tenders this, his certificate of evidence, and asks that the same may be signed and sealed as such by the judge of this court before whom said cause was tried, which is done accordingly the fifteenth day of November, 1909. Arthur H. Chetlain."

Awaits Reply from Wife.

Judge Chetlain withheld signing the formal decree until he received the supposed receipt of Mrs. Counselman to the following letter from Thackaberry, addressed to "Lulu M. Counselman, Kenosha, Wis."

"Dear Madam: The suit of your husband, Willis Counselman vs. yourself, about which I wrote you some time since, has been heard in the Superior court of Cook county and a decree will be entered Saturday of this week, Nov. 13, unless you put in an appearance before that time. His honor, Judge Chetlain, directed me to send you a registered letter, thinking that possibly you may not have received the notice heretofore sent you, and to state to you that unless you make objection of some kind, or put in an appearance in court, or have someone represent you, or even write his honor, Judge Chetlain, a note, that a decree will be entered granting your husband a divorce.

"Of course, if you are willing that he should have a divorce it will be unnecessary for you to pay any attention to this, otherwise do not fail to notify the court before Saturday morning."

Removed from Kenosha.

As to Mrs. Counselman's whereabouts while these proceedings were going on and when letters were mailed to her, it is shown she was removed from the Pennoyer sanitarium at Kenosha to the Milwaukee sanitarium at Wauwatosa, Wis., on Nov. 3, the day Judge Chetlain heard the divorce testimony. The records show that the official notification of the suit sent on Oct. 7 by Superior Court Clerk Charles W. Vail was addressed to "Lulu M. Counselman, Kenosha, Wis.," and was "returned to the writer."

And then there is on file a registry receipt purporting to have been signed by Mrs. Counselman on Nov. 11, acknowledging the letter sent by Attorney Thackaberry. This letter was addressed in precisely the same manner. That raises the question of why she didn't get the first letter while she was at Kenosha, but received the second one when she was at Wauwatosa.

Counselman in Insane Court.

While Counselman testified he did not know where his wife was or why she "deserted" him the records prove that he personally filed a petition with Judge Orrin N. Carter, then county judge, on Dec. 6, 1904, declaring his wife to be insane. Largely on Counselman's own testimony the woman was sent to the asylum at Elgin, where she remained until Nov. 2, 1906, when she was given in the custody of her sister, Mrs. Abbey K. Babcock, who placed her in a private institution at the family expense.

Counselman and his bride were at his residence, 1037 Rush street, last night, but no answer was made to the doorbell or to repeated calls at the telephone. In the afternoon Mrs. Counselman No. 2 could be heard at the piano playing "The Heart Bowed Down by Weight of Woe." The music stopped when the doorbell rang.

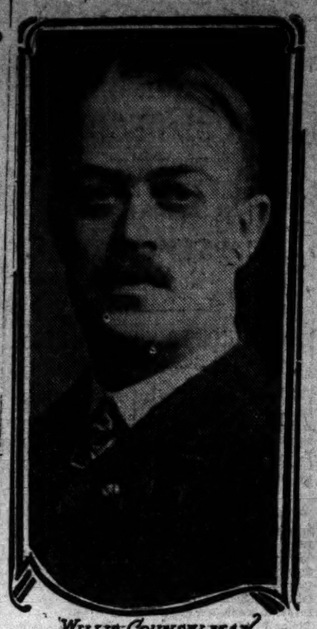

George T. French, the father of Mrs. Counselman No. 2, was seen in his office in the Fort Dearborn building in the afternoon, but refused to discuss the marriage of his daughter.

LONGWORTH DINNER COSTLY.

Republican County Committee at Pittsburg Files Account of $500 for Entertaining Alice Roosevelt.

Pittsburg, Nov. 26.—Not the least in a long list of expenses incurred during the recent campaign in this county and filed with the clerk of courts by the Republican county committee today appears a bill of $500 for the dinner given to Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth at the Duquesne club. The occasion was the presence here of Congressman Longworth and his wife during a speaking tour of the state.

FOOTBALL WORSE THAN WAR, SAYS GUERRILLA CHIEFTAIN.

Col. John Mosby Says Game Brings Out Brute in Man—Deaths Are Called Murders.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Col. John S. Mosby, the confederate guerrilla chieftain and later land commissioner of the United States, denounces football as worse than actual warfare. He maintains that the great number of fatalities represent so many murders, and proclaims that the past and present ideals of manhood in the great American universities represent the difference between Stonewall Jackson and a pugilist.

"The defenders of such sport say it develops the manhood of youth. I deny it, unless by manhood they mean physical strength. My idea of manhood is a sense of honor and courage, and such qualities may exist in a weak body.

"Football simply develops the brute dormant in man's nature, and puts the player on a level with a polar bear. Napoleon once said, 'Scratch a Russian and you find a Tartar,' implying that Russian civilization was only skin deep. If the university is a fair representative, I fear that the same sarcasm equally applies in Virginia. My observation has been that athletes belong, as a rule, to that class who are invincible in peace and invisible in war."

Texas Boy Badly Hurt.

Waco, Tex., Nov. 26.—Ethelbert Harris, quarter back of the Waco High school team, is in a dangerous condition today as the result of injuries received in a football game yesterday.

Leg Broken; Doesn't Know It.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Chester Wolfley broke his right leg in a football game yesterday forenoon. Supposing he only sprained the ligaments, he went in an automobile to view another game in the afternoon and did not learn until night that his leg was fractured.

SEEKS TO CLOSE SEVEN STREETS

Mysterious Corporation Would Shut Off Approaches to Calumet River.

NEEDS SITE FOR FACTORY

Council Committee on Local Industries Recommends Granting the Request.

Reports that interests affiliated with the Colorado Fuel and Iron company—said to be a Standard Oil concern—had purchased a 200 acre tract in the Calumet manufacturing district for the erection of a $20,000,000 plant took on new color yesterday in proceedings before the committee on local industries.

Represented by a real estate agent, and earnestly supported by the two aldermen of the Eighth ward, an unnamed corporation appealed to the committee to have the city vacate all or a portion of seven blocks of streets. If the request is granted it will leave the Calumet river without a bridge for a mile.

Ald. John R. Emerson, who spoke in favor of the grant, said he did not know the identity of the corporation, but "had heard" the concern was the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Other aldermen who discussed the matter at the meeting also confessed ignorance of what the corporation was.

Ald. John H. Jones, also of the Eighth ward, declared last night he knew the corporation concerned, but said he was not in a position to make the name public, as a mention of it might make a difference with the result.

Tract One-half Mile Square.

The tract concerned is on the west bank of the Calumet river between One Hundred and Eighteenth street, One Hundred and Twentieth street, and Saginaw avenue—approximately one-half mile square of territory.

The streets under consideration include one block of the following: One Hundred and Nineteenth street, Marquette avenue, Manistee avenue, and Escanaba avenue; also one-half of the following streets: One Hundred and Eighteenth street, One Hundred and Twentieth street, and Saginaw avenue.

At the present time there is a bridge at One Hundred and Sixth street and at One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street. There are places for bridges now at One Hundred and Twelfth, One Hundred and Fourteenth, and One Hundred and Twenty-second streets, also one side of One Hundred and Eighteenth street.

A subcommittee consisting of Ald. Richert, Fulton, and Fisher visited the site and reported favorably upon the vacation of the streets mentioned.

Edwin A. Casey and Howard A. Knowles represented the corporation. Mr. Casey acted in the capacity of agent for the concern. Mr. Knowles is from Peoria.

Protests Against the Scheme.

Ald. Finn asked several questions of Ald. Jones, which the latter apparently did not hear.

"If you don't want to answer my questions, Jones," he called out in considerable anger, "you don't have to; but I won't be bluffed by anybody, even from South Chicago."

"Let's be good natured about this," interposed Ald. Zimmer, chairman of the committee.

Ald. Jones then asked for the questions and the matter was smoothed over.

"Under this wild scheme of vacating streets," Ald. Finn subsequently declared, "one side of nearly ever street has been vacated, making stub ends of all. Still, I can't see the necessity of allowing them to have the remaining half of One Hundred and Eighteenth street."

"Years ago at Carpenter street," remarked Ald. Dever, "the street was vacated and since then we have been trying to get a bridge there. We have been offered the land for $250,000—a figure positively prohibitory. The district is one of the most congested on the west side now, but it wasn't at that time."

By a vote the vacation of streets was recommended to the council, with Ald. Finn, Ald. Dever, and Ald. Fisher in the negative.

The new concern, it is said, will begin operations with four furnaces, which will cost $5,000,000. The capitalization will be at $20,000,000, according to the report.

ASKS MORE MONEY FOR CITY HARBOR

Commissioner Ewen Estimates $55,266 Is Needed for Next Year.

TELLS PLANS IN LETTER.

New Schedule of Vehicle Rates Is Considered by License Committee.

John M. Ewen, harbor commissioner, has asked for $55,266 to carry on the work of improving conditions for navigation in the city's harbor during the year 1910. This sum, which does not include the amount of Mr. Ewen's salary, is three times the expenditure for the work during the year now drawing to a close.

In the preparation of the city's budget Mr. Ewen contributed his estimation of contemplated expenditures in a letter to Controller Walter H. Wilson. It came before the finance committee yesterday in company with an appeal for $1,366 to carry on the work during the months of November and December of this year.

Upon the approval of Ald. Charles M. Foell, chairman of the committee on harbors, wharves, and bridges, the finance committee voted to recommend the granting of this sum, which will include payment for the salaries of the engineer and office assistant, rent, and a number of bills and office expenses.

For the conduct of the harbor commissioner's office for 1910 the following is asked:

Salary of engineer	$4,000
Salary of office assistant	1,100
Rent at $65 a month	780
Office expenses at about $90 a month	1,080
Total	$6,960

Money for Dock Development.

In his letter to Controller Wilson Mr. Ewen writes:

"I have estimated the sum that would be required in addition to that of maintaining a regular office force for work on the project of dock development north of the mouth of the Chicago river, as follows:

Additional office rent	$ 600
Engineer and four draftsmen	7,200
Additional office expenses	540
Total	$8,340

"It has been suggested," Mr. Ewen writes, "that the harbor commissioner's office should cooperate with the bureau of bridges and harbors in the study of navigation features of the bridge problem. I have roughly estimated the additional expenses of the service, if required, at $300 a month.

"The harbor commission recommended a survey of the lake front and of rivers and their branches. I agree that the survey should be made. I have roughly estimated the cost of the survey at $35,000."

In explaining the suggested expenditures for next year Mr. Ewen said:

"Something like $19,000 was devoted to harbor needs this year, but the work at hand contemplates far more work and expenditure. In addition to our local investigation we have sent men to Europe to gather data."

Members of the license committee approved the "runners" ordinance in its present form, designating a license fee of $300 for all "runners."

New Schedule of Vehicle Rates.

A new schedule of vehicle rates was agreed upon temporarily, as follows:

CARRYING TRUNKS—First two miles or under, 50 cents; more than two miles, 25 cents for each additional mile.

MOVING VANS—$1.25 an hour for a one horse moving van with one man; $1.50 per hour for a two or more horse moving van with one man; 50 cents an hour for each additional man.

AUTOMOBILE HIRE—$2 an hour for a two passenger motor; $4 an hour for a five passenger motor; $5 an hour for a seven passenger motor.

Former Ald. J. H. Francis, chairman of the legislative committee of the Oak Park and Austin Transportation club, and John J. Miller conferred with Mayor Busse, Ald. Foreman, Ald. Snow, and Commissioner of Public Works Hanberg relative to the elevation of the tracks of the Chicago and Oak Park elevated road in Austin.

The mayor and the aldermen were urged to grant President Clarence A. Knight of the road his request for an ordinance tapping the far northwest side. The mayor has not signed the Forsberg ordinance.

BOY SAYS POLICEMAN BEAT HIM TO FORCE "GUILTY" PLEA.

Young Man with Face Bleeding Is Ordered Back Into Court by Judge and Mother Is Told to Prosecute.

Policeman George Pease of the Chicago avenue station was charged yesterday with using "third degree" tactics on 18 year old Joseph Griffin because he refused to plead guilty when arraigned before Judge Crowe on a charge of larceny. It is alleged Pease struck the boy in the face on the way from the courtroom to the cellroom in the basement. The boy's nose was bloody and swollen and his shirt front was covered with blood.

Judge Crowe heard the boy cry out and ordered him brought back into the courtroom and when he had told his story the judge advised the boy's mother to get out a warrant for the arrest of Pease. Mrs. Griffin signed bonds for the appearance of the boy in court this morning and left the courtroom to take her son to a doctor to have his wounds dressed.

Griffin, who lives with his mother at 4221 Central Park avenue, was arrested on Wednesday when found carrying a sack containing a number of dressed chickens. When arraigned the boy denied the chickens were stolen and the evidence against the boy was so slight that the case was continued. The delay is said to have angered Pease.

BRIDE AS A SLEUTH CAUSES MAN'S ARREST AS BIGAMIST.

Young Woman Who Elopes from Aurora Grows Suspicious When Husband Wants Her Money to Spend.

Through his bride's ability as a detective, Henry Jaffey was landed in the county jail on a charge of bigamy, preferred by Jennie Rubens, a young milliner employed in a shop on Twelfth near Halsted street.

They were acquainted but a few days when on May 3, during a visit to her sister, Mrs. A. Sohn, at Aurora, he induced her to elope with him to Geneva. After a short honeymoon trip they returned to Chicago. She became suspicious because he insisted on having all her money to spend.

She investigated and learned, she alleges, that he had another wife and family, and then she turned detective and pursued him over the state until a few days ago, when she caught up with him at Joliet and caused his arrest.

MEISTER, IN DISCORD, QUITS

Leopold Kramer Resigns from the Thomas Orchestra.

DISAGREES WITH DIRECTOR.

Veteran of Organization Resents Criticism by Mr. Stock.

Leopold Kramer, veteran concert meister of the Theodore Thomas orchestra and one of Chicago's best known musicians, has resigned his place of "second in command" in the musical organization. Music lovers and critics who attended the recital by Mme. Schumann-Heink yesterday missed Meister Kramer at the head of the orchestra and were surprised at the appearance in his stead of Ludwig Becker.

Concertgoers as a result are wondering whether Mr. Becker will succeed permanently to Mr. Kramer's position.

Mr. Kramer had appeared regularly as concert meister for twelve years and it was thought that only illness or a sudden indisposition could account for his absence.

But Mr. Kramer's absence was not occasioned by illness and his admirers may look in vain for his appearance at subsequent concerts. His resignation followed a little display of artistic temperament—or maybe, temper—following the rehearsal of the orchestra Thursday afternoon.

Resents Criticism and Suits.

At the close of the rehearsal Director Frederick R. Stock ventured a few criticisms on the work of the afternoon. The criticisms were not well received by the concert meister and without more ado he offered his resignation from the orchestra. Director Stock promptly accepted the resignation, wherefore Meister Kramer's nonappearance.

"It was a misunderstanding between Director Stock and Meister Kramer, and I don't quite know how it arose," was the way Frederick J. Wessels explained the trouble. "Mr. Kramer has been a member of the orchestra for twelve years and I much regret his action in resigning. He has not been in good health for some time—and, you know, musicians are sometimes more irritable than other people. I don't know just what the difference was, but Mr. Stock is director and as such he is at the head of the orchestra. There is no question as to his authority and that is the way an orchestra must be conducted, the director the real head. I hope that Mr. Kramer's health may become better and that he may eventually rejoin the orchestra."

Director Refuses to Talk.

Director Stock refused to discuss the controversy. He met the members of the orchestra after the concert, but said nothing of Kramer's resignation nor of his prompt acceptance.

"Mr. Stock states that he has absolutely nothing to say on the subject of Mr. Kramer's resignation," was the message brought out from the director's room by his secretary.

"Director Stock simply offered some criticisms of the rehearsal, as is proper for an orchestra director to do at any time," said a member of the organization. "The criticisms, in a way, concerned Mr. Kramer, and he took offense and offered his resignation verbally without further discussion. His resignation was accepted, and that is the whole story."

Besides being a member of the Thomas orchestra, Mr. Kramer is also leader of the Chicago String quartet. The quartet is scheduled to give the first of a series of seven Saturday morning concerts in Orchestra hall foyer a week from today, and concert patrons are wondering whether Mr. Kramer's withdrawal from the orchestra will preclude his appearance with the quartet.

DEBUTANT TO MAKE HIS BOW

Walter Gregory Rodiger a Chrysanthemum Among Rosebuds.

COMING OUT AT DANCE PARTY

Yale Graduate to Be Introduced Formally to Society on Dec. 16.

While society's damsels are enjoying formal recognition of their attainment to that degree of womanly dignity which has long gowns and fanciful coiffures among its prerogatives, to say nothing of holding court for blushing suitors, now comes a "gentleman debutant"—a beaming chrysanthemum among the roses.

The knight with the new shining mail fresh from the society armory, and supposedly with vulnerable spots for Cupid's darts, is Walter Gregory Rodiger, 84 Bellevue place, late of Yale.

Mr. Rodiger is to be the center of attention at a function next month which is set forth as follows in neatly engraved invitations sent out by his parents:

> Mr. and Mrs. William Rodiger
> Mr. Walter Gregory Rodiger > request the pleasure of your company > on Thursday evening, Dec. the sixteenth, > at nine o'clock,
> Lincoln Hall,
> 1134 Dearborn avenue.
> Dancing.
> Please respond, 64 Bellevue place.

Mrs. Rodiger Is Reticent.

Mr. Rodiger, the father, answered the phone at the Rodiger residence last night. The caller wanted to know about the dancing party.

"I'll call Mrs. Rodiger," said Mr. Rodiger. Mrs. Rodiger was reticent when she came.

"Just a formal notice—a dance for our son," she murmured, with the full measure of discretion which is to be expected of the mother of a debutant.

"I assume that it is his formal introduction to society," quoth the inquirer.

A silvery tinkle of amusement traveled over the telephone wire from Mrs. Rodiger's end.

"O, we don't want that—just a formal notice," she replied, deprecatingly.

"But that is what the dance is for, isn't it?"

"Why, we don't want—er—yes—really, all we care for is a paragraph, you know," responded the tactful Mrs. Rodiger.

Details Are Sequestered.

Then, in response to questions, Mrs. Rodiger admitted that her son was graduated from Yale last June, but she didn't care to say whether he was preeminent in football, baseball, rowing or bridge. Neither did she care to say for what Greek letter bunds he had been "slapped" in the east, or to give other details.

The interviewer showed his full ignorance of proprieties by asking the age of the young man who is "coming out." Mrs. Rodiger hastily intimated that a withdrawal of the question would be grateful to her, and out of consideration, the question was withdrawn. The age of young Mr. Rodiger deliberately was left a matter for rival debutants to discover.

Later.—Mr. Rodiger said it had been decided to give out that the music will be by Johnny Hand and that the german will be led by Alvar Bournique.

TIGE GRINS; POLICE CALLED.

Mrs. W. H. Taylor Recovers Pet After It Shakes Hands with Men at Station.

Just the sight of the fierce face of Tige, the pet of Mrs. W. H. Taylor, 1852 West Adams street, threw patrons of the Whiteford Chemical company's drug store into such terror that they called the police last night. Tige got out of the Taylor house while no one was there and went to the drug store at 1401 West Madison street and grinned.

Two detectives roped the pet and took him to the Lake street police station. Mrs. Taylor told the police that Tige was the gentlest dog in the world.

To prove her assertions Mrs. Taylor induced Tige to sit up in his cell and shake hands with the policemen. Then they released their prisoner.

CRANE PAYS PRENTICE HEIRS

Secures Title to His Homestead by Giving $13,000.

RECALLS AN OLD LAWSUIT.

Property Deeded to Second Wife, Who Died Intestate.

Interest in a suit of a year ago has been revived by a real estate transaction in which Richard T. Crane, president of the Crane company, secures title to the Crane homestead at 2541 Michigan avenue by paying the Prentice heirs $13,000 in settlement.

The property involved is 68x173 feet and is located 100 feet north of Twenty-sixth street.

Mr. Crane bought the property in 1889 and conveyed the title to his wife, who was Eliza Prentice. She was his second wife and was the sister of his first wife. Mr. Crane built a $100,000 residence on the lot.

Wife Dies Intestate.

Mrs. Eliza Prentice Crane died intestate in 1902, leaving three heirs of her own family, two brothers, Alonzo Prentice, nearly 80 years old, and Leon H. Prentice and Mrs. Harriet Jane Fenn of Waukegan.

The Prentice heirs alleged that after the death of his second wife, Mr. Crane represented to Alonzo Prentice that she had willed all her property to her husband, but that the latter had destroyed the testament intentionally. Alonzo Prentice signed a quitclaim deed to the property, and Leon Prentice assigned his interest in it on receipt of $14,000.

Six months after the signing of these deeds a son of Alonzo Prentice, who had been appointed conservator for his father, began a partition suit. Before it was heard the father died, but the heirs pushed the action. They carried it to the Supreme court, alleging that Mr. Crane had secured title to the homestead by "fraudulent misrepresentation."

Court Upholds Prentice Heirs.

The court held for the Prentice heirs, affirming their right to a share in the property.

Mr. Crane was too ill to be seen yesterday at his residence, but his secretary said that the deed recorded was the result of a settlement that had been made with the Prentice heirs.

Mr. Crane's present wife, whom he married on Oct. 14, 1908, was Miss Emily Hutchinson.

MODIFIES "JOAN OF ARC ADS."

Independent Religious Society Erases Certain Words, Following Protest of Roman Catholics.

Confronted with the alternative of altering their posters or of having them torn down, the Independent Religious society yesterday struck out words that were offensive to members of the Roman Catholic church.

"There was no use trying to fight," said M. M. Mangasarian, the posters for whose lecture on Dec. 1 were the subject of the controversy.

The Independent Religious society has been advertising Mr. Mangasarian's lecture on Joan of Arc by three sheet posters on the South Side elevated platforms. The ire of Roman Catholic patrons of the line was aroused by the words "burned by the infallible church as a witch at the age of 19 and then translated into a saint by the same infallible church."

CITY WINS SUIT FROM COUNTY.

Gets $84,126.90 Judgment for Maintaining Prisoners at House of Correction.

The city of Chicago won a victory over Cook county yesterday when Judge Ball decided that the county should pay for the maintenance of prisoners at the house of correction when convicted of a state charge in the Municipal court.

The opinion was in the form of a judgment for $84,126.90 against the county. The suit was begun a year ago to determine who should pay for the prisoners.

The judgment is for the last year and a half and is computed at the rate of 30 cents a day for each prisoner.

Sued Under Law He Advocated.

Weber was indignant when he learned of the suits against his theater.

"I have firemen in each theater," said Weber. "They all have uniforms, but as they are not the same cloth and cut as those prescribed by the fire department I am sued. They want me to buy new clothes and caps, and this I refuse to do."

It is said that Weber was most active in lobbying for the adoption of the ordinance he is now sued for violating. Weber declares that the fire department wants him to pay $3 apiece for two tin badges, that he asserts are worth but 15 cents.

ARMED MEN ROB DRUGGIST; PUT SALOONIST IN ICE BOX.

Knock Pharmacist Insensible, Get Jewelry and Money—Two Others Loot Cash Register of Saloon.

Two armed robbers entered the drug store of Stearns & Glazer, 5058 West Chicago avenue, late last night, and after beating Joseph Stearns, one of the partners, into insensibility, robbed him of his jewelry and $45. Stearns was alone.

Pointing a revolver at him, they ordered him to give up his money. Stearns offered fight, whereat one of the thugs hit him on the head with a revolver.

A few minutes after the robbery Mr. Glazer arrived at the store and quickly revived his partner.

Two polite, well dressed men robbed the cash register in the saloon of John Whittow, 145 West Thirty-ninth street, after they had forced the proprietor to enter the ice box. They obtained $33 and a gold watch and chain.

They had asked the proprietor to drink a bottle of wine with them and as he prepared to open the bottle he was confronted by two revolvers.

MOON DARKENED FOR HOURS

Total Eclipse Plainly Visible to Late Watchers.

IGNORED BY ASTRONOMERS.

According to Schedule, Declare the Scientists.

Chicago was the darkest tow nit has been for many, many moons during the early hours of this morning.

The foregoing is intended simply to call the attention of sound sleepers to the fact that a total eclipse of the moon occurred between 1:11 a. m. and 4:38 a. m. Most of the time the sky was cloudless, giving late—or early—observers ample opportunity to watch the performance. Astronomers in observatories affected not to think highly of the total eclipse, which they found wholly normal and according to schedule.

Comes Promptly on Time.

The lunar disk began to be obscured at 1:11, precisely as the astronomers had guaranteed it would be.

The face of the faithful old moon changed from a cheesy pallor to the ripe complexion of a well colored Apache Indian as the eclipse proceeded. When the moon was fully covered it had the appearance of rich red copper.

Prof. E. E. Barnard of the Yerkes observatory said of the eclipse:

"Such an event can take place only when the moon is at its full. An eclipse of the moon means that the earth has got squarely between the sun and the moon and has shut off all direct light from the sun to the moon. The red appearance of the moon during an eclipse is due to the fact that only red rays are refracted through the earth's atmosphere to the moon at that time. The clearer the earth's atmosphere the brighter and more vivid a red looks the moon. A thick atmosphere around the earth lends the moon a dull tone of red.

Other Uses for Telescope.

Observer Barrett of the Yerkes observatory said:

"The telescope is being used for other purposes tonight. Eclipses of the moon have been observed so many times that there is nothing specially interesting about them to astronomers."

"FRIENDS" DRIVE OUT COUPLE AND TURN FLAT TOPSYTURVY.

George Karstens and His Bride Flee Rowdy Visitors, Who Then Take Possession of Premises.

Scarcely had George Karstens and his bride of a few hours entered their new flat at 1027 Cullom avenue late Thursday night when a dozen of their "friends" besieged the front door and demanded admittance. The newly wedded couple frantically dashed out of the rear door, over two fences to another street, hailed a cabman, and finally reached the Great Northern hotel early yesterday morning.

When they revisited their flat during the day they found every tree within a radius of three blocks bore a poster calling attention to the fact of the marriage. The house itself was radiant with red and blue banners. Karstens grinned patiently until he opened the door and gazed on the interior.

Then his feelings changed and he is still waiting for some of his "friends" to return, and he carries something heavier than an olive branch.

These "friends" played rowdy in the flat until neighbors threatened to call the police. Then the intruders—several of them girls—upset all the furniture and piled chairs, plates, pictures, and other goods in a heap on the floor.

When John Miller Returns from Work He Finds His Residence Deserted.

Mrs. Jennie Miller, 4100 Berkeley avenue, disappeared yesterday, taking her 17 months old boy with her. On the return of the husband, John Miller, last night he asked the police to assist him in his search. Miller could give no reason for her act. He said there had been no family trouble.

Medium weight is usually warm enough.

Then for outdoors a good warm overcoat—not too heavy, but as warm as you like.

Our Rogers-Peet Winter suits are many of them cut from medium weight all-wool woolens. Some heavier, of course, for some of our friends who spend most of their time "out in the cold."

Being all of them all-wool, means warmth without extra weight.

ROCK ISLAND LINE TO BE DISSOLVED

Roads Which Compose Great System Will Be Made Independent Ones.

DO NOT FEAR THE LAW.

Controlling Factors Decide on Move Because of Divided Interests.

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Negotiations are under way for the division of the property of the Rock Island company, which is one of the biggest of the railroad holding companies and controls a mileage second only to that of the Union Pacific systems among the railroad organizations of the world. If the negotiations are successful the St. Louis and San Francisco, with its dependent lines, a total mileage of 6,550, and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, with its subsidiaries and a mileage of 8,048, will be operated and managed thereafter independently of each other.

There have been greater consolidations, but this transaction contemplates the greatest dissolution in the history of corporate management since and before the combinations of industrial or railroad companies aroused economical and political discussion.

It was declared, however, by one of the men most active in the negotiations that the proposed dissolution was entirely without any relationship to the decision of the United States Circuit court in the Standard Oil case. The combination, he said, never had been attacked or threatened by the government and was in no way a violation of the Sherman act.

Not Divorce, but Separation.

"The parting of the two systems is not a divorce," he added. "At least not in the sense that any fault had been committed. It is simply a separation for incompatibility of temper."

In other words, it was explained, the motive for the negotiations is simply a tentative agreement to disagree among the members of the Rock Island party. B. F. Yoakum, who, in association with Daniel G. Reid, W. H. Moore, and J. Herbert Moore, has made up the party since the death of W. B. Leeds, was in control of the St. Louis and San Francisco before these men joined fortunes in 1902.

He has latterly associated himself with Edwin Hawley in control of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas and in other enterprises, and this diversity of interest, it was said, has made it in the interest of all parties to return to Mr. Yoakum and his new associates the property with which he joined the Rock Island party and to retain, independent of Mr. Yoakum, the system controlled by the original members of the Rock Island party before the merger.

Refuses to Discuss Deal.

Both Mr. Yoakum, Mr. Reid, and the other members of the Rock Island party were out of town today. James Speyer of Speyer & Co., who is the fiscal agent of the Rock Island and the 'Frisco lines, refused to discuss the transaction. Nor would he indicate Mr. Yoakum's associate. It became known, however, that the Union Pacific is not a party at interest, and it was everywhere assumed that Edwin Hawley was interested with Mr. Yoakum, as turned out to be the case in the Missouri, Kansas and Texas transaction.

The financing of the transaction, in case the majority of the Rock Island party agree to the proposed terms, can be easily accomplished. The dissolution would leave the original Rock Island party in control of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, and, having a half interest, in partnership with the Colorado and Southern, in the Trinity and Brazos Valley, which gives the system a gulf outlet at Galveston. The system has 8,048 miles of track, extending from Chicago on the east to Minneapolis and Watertown, S. D., on the north; Denver and El Paso, Tex., on the west and southwest, and Galveston on the south.

RULING AFFECTS GRAIN MEN.

Interstate Commerce Commission Postpones Effective Date of the Peavey Cases Order.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—Every bushel of wheat, and practically every interstate railroad and every grain shipper in the middle west are affected by an order issued today by the interstate commerce commission postponing the effective date of the commission's order in what are known as the Peavey elevator cases.

Several dates were fixed by the commission for its order to become effective, but for various reasons it was postponed finally until Jan. 1, 1910.

Today it was postponed until April 1, 1910, in order that the United States Circuit court of the eighth circuit might have an opportunity to hear the cases.

RED CROSS CHRISTMAS STAMPS ARE CONFUSED WITH POSTAGE.

Postmaster Campbell Says Number of Letters Have Been Put in Mails Bearing Only Tuberculosis "Stickers."

Confusion in the use of the Red Cross Christmas stamps, now bing sold to aid in the war against tuberculosis, was noted by Postmaster D. A. Campbell yesterday.

He told Frank E. Wing, superintendent of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, that several letters had been received at the post-office which bore only the Christmas stamp and asked him to call the attention of purchasers to the fact that the stamp is not good for postage.

Nurses representing twenty-six hospitals in the city met at the offices of the institute last evening and arranged to take charge of the sale of the Christmas stamps throughout the city.

Already the nurses are in charge of the sale of stamps in THE TRIBUNE information booth at the Coliseum land show.

A large eight sided booth will be opened in the federal building Monday morning with nurses from the Chicago hospital in charge.

News of the elopement and marriage at Crown Point, Ind., of John J. Finn, chief electrician in the fire department, and Miss Martha Clemens, 6443 Peoria street, was received by surprised friends of the principals in Chicago yesterday.

The wedding of Finn and his bride was a fitting culmination, it is said by friends, of a romance that began after Miss Clemens witnessed an act of bravery performed by Finn in the rescue of a little girl from the lake at the foot of Oak street.

Two Officials of the Hawley System.

ROBERT J. McKAY — GEORGE J CHARLTON

NAME HAWLEY SYSTEM CHIEFS

G. J. Charlton Traffic Manager, R. J. McKay Passenger Agent.

HEADQUARTERS IN CHICAGO.

Wabash Offers Free Scholarships in Agricultural College.

The organization of the Hawley system of railroads, which has been going on by steps since the Iowa Central and Minneapolis and St. Louis were merged a few weeks ago with the Alton and Clover Leaf, was completed yesterday by the announcement of appointments in the traffic department, both freight and passenger, to become effective on Dec. 1.

The recently acquired Missouri, Kansas and Texas and the Chesapeake and Ohio, which are controlled by the Hawley interests, are not yet included in the system and have separate organizations, but after Dec. 1 the officers will be practically the same for the Alton, Clover Leaf, Iowa Central, and Minneapolis and St. Louis, making a system of 3,034 miles operated from the Chicago headquarters.

It has been predicted that all of the roads under Hawley control, including the "Katy," the Chesapeake and Ohio, and probably the Chicago, Cincinnati and Louisville and the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient, which now has a traffic agreement with the Alton, will be merged into a single system.

Charlton for Traffic Manager.

According to the circulars issued yesterday George J. Charlton, the veteran general passenger agent of the Alton and Clover Leaf, is promoted to be passenger traffic manager of the system.

R. J. McKay, first assistant general passenger agent of the Alton-Clover Leaf, is promoted to be general passenger agent of the four roads. Charles A. King, general freight agent, will be in charge of the freight traffic of the system, with the title of freight traffic manager, and B. C. Stevenson, assistant general freight agent, will become assistant freight traffic manager.

S. G. Lutz, freight traffic manager of the Iowa Central and Minneapolis and St. Louis, is appointed general freight agent. The foregoing will have headquarters in Chicago. A. B. Cutts, heretofore general passenger agent of the two northern lines, is appointed assistant general passenger agent of the system, with headquarters at Minneapolis.

Rises from Messenger Boy.

Mr. Charlton, who will have sway over the passenger service of the four roads, is a resident of Oak Park and has the distinction of being the oldest officer in point of service on the Alton road. He has spent all his time in the passenger service of the road since the age of 14, in 1875, when he started as messenger boy in the Chicago office.

Mr. Charlton has served during the presidencies of T. B. Blackstone, S. M. Felton, and T. P. Shonts and has consequently been identified with the principal developments in the passenger departments of western railroading. He was successively messenger boy, junior clerk, conductor's clerk, rate clerk, and ticket accountant until 1885, when he was appointed assistant general passenger agent.

His promotion to general passenger agent followed in 1900, and on Jan. 1, 1908, when the road was merged with the Clover Leaf, his jurisdiction was extended over the two roads. Mr. Charlton is one of the best known men in the passenger business, is a member of the principal Chicago clubs and secret societies, and is especially well known in theatrical circles. He is a member of the Lambs and the Greenroom clubs of New York.

McKay Comes with Merger.

Mr. King, who will have charge of the freight department, also has passed his business life in the service of the Alton. He began in 1881 as checking clerk in the local freight house at Kansas City, and has been general freight agent since 1905.

Mr. McKay came to the Alton at the time of the merger with the Clover Leaf, after having been assistant general passenger agent at St. Louis for several years. He was formerly city ticket agent of the Burlington at Chicago. Mr. Stevenson also is a Clover Leaf man and has been assistant general freight agent since 1900.

Arthur E. Stillwell, president of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railway, which now extends from Kansas City to Sweetwater, Tex., and is under construction to the Pacific coast of Mexico, was in Chicago yesterday with a party of about sixty officers, directors, and stockholders of the road en route for a trip of inspection over the property.

They came from New York in a special train of seven cars and left at 5:30 p. m. over the Rock Island. When the road is completed it is expected that through trains will be run over it from Chicago via the Alton to Topolobampo, Mexico. It is understood that the Hawley interests attempted to buy the road, but on account of a voting trust agreement under which Mr. Stillwell is to control the road until 1917 were obliged to content themselves with a traffic agreement.

OLEO WAR PERILS SPEAKER CANNON

Butterine Makers Plan Campaign to Reduce Tax on Colored Product.

LORIMER IS THE LEADER.

"Uncle Joe's" Friends Divided on Proposition and His Foes See New Hope.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Unless Uncle Joe Cannon picks his steps gingerly in the coming session of congress he is likely to slip up on the butterine issue, according to some politicians now on the ground.

In fact, it is intimated that the congressional insurgents would not be averse to using oleomargarine to grease the skids upon which they hope to slide Uncle Joe into retirement.

More information that came to light here today indicates the butterine interests are making an elaborate plan to storm congress with demands for a reduction in the tax of 10 cents a pound on artificially colored oleo. Senator Lorimer is to be generalissimo of the campaign and floor manager of the bill in the senate, if it ever gets that far.

Congressman Payne of New York, who is chairman of the ways and means committee, is to be asked to take charge of the bill in the house, with the newly elected Chicago congressman, William J. Mozley, the oleo magnate, acting as a sort of lieutenant.

Tawney for Butter Interests.

The butter interests in the house will be represented by Congressman Tawney of Minnesota. The dairymen are determined to keep the tax on butterine. If a considerable row should develop it is believed that standpatters might find themselves badly split up.

Senator Lorimer is a staunch Cannon man, but is bent on the reduction of the oleo tax. Congressman Tawney is just as staunch a Cannon supporter, but is dead set against any tinkering with the tax. Unless the speaker has changed his convictions he is opposed to the tax and is in a fair way to fall out with Tawney over the question.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh has suggested the removal of the extra tax on artificially colored oleo, or at least its reduction. He says that it is extremely difficult to detect the evasion of the tax, which is going on constantly on a wholesale scale, he believes.

The tax on uncolored butterine is one-fourth of 1 cent a pound and the secretary thinks the charge should be the same on both classes of the product, although he does not undertake to say what the figure should be.

Mr. MacVeagh favors a regulation requiring every package of butterine to be labeled as such on the paper and on the boxes, whether the article happens to be colored or uncolored.

Such a regulation, he believes, would prevent impositions upon the consumer, while the removal of the tax on the artificially colored product would place it within the reach of thousands of families now compelled to use the uncolored article.

Butterine Swindle Charged.

Janesville, Wis., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The biggest food swindle unearthed in years will, it is alleged, be disclosed in the proceedings against A. E. Graham, now under arrest here by the United States authorities.

While the government inspectors have been working on the case for several years and have traced the operations from the Pacific coast east, the first arrest was made early this week by Wisconsin officers working under the Wisconsin pure food laws.

The case involved the sale of butterine under the guise of creamery butter, and is declared to have extended all over the western part of the United States, its ramifications reaching to the Pacific coast.

Two in Jail at Milwaukee.

Two men are now in jail in Milwaukee on a charge of being identified with the swindle, and United States Inspector Beecher Sterne, in charge of the investigation, intimates that many others at various points will be arrested before the investigation ceases.

Suspicion was first directed to Graham in October, when he sold to Janesville merchants about 1,000 pounds of alleged pure creamery butter at prices below the Elgin figures. A sample was given to a chemist for analysis and pronounced butterine.

The two Milwaukee men, James Davis and Edward Klimis, came to Janesville and paid Graham's fine, thereby directing suspicion to themselves and the United States authorities took immediate action.

GIVES MARINE HOSPITAL O. K.

Surgeon Says It Is Not More Expensive than Similar Ones.

22 MEN EMPLOYED THERE.

Dr. G. B. Young Sees No Reason for Closing the Institution.

The cost of constructing the United States Marine hospital in Chicago is no greater than other like institutions, according to Dr. G. B. Young, surgeon in charge of the hospital. Dr. Young also asserted the statement that at times the number of attendants outnumbered the patients in the hospital to be utterly false.

The question of closing the Chicago hospital on the grounds of economy arose about four years ago, at which time figures were presented showing the institution be conducted at no greater cost than others in the marine and hospital service in comparison with the cost of living in Chicago.

"In the appropriation for 1907," said Dr. Young, "there were items amounting to several thousands of dollars that were for permanent improvement, interior reconstruction, and decorating, and were in no way connected with the charge of maintenance.

"Chicago, New York, and San Francisco are three cities in which cost of living, provisions, labor, and supplies are much higher than in smaller cities. We pay about 5 per cent higher for contracts for provisions and labor is much higher, so the general expense is greater here than in Memphis.

"Patients can be sent to first class private hospitals for less money, but they will not receive the care of first class patients that is given them here."

Twenty-two Men Are Employed.

The United States Marine hospital in Chicago has twenty-two employes, including Dr. Young and one officer in charge of the downtown dispensary. There are six male nurses, two physicians, a pharmacist, and the others are men at work on the general upkeep of the hospital and grounds.

"The reason these cost more than a civil hospital," asserted Dr. Young, "is that every one working here receives a salary. In a civil hospital the physicians attach their names to the hospital's roster for the prestige and the opportunity it gives them for extending their knowledge. Patients are cared for by internes who are completing their education and nurses from nurses' training schools work for the practice it gives them."

To obtain a fair average of the number of patients generally in the sick rooms the monthly reports for the last ten months were assembled, and one day taken from each as a sample. This showed the number of patients for each month as follows: January, 65; February, 50; March, 50; April, 57; May, 36; June, 41; July, 43; August, 54; September, 50; October, 61.

No Women Patients Taken.

The total number of patients cared for since the beginning of the last fiscal year, July 1, 1909, has been 228. Dr. Young asserts that at no time for years has the number of attendants been more than twenty-two.

Patients for the Marine hospital come from officers and men of the United States revenue cutter service, from the life saving service, from the lighthouse service, from vessels used by army engineers in river and harbor work, from soldiers and naval seamen when they are out of reach of other hospital service, and merchant marines. The last class furnishes the greatest number of patients.

In addition to the hospital the work in charge of Dr. Young includes the examination of all immigrants who become public charges within four years of reaching this country at points within 200 miles of Chicago and to take charge of all epidemics.

No women patients are cared for, the few cases which come under the hospital's jurisdiction being sent to civil hospitals at government expense. The majority of all cases are acute, there being only a few chronic cases.

"I have heard nothing that the hospital may be closed," said Dr. Young. "I shall stay here until it is and then be sent some place else."

CANNON REVILES PRESS AND FOES

Speaker at Kansas City Points with Pride to Election of Moxley.

TAKEN AS INDORSEMENT.

"We Must Fight Insurgents Just as We Do Bryan," Asserts "Uncle Joe."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—"Uncle Joe" Cannon became quite excited locally tonight. He spoke a piece which he intended for general consumption and read it from manuscript, "because of the manifest unfairness of the press," according to Uncle Joe.

The Knife and Fork club of Kansas City, whose banquet guest the speaker was, want ed to hear some live stuff and, moved by the spirit, Speaker Cannon loosened up with a typical attack upon the metropolitan press and upon those gentlemen in congress whom he repeatedly dubbed the "so-called insurgents."

"We must fight the so-called insurgents just as we do Bryan," he thundered.

Points With Pride to Moxley.

The speaker pointed with extreme pride to the election of "Butterine Bill" Moxley in the Lorimer district as a personal vindication of himself and the Aldrich-Payne-Dalzell-Smoot tariff bill. He allowed in peviliaric language that he and the tariff bill need no further recommendation from the people and that with the Sixth Illinois district returns staring the world in the face there need be no fear about the congressional elections of 1910.

"Uncle Joe" also admitted that the election of the Silent Colonel was all that was necessary to put the final kibosh upon the disreputable Chicago press, which has been putting him in bad odor with the nation at large, to quit business.

Warning to Publishers.

The speaker told the Kansas City business and professional men that "the gentlemen who own print paper and a few hogsheads of ink must realize the time has arrived for them to shut up."

The afterpart or concert section of Mr. Cannon's program for the evening was on the piano, with variations, that the tariff issue and the Cannonism issue went into the grave in a single casket at the moment that the oleo man greased into congress as the successor of William Lorimer.

Col. William R. Nelson, owner of the Kansas City Star, which has taken an active part in the insurgent movement through the Missouri valley, was the particular person whom Uncle Joe impaled as soon as he began to run loosely by way of the mouth.

The speaker charged that the Kansas City newspaper friends of the insurgent movement are in the same metropolitan newspaper combine with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which has printed his diatribe before, and other metropolitan newspapers, to shove him into the political cannery.

Dares Paper to Print Speech.

He dared Col. Nelson to print this special part of his remarks, just as he dared THE TRIBUNE to print his now celebrated midnight speech at Bloomington. Late returns from the Nelson newspaper shop were that the Cannon deliverance "runs flat."

"Uncle Joe" fairly belched smoke and flame when he flung aside his manuscript, which he had followed religiously, indicating even the quotation marks when he referred to remarks by William Jennings Bryan and other worthies.

The prepared address of Speaker Cannon was intended as a direct reply to the Marquette club speech of Senator Cummins, delivered early in the month in Chicago. It was the Bloomington speech reduced to cold and carefully deodorized and censored English.

The speech which goes out to the country is destitute of many of the Cannonesque trimmings, which made the Bloomington deliverance a thing of joy from the auditors' point of view.

Hits Cummins and La Follette.

"Uncle Joe" said that Cummins and La Follette had read themselves out of the Republican party and that neither he nor President Taft has officiated at the beheading of these two notable "so-called insurgents." He said he thought they are at one with William Jennings Bryan and less worthy of respect by the "blown-in-the-bottle" variety of Republicans than the element which backed George B. McClellan in 1864, Horace Greeley in 1872, or Grover Cleveland in the Blaine campaign. From what he said tonight, "Uncle Joe" does not favor issuing rain checks even to what he calls the "Chautauqua Republicans."

One spot which brought joy to the notable audience which heard the speaker during the didactic part of the Cannon speech was his amiable reference to Congressman Champ Clark, whom he called a liar by paraphrasing the "shorter and uglier word" copyright of a former president.

Before he started to read from his manuscript the speaker declared it was the second time in his life that he had been forced to do so.

"I do not whine," said he, "but I myself and the majority of the Republican party of the nation haven't been fairly voiced. The metropolitan newspapers have twisted, garbled, misquoted, and misrepresented what I have said. Therefore I shall cling to this manuscript to the dot."

He did so until he began to feel talkish.

Has Praise for Aldrich.

The speaker declared Senator Aldrich to be a great man and worthy of the confidence of the nation. He thought that the election of Whispering Bill Moxley was also a good thing for Aldrich.

While the speaker clung to his prepared address he was received with intense silence by the dinner guests. He knew he was in somewhat hostile territory, just on the border of out and out insurgent bailiwicks. He stuck to his text, which was a detailed exhibition of what a Republican congress had performed, a defense of the tariff, himself, and the rules of the house.

When the time came, however, for him to throw overboard the typewritten pages, impound the water pitcher and get into action, the speaker caught the crowd and he was heartily cheered.

Uncle Joe wound up in a blaze of glory by gazing with prophetic eye toward the close of the twentieth century when he sees New York, America's greatest city; Chicago a few wags behind, and Kansas City third in the list.

Agitation for Agitation's Sake.

"There is only one thing that can halt this confident move forward to give the country another era of prosperity such as we had from 1897 to 1907," said Mr. Cannon, "and that is agitation for the mere purpose of agitation, without any well conceived, healthy purpose in view.

"The senators and representatives who call themselves 'insurgents' and who voted against the enactment of the Payne bill voted to increase or maintain the duties on the industries and products of their own states and sections. They were protectionists for their own people, but they were opposed to protection for other people in other sections.

"Senator La Follette did not vote to increase the duties on lead and zinc, but he defended the finance committee's schedules on those products in speeches, saying they were not high enough; explaining, however, that he could not vote on the question because he said he had a personal pecuniary interest in the outcome.

How Insurgents Voted.

"Senators La Follette and Brislow and the other insurgents voted to increase the duty on barley and barley malt for the reason that their constituents produce barley. In other words, these gentlemen who call themselves 'insurgents' voted with the Republicans on schedules that protected their constituents and with the Democrats on schedules that protected the products of other sections of the country.

"That was their right, but when they voted with the Democrats against the final enactment of the bill they voted to maintain the old schedules of the Dingley law and were not supporting the pledge of the Republican platform or the pledges made by President Taft.

"There was not one member of the Republican majority who secured in the bill as enacted all that he had contended for. President Taft, Senator Aldrich, and myself all accepted more compromises than the so-called 'insurgents' were asked to accept.

Pays Respects to Cummins.

"Senator Cummins complains that I have read him out of the Republican party. Other sensitive gentlemen made the same complaint against President Taft. The senator does me too much honor. I have not the authority to read any man out, nor have I the disposition. I think I may say the same for the president.

"I have been a member of the Republican party since it was organized, and I never have known of any man or group of men being read out of any party except by themselves.

"Senator Cummins declares that the Payne law is a repudiation of the Chicago platform. President Taft, when he signed the bill, made a public statement, in which he said:

"'There have been a great number of real decreases in rates, and they constitute a sufficient amount to justify a statement that this bill is a substantial downward revision and a refutation of excessive rates.'

"Mr. Bryan wants the war against the Republicans who enacted this legislation to go on; Senator Cummins also wants it to go on. When Lincoln found an army marching on the national capital from the south and a body of sympathizers in the north encouraging that army he said it was difficult to determine which was the most threatening to the welfare of the nation.

Only Course Is to Fight.

"History repeats itself, and when Senators Cummins, La Follette, Bristow, and their so-called 'progressive' following join hands with Mr. Bryan in making war upon the Republican members of congress who passed the tariff bill, and upon the president who signed it, in that contest I know of but one way to treat them and that is to fight them just as we fight Mr. Bryan and his following.

"The men who found themselves in the minority in their own party and too much committed to their ideas to accept the will of the majority, heretofore have read themselves out of the parties to which they had formerly belonged. That was their right, and is the right of every man today.

"It is Senator Cummins' right and Senator La Follette's right, but manly men of all political views have in the past exercised that right openly and have not gone about in garments of martyrdom because they were not allowed to control the majority.

Hints at First "Insurgent."

"Ever since history began the man in the minority has been seeking some device by which he could overcome the will of the majority, and we have a popular if not absolutely reliable record of one celebrated character antedating history whose fiat was, 'Better to reign in hell than to serve in heaven.'

"These was our first great insurgent, and he was pitched over the battlements of heaven. Since the creation of man there have been those at work on earth to encourage insurrection against order, which is heaven's first law."

College Club Rehearsing New Version of Great Drama.

THRICE SPURNS THE CROWN.

Young Women of Several Schools in Cast; Play Today.

Cassius, for once in the history of the drama, is not to have a lean and hungry look. That is today, when he will be impersonated in the rooms of the College club by Miss Helen Shedd, daughter of John G. Shedd, head of Marshall Field & Co.

The play in which he will be portrayed along new lines is "Julius Cæsar," but by another playwright than Shakespeare. This twentieth century version of a great tragedy was conceived and executed by Miss Ona Williams, Smith college, and it is less serious than any other production to date.

In the later drama, for instance, Brutus, impersonated by Miss Helen Norris of the University of Chicago, soliloquizes to a star which hangs suspended from a gas burner, and the gist of his thought is expressed thus:

Hear that clock, don't you hear that clock!
It's striking three and we are very late.
Hear that cat, it am Cæsar's cat.
But they'll both be daid when next that clock strikes eight.

Setting More Shakspearean.

The stage setting more nearly follows the spirit of the Shakspearean times. It consists of nothing whatever except a painted sign saying "This is a battlefield," or something else really vivid.

The army which appeared on the plains of Philippi in dress rehearsal yesterday was amply equipped with washboiler lids, which the warriors managed dextrously to place between themselves and the opposing daggers of the enemy, which were men's walking canes.

One of the impressive scenes occurs when Marc Antony (Miss Nathalie Young of the University of Chicago) and Cæsar sing a duet over the crown which causes the great man so much subsequent trouble.

Crown Offered and Refused.

"Cæsar, great Cæsar," cries Marc, "wilt thou take this crown from me?" And he offers him the teaketile standard.

"Marcus, Marcus, that can never be." This is repeated in varying language until the crown has been thrice offered and thrice rejected.

The other young women in the cast are Miss Genevieve Burnham, Miss Virginia Elliott, and Miss Lucy Raymond of Smith college, Miss Laura Gibbs of Wellesley, Miss Alice Henkle of Bryn Mawr, and Miss Eleanor Hall of the University of Chicago.

PARISH FULL OF BITTERNESS OVER BABY CONTEST RESULT.

Policeman's Child Gets Most Votes at St. Agnes' Bazaar and Other Parents Are Up in Arms.

A baby contest in connection with a bazaar given by St. Agnes' Roman Catholic church, Thirty-ninth street and Washtenaw avenue, has resulted in such a bitterness of feeling among some of the parishioners that it will require all the tact of the Rev. N. J. Hitchcock, the pastor, to smooth matters.

George Edward Teeling, a 17 months old boy with big brown eyes, was awarded first prize in the beauty show yesterday. More than 13,000 votes were cast for him. There were twelve other babies, each of whom was declared by a fond mother to be the "prettiest child in the contest." The nearest competitor of the Teeling baby was a girl, who received about 10,000 votes.

The parents of the winner of the third prize refused to accept it, asserting that the "ballot box had been stuffed."

Mayor Busse donated a handsome brass bed and a bisque doll as the first prize. Young Mr. Teeling's father is a policeman at the Harrison street station. Parents of babies who failed to capture a prize declare that Teeling had the entire police force helping him.

PUBLISHES TAX TABLE RATE; LAKE VIEW IN THE LEAD.

County Clerk Haas' Figures Show Assessments for That District Is Greater than Other Valuations.

County Clerk Joseph F. Haas prepared a table of rates of real estate taxation yesterday, based on the work of the board of assessors, the board of review, and the state board of equalization.

Following is the table of rates to apply to each $100 assessed valuation, or one-third of the full value:

Town.	Total.
West Chicago	4.91
South Chicago	4.47
North Chicago	4.94
Hyde Park	4.47
Lake	4.47
Lake View	5.02
Jefferson	4.03

This table, although under a one-third assessed valuation, instead of the one-fifth valuation of last year, is said to vary but little from last year's taxation.

VIVISECTION CAUSES A WAR

Four Buildings on Rockefeller Estate Burned by Foes.

CLAIM CRUELTY IS RULE.

Neighbors Alleged That Dogs Are Victims of Inhuman Acts.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In the little settlement of Clyde, a few miles outside of New Brunswick, a serious war is raging between the anti-vivisectionists and the vivisectionists, the battlefield being the estate of John D. Rockefeller, on which is located the establishment for preparing dogs to be operated upon at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York. Already one large barn, three outbuildings, and a chicken house have been fired, and horses, cows, and fowl burned to death.

Sunday night a barn connected with the farm was set on fire by an incendiary and completely destroyed, only four horses and five cows from the large stock being saved. The next move in the campaign which now is expected nightly in the burning of the "hospital" itself. Why this building containing a hundred odd mongrels, has escaped so long is a mystery.

Watchmen Guard the Hospital.

In fact, so confident are the Rockefeller followers that the hospital will be attacked next that a guard of three watchmen has been posted about the place night and day.

To any one who is familiar with the hospital and has heard the half wild dogs howling constantly, the enmity to the institution is not difficult to understand. The dogs are picked up in city streets in half starved condition. They are shipped to the farm and nourished until they are pronounced fit to undergo an operation and then are laid open for the benefit of science. If they survive they are sewed up and sent back to the farm to recuperate. Many, it is said, become so vicious that they will fly at the wires of their cages when any one approaches.

Undergo a Second Operation.

When cured, it is said, they are carried back to the institute to undergo a second operation, this process being kept up so long as the dog lasts.

Many anti-vivisectionists have showed their resentment that such an institute should be allowed to be incorporated in New Jersey, which state has prohibited actual vivisection.

STOCK AND LAND SHOWS PARALLEL

A. G. Leonard Says Simultaneous Displays Are Great Educational Force.

STOCK FAIR OPENS TODAY

Six Classes of Horses Will Be Exhibited Tonight; 'Knights' Begin Tourney.

Arthur G. Leonard, vice president and general manager of the Union Stockyards and Transit company, yesterday saw a parallel in the missions of the international live stock exposition, which will open at the Union stockyards this morning and the great land exposition under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE at the Coliseum, which will run concurrently with the live stock show to Dec. 4.

Mr. Leonard said that both shows running in Chicago at the same time will constitute a university for quick and effective popular education in the worth of natural resources. He said that the expositions will instill economy into the mind of the husbandman by teaching him to accomplish more with intensive effort and with larger aggregate returns than he has been getting.

"THE TRIBUNE land show is one of the best things that ever has been evolved to push the development of this country and increase the welfare of this country's population," said Mr. Leonard.

Points to Parallel in Shows.

"It is of the utmost importance to the future prosperity of the country. THE TRIBUNE will be blessed by making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before. THE TRIBUNE is doing for land development what the live stock exposition has been doing for stock development.

"By the old methods it took from four to five years to fatten stock and mature it for market. The increase in the value of land and other self-evident factors would not admit of the old methods being continued.

"The stock show was instituted as a means of showing the stock raisers how to cope with conditions by feeding and maturing stock for market in from eighteen to thirty months. The show has exceeded our expectations along these educational lines. It was incorporated "not for profit" but purely for educational purposes.

"The organization of THE TRIBUNE'S land show along educational lines is bound to enhance the welfare and prosperity of the country. We have cities in the east which are densely populated, like Lowell, Lynn, and Fall River Massachusetts. Let us hope that in its scope the impetus given to life under natural conditions will be felt with visible results from coast to coast."

Belgium Honors A. H. Sanders.

Alvin H. Sanders, president of the Live Stock exposition, announced last night that he had just received through the Belgian ambassador at Washington from the king of Belgium the cross of the Chevalier of the Order of Leopold, bestowed as an evidence of his majesty's appreciation of the great work accomplished through the international exposition in the matter of promoting interest in scientific stock breeding, as well as in furthering international trade in farm products.

As the decoration was bestowed on Mr. Sanders before President Taft appointed him a member of the tariff board, he was in a position to accept it.

Mr. Sanders and his colleagues on the board—Prof. H. C. Emery of Yale university and James B. Reynolds, former assistant secretary of the treasury—will be in Chicago the first of the week on business connected with the investigations regarding alleged discriminations against American cattle and meats in various foreign markets. They will inquire into the work of the government inspection service at the yards.

Horses to Be Shown Tonight.

There are 9,000 exhibits in the show, ranging from the tiny bleating Shropshire lamb to the massive Hereford bull and from the blunt faced Duroc Jersey swine to the ponderous Clydesdale, Percheron, and Belgian draffers.

Tonight six classes of horses will be shown, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. These include the women's saddles and three harness classes. As soon as the ring has been cleared after the awards in these events one of the inovations will be given its premiere. The "merrie knights of King Arthur" will engage in a jousting tourney, in which Col. G. B. Van Norman (King Arthur) and his sir knights will be the participants.

STANDARD GETS NEW COMPANY

North Fork Oil Property Purchased by Corporation for the Sum of $1,250,000.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 26.—J. W. Crawford, president of the North Fork Oil company, returned home today from Chicago and announced the sale of the company's property in the Illinois oil field to the Ohio Oil company, a branch of the Standard Oil company, for $1,250,000.

DE VRY COVETS OSTRICHES

Wants the Big Land Show Birds for Zoo at Lincoln Park.

TRAINS WRECKED BY A CAT.

Arizona to Supply the United States with Egyptian Cotton.

"The finest pair of ostriches I ever laid eyes on," announced Cy De Vry, the Lincoln park animal keeper, as he stood yesterday in front of the Arizona exhibit at the great land show under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE at the Coliseum. Then Cy made it known that when the land show ends on Dec. 4 he would enjoy seeing those ostriches driven up to Lincoln park and safely housed for the pleasure and instruction of those who would like to renew acquaintance with the land show ostriches at their convenience. An hour later Cy admitted negotiations for marooning the ostriches in Chicago were in progress. And there the matter stands.

In the meantime Chicagoans have eight more days in which to make sure of seeing the big birds and the other equally interesting things in the great exposition, which experts believe will go far toward equalizing the density of population in the farming districts of the United States and will double the price of land in many places within a few months.

Trains Wrecked in Tunnel.

There was one railroad accident at the land show during the afternoon. A big black cat came out of the basement of the Coliseum, walked over to the Harriman railroad display, and then trudged across the papier maché territory of Oregon to the tunnel through which pass the miniature trains running in opposite directions on parallel tracks.

Mr. Black Cat thought he would walk through the tunnel to see what the state of California looked like in papier maché. He failed to notice a train coming behind him on one track and the electric light of an onrushing engine on the other track as he pulled himself into the tunnel. Mr. Cat was struck simultaneously by the trains, but from opposite points of attack.

The two trains were piled up in wrecks, to the dismay of the admirers of the display, and from the black mouth of the tunnel came feline yowls of pain that could be heard all over the Coliseum. Brobdingnagian electricians climbed into the inclosure and straightened out the wreck, incidentally releasing Mr. Cat, who limped away, the recipient of more attention than usually falls to a stray cat at a big exposition.

When you go down to the land show again ask S. E. Epler of Yuma, Ariz., to give you an idea of how Arizona is on the way towards supplying Egyptian cotton to the United States in quantities that will make it unnecessary to maintain the annual importation, amounting to $16,000,000. Mr. Epler has government samples of woven material made from the Arizona cotton which passed the highest grade test for Egyptian cotton. He believes the Yuma district will keep $16,000,000 a year in the United States. Only 100,000 acres of the proper land, he said, is necessary to supply the American market for Egyptian cotton, and Arizona has it. The Arizona cotton has sold for 22 cents a pound in the Boston cotton market.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Hutchings of Battle's Wharf, Baldwin county, Ala., have a display that is rich in interest, and they will tell you that if the big show becomes an annual feature—as they hope it will—they will be back again next time to occupy a bigger space.

Mr. Hutchings, who owns the Bench hotel on Mobile bay, includes in the exhibit some of his wife's orange marmalade—a product which even Scotchmen have been forced to admit is equal to any marmalade ever made in Dundee.

Tells of Alabama Wonders.

"We picked the oranges right back of the house," said Mr. Hutchings. "As for our Satsuma oranges, here is a sample. These long roots are cassava. They are used for making tapioca, but in Alabama the cassava has become one of the greatest of stock foods. It will fatten pigs faster than anything else I know of.

"These Ponderosa lemons grow as big as two and a half pounds each, and one of them will make a bucket of lemonade," continued Mr. Hutchings, "displaying an enormous lemon. "These velvet beans are a great soil crop. As for Japanese persimmons, Baldwin county is ready for all comers. Pecan nuts and grape fruit are great money makers down there. Irish potatoes can be grown in seventy days—two crops a year. We can grow from 250 to 300 bushels of sweet potatoes an acre. Native crab grass brings $18 a ton. Of course we have peppers, squashes, and watermelons galore. If you doubt that our cigar wrappers are the best, try some of these cigars."

Mr. Hutchings displayed awards showing that Baldwin county had won first prize at the Alabama state fair and first prize at a recent big exhibit of southern products at Pensacola, Fla. The existing exhibit in Chicago explains the reason why.

BOARDS TO UNITE IN MINE INQUIRY

State Commission and Inspectors Decide on Joint Investigation.

WILL MEET IN CAPITAL.

Hearings at Cherry Next and Then Follow Sessions in Chicago.

After much preliminary investigation on the ground, the state mine investigating commission laid plans for an immediate and thorough inquiry into the Cherry disaster at a meeting held yesterday in the Fisher building. The commission, with only one of the nine members absent, decided to coöperate in an investigation with the state mine inspectors.

The commission will send three representatives to the meeting of the inspectors, which will be held at Springfield next Monday. The joint investigation will follow the meeting.

The members of the state commission who will attend the Springfield meeting are Richard Newsam, chairman and representing the coal operators, John H. Walker, representing the miners, and Prof. H. H. Stoek of the University of Illinois, representing the independent section of the commission.

The meeting yesterday was held behind closed doors, after the commission had established permanent headquarters in room 1417 of the Fisher building. A synopsis of the result of the day's conference was given at night by Prof. Graham Taylor as a member of the publicity committee.

Agree on Joint Inquiry.

"The first steps for a thorough investigation of the disaster were taken," he said. "The commission decided to be represented by a committee at the meeting of the mine inspectors. Inspector James Taylor appeared before the commission and invited our attendance at the Springfield meeting. The subcommittee was authorized to agree with the inspectors on a plan for an immediate joint investigation.

"Our commission will take an independent stenographic record of all testimony and we also will take a record of all evidence presented to the coroner's jury.

"Under the act authorizing the appointment of the commission we are given broad powers. Dr. J. A. Holmes of the United States geological survey, Washington, D. C., is preparing a digest of the various state mining laws relating to ventilation, fire protection, and separation of shafts, and this will be a valuable contribution to our work. The investigation should begin immediately after the joint meeting in Springfield next Monday."

May Return to Cherry.

Other members of the commission were as emphatic as to the need for an immediate and far-reaching inquiry.

"We are going to bare the whole Cherry mine situation," said Chairman Newsam. "It is probable we will go to Cherry and hear testimony there. I believe I know the cause of the disaster well enough, but I cannot state so publicly."

The commission adjourned subject to call by the members of the subcommittee who will attend the inspectors' meeting at Springfield. It is probable that the next meeting will be at Cherry the middle of next week.

LIMITS MUSEUM SITE DECREE; CHECKS MONTGOMERY WARD.

Judge Dupuy Rules That in Injunction There Shall Be No Prejudice to Condemnation Proceedings.

Judge Dupuy declined yesterday to allow anything prejudicial to the proposed condemnation proceedings to be incorporated in the decree which he will issue permanently enjoining the trustees of the Field museum and the south park commissioners from erecting a building for the museum in Grant park.

Attorney George P. Merrick, acting for Montgomery Ward, tried hard to get something in the decree, which will be issued in conformation with the finding of the Supreme court, touching upon the right of the commissioners to institute condemnation proceedings in order to secure the coveted site for the museum, but Judge Dupuy ruled against him.

The question of condemning the adjoining property for the purpose of acquiring a place in Grant park for the museum has not been brought to the attention of the Supreme court in any manner, and Judge Dupuy declared that it was not his intention to interpolate anything in the forthcoming decree, or to make it any broader than the order of the higher court.

The decree will be drawn up by Attorney Merrick according to the suggestions made by Judge Dupuy, leaving out all reference to possible condemnation, and will probably be signed by the judge on Monday.

OPEN NEW PHYSICS BUILDING.

Gov. Deneen Presents $250,000 Structure at University of Illinois to Board of Trustees.

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In behalf of the state Gov. Deneen today presented the new physics building of the University of Illinois to the board of trustees. The building was dedicated in the presence of many invited guests, including distinguished physicists here for the meeting of the American Physical society tomorrow.

"The importance of a practical education is emphasized and recognized in this building," said Gov. Deneen. "The subjects taught here probably will make a stronger appeal to the American citizen than would any others."

President James of the university said the dedication marked an epoch, in that the building represented the largest sum the legislature ever had granted for a single building at the state university.

"It represents a permanent style of building, fireproof, massive, worthy of the state," said Mr. James. "I hope the legislature will enable us to follow this method of construction in other buildings."

The building was accepted for the trustees by W. L. Abbott of Chicago, president of the board, while Prof. Carman responded for the department of physics. The legislature appropriated $250,000 for the building.

ROOSEVELT PRAISE TO PEARY.

Former President Says He Is Glad American Succeeded in Reaching the North Pole.

New York, Nov. 26.—A letter from Theodore Roosevelt was received by Secretary Bridgman of the Peary Arctic club today, replying to the cable announcing that Commander Peary had reached the north pole, as follows:

"Your cable has just been brought me by a native runner here in my camp by the Guaso Nyiro. I am writing to Mrs. Peary and to Commander Peary. I have no idea where he is.

"I am inexpressibly rejoiced at his wonderful triumph, and proud beyond measure, as an American, that this—one of the great feats of the ages—should have been performed by a fellow countryman of ours. It is the great feat of our generation. We are Commander Peary's debtors, all of us who belong to civilized mankind.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Bedford Strike Still Growing.

Bedford, Ind., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Following the posting of notice of a temporary injunction issued by Judge J. E. Wilson against the general union stone cutters on an application of the stone operators, the men employed at the Bradley and the Bedford steam stone works walked out today.

CHERRY FUND AT HIGH MARK

Nearly $70,000 Contributed for Relief of Mine Sufferers.

MANY CHURCHES GIVE AID.

Collections Taken Up Thanksgiving Day Throughout State.

Despite the apathy that usually follows a gastronomic holiday, the Cherry relief fund continued to gain noticeably and now is near the $70,000 mark. THE TRIBUNE fund shows a total of $32,617.51 and the Red Cross headquarters reported $30,481.09 yesterday afternoon. Other sources have more than $5,000 to their credit.

The benefit organized by the Theatrical Managers' association, to be held at the Auditorium Tuesday afternoon, is expected to net about $4,700 for the relief cause. The seats were placed on sale during the day and the receipts were $2,200, including $900 in mail orders. Stars from all the leading companies in the city will appear and the performance will be a long one.

James Edgar Brown, gave a stereoptiqon lecture last night at Association hall, Central Y. M. C. A., to aid the miners' families. As tickets were placed on sale in many sections of the city, the total receipts will not be known until today.

Owing to meager attendance the benefit recital prepared by the Up-to-Date club at Handel hall was postponed until Dec. 10.

The choir boys of the Church of the Holy Communion, Maywood, will present a play, "The Toastmaster," a college comedy in three acts, for the benefit of the Cherry relief fund, this evening at Nichols Memorial hall, Fifth avenue and Second streets, in Maywood.

Churches Announce Collections.

Following the example of the First church, the remaining Christian Science congregations of Chicago will take up a special collection for the Cherry fund tomorrow. Last Sunday the First church contributed $325 and the Sunday school $50 additional.

Many downstate churches aided the fund Thanksgiving day, including the La Hogue M. E. church, Custer Park Baptist of Wilmington, Presbyterian of Homer, Evangelical of Sherrard, M. E. of Buda, Grace English Lutheran of Rock Island, Fairfield Presbyterian of Broadlands, Baptist and Methodist of Filmore, and Cote Brilliante Presbyterian of St. Louis, Mo. General funds from Fairbury, Kewanee, Ivesdale, Tiskilwa, Macomb, Kirkwood, and Metamora, Ill., Allegan, Mich., and Madison, Wis., were among other donations, while Medinah temple, Mystic Shrine, sent $250.

The Illinois Training School for Nurses gave $35 and the Woodlawn and Pullman teams of the Association Football league of Chicago contributed $25, and the Ripmore football eleven $16. Local 10096 of the Sewer and Tunnel Miners' association turned over $200 to Ald. Otto J. Novak of the Eleventh ward yesterday as custodian of the council Cherry fund.

Gil Barnard commandery No. 7, Knights Templar, has donated ten outfits for infants and will send them immediately. Director Ernest P. Bicknell of the Red Cross wiring his approval of the gift.

THE TRIBUNE through the kindness of its readers was enabled during the day to ship Mr. Bicknell five cases and six boxes of clothing for the women and children of Cherry in particular, although male outfits have also been included.

Donations of Clothing.

Other readers who have donated clothing, which has been collected by Brink's express, are as follows:

Mrs. L. Hardy, 138 West Chestnut street.
Donor club, 5000 Grand boulevard.
Junior Auxiliary society of St. Simon's mission.

She has studied extensively in music and literature and modern languages and is a member of the Alliance Française and the Intercollegiate and Vassar Alumnæ associations of this city.

Union Chiefs Are Coming to Force Followers to Leave the Ex-Czar.

MEET WITH BILLPOSTERS

Theater Managers Receive Strikers' Demands; Reply on Tuesday.

Action to force a number of numerically strong labor organizations now allied with ex-labor czar Martin B. ("Skinny") Madden's Associated Building Trades into the new Building Trades council of the American Federation of Labor will be taken in Chicago next Monday.

President James Kirby, Secretary W. J. Spencer, and the members of the executive board of the Federation's building trades department, and other union heads, are scheduled to arrive here then for a series of conferences on the subject with national and international officers of the unions involved. Headquarters will be established at the Briggs house.

The principal unions involved are the painters, paperhangers and decorators, plumbers, lathers, and electrical workers. Whatever decisions are reached will affect nearly 15,000 men. These unions, with the exception of the painters, have been Madden's strongest supporters all through the time made on the ex-labor czar during the last year.

Painters Split Over Madden.

In the case of the painters a split occurred over the fight on "Skinny," resulting in more than half of the membership of 8,000 in that organization going over to the new Building Trades council.

It is likely that a final decision in the case of the painters still outside the fold will be held in abeyance pending action by the annual convention of the union to be held in Cincinnati on Dec. 6.

Unless the local officers of the unions involved show a disposition to come to terms, it is declared, action will be taken to revoke their charters. Adjustment of the trouble to the satisfaction of the building trades chiefs will mean practically the extinction of Madden's once powerful central body.

Bill Posters Meet Managers.

A demand that the theaters in the loop district, except the Garrick, which has signed with the union, reopen their billing departments and post their own bills under the conditions that prevailed prior to the strike was made by a committee of striking bill posters at a meeting held yesterday afternoon at the office of Sol Litt in the McVicker Theater building.

The strikers also restated their demands for an increase in wages from $15 to $18 a week and from $18 to $21 a week for foremen. Harry J. Powers and Sam Lederer were among the managers present. The theater men promised to lay the matter before the Chicago Theater Managers' association next Monday and give an answer to the strikers by Tuesday noon.

FIGHT BANDITS IN FOG; 1 SLAIN; DEPUTY BADLY HURT IN CLASH

Minnesota Pair Rob Bank and Flee on Speeder—Officers Halt Them at Bridge—Battle Ensues.

Bemidji, Minn., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In an early morning fog Sheriff Hazen, Deputy Johnson, and Patrolman Bener halted at a bridge two bank robbers escaping on a railroad speeder from Puposky, Minn., where they had blown open a bank about midnight.

In the fight which ensued Johnson was critically injured, one robber, supposed to be Jim Smith, was killed, and the second bandit was driven from the machine into the wilderness north of here, pursued by a posse, which grew larger as the chase continued.

Word was sent from Puposky to Bemidji by telephone at 3 a. m. today that the safe in a bank there had been opened and $900 stolen. The robbers stole a speeder and were coming toward Bemidji. Bener, Hazen, and Johnson rushed to the Great Northern overhead bridge one mile west of Bemidji and waited for the thieves.

The two men came down the track on the speeder to within 200 feet of the bridge. Johnson commanded them to halt.

He was answered by a shot. The ball struck Johnson, who fell unconscious.

The other man shot at Hazen, barely missing his head. Bener yelled to his companions to lie low and began shooting at the robbers. On the fourth shot from Bener's rifle one of the men pitched headforemost off the grade and never moved again. Bener continued shooting at the uninjured robber, who had gotten 300 yards away. In the fog he escaped.

I tell you that, whether they want the vote or not, they should have it if they need it.

"There are countless incidents every day which show that men have not done what they should to care for the women. Even though their aims and purposes may have been for the welfare of women, still, at the same time, they have been led by their own selfish interests to forget what woman needs and what woman ought to have.

"Do you know that even the clothes a woman wears in England belong to her husband? His creditors may take her clothes off her back.

"You say that conditions are not so bad here. Just let me tell you that in some of your states there is no protection for a girl after she has reached 10 years of age.

"This is simply a great awakening for women. It is a movement to lift them to a high plane of intelligence, to make them more the equal and the helpmates of men."

Masculine Friends Attend.

Prof. Louis J. Block, a member of the Men's Equal Suffrage league of Chicago, presided at the meeting, and fifty members of the organization sat beside Mrs. Pankhurst on the platform.

Following the address Mrs. Pankhurst's friends held an informal reception for her in the lobby of Orchestra hall.

A petition to the United States senate and house of representatives asking that constitutional amendment permitting votes for women be handed down to the state legislatures for ratification was circulated for signatures by the following young women of the University of Chicago:

Misses Gertrude Binke, Margaret Campbell, Winifred Cooley, Caroline Eberhardt, Dorothy Hinman, Millita Magaret, Margaret Meyer, Minnie Stewart, and Mary Tinny.

MEDICAL MEN, IN JOURNAL, ATTACK CONGRESSMAN MANN.

Declare Bill Substituting Bureau System for Single Head Sanitation Department Will Hurt Panama Health.

The American Medical association has sounded the tocsin for the defense of sanitation in Panama, and, incidentally, the target for the fusillade of the physicians of the country is Congressman James R. Mann of the Second Illinois district.

The Journal in its issue today will attack house bill 5155, fathered by the Hyde Park congressman, as "an old legislative ruse and one that is obviously brought into requisition at this time for the same old purpose of putting the country to sleep while a measure to which the people would naturally object is quietly rushed through congress."

The Journal claims the bill is an attempt to degrade the sanitary department at the canal zone by failing to provide for its head and making the entire system subordinate to a director, chief engineer, and governor.

In closing its argument, the Journal editorial says:

"It may be asserted without fear of successful contradiction that nothing has so contributed to public confidence in the ultimate success of the canal as the achievemnets of its sanitary department.

"The American people now demand that that department be left with freedom of action, that its efficiency be promoted rather than hampered."

CHARGES JUVENILE COURT TURNED AWAY TWO VISITORS.

William H. Dunn, Who Criticises Present System, Says Citizens Were Refused Admission to Hearing.

William H. Dunn of the Dunn Manufacturing company, 35 Dearborn street, who has begun an agitation in opposition to the Juvenile court system of disposing of dependent children, charges that two citizens were denied admission to the Juvenile court yesterday. The two citizens were John Navigato, a banker, and James Bryan, an assistant superintendent for the Prudential Insurance company.

"These two men visited the Juvenile court," said Mr. Dunn, "for the purpose of observing the method of dealing with dependent children. They were denied admission to the court."

"We were informed by a man at the door," said Mr. Bryan, "that he could not enter unless we were directly interested in a case that was being heard."

Judge Merritt W. Pinckney, who presides over the Juvenile court, expressed a view of the matter directly opposite to that voiced by Mr. Dunn.

"The Juvenile court always is open to the public," said Judge Pinckney. "If the citizens named by Mr. Dunn were denied admission it was probably due to the fact that the courtroom was crowded to its capacity."

DR. H. W. ALLPORT FINED $10 FOR HINDERING A POLICEMAN.

State Street Physician Accused of Interfering When Effort Was Being Made to Take a Friend to Station.

Dr. Henry W. Allport, with offices at 100 State street, was fined $10 and costs yesterday in the Woodlawn Municipal court for interfering with Policeman Herman Lewis when he was attempting to arrest Victor I. Ohrenstein, an attorney, for alleged disorderly conduct in front of a theater at 533 East Fifty-fifth street Thanksgiving afternoon.

Ohrenstein accused Lewis of having offended his wife and daughter and fought with the policeman when the latter refused to tell his name or star number. His hearing was postponed.

"I stood Lewis on his head," said Ohrenstein, "but assistance reached him and I had to go to the station. Dr. Allport suggested that my action had been justified, and for that he was arrested."

The policeman told Judge Fry that Allport's "suggestions" had taken the form of physical violence.

UNCLE SAM SENDS ANOTHER GUNBOAT

Princeton Is Ordered to Join Vicksburg at Corinto, Nicaragua.

ZELAYA CUTS THE WIRES.

State Department Awaits Report from the Vice Consul at Managua.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—The gunboat Princeton today was ordered by the navy department to sail for Corinto, Nicaragua, to join the gunboat Vicksburg, already at that port. The Princeton is now at the Bremerton navy yard, Washington, undergoing repairs.

Some time ago it was arranged that the Princeton should relieve the Vicksburg on the western coast of Central America, and it is in conformity with this plan that the Princeton is now ordered to Nicaragua.

The Vicksburg, however, will remain at Corinto or the immediate vicinity until peace in Nicaragua has been restored.

U. S. Anxious for Report.

The state department is still without information from the American vice consul at Managua, Mr. Caldera, and the strong inference is that his dispatches have been intercepted by the Nicaraguan officials under President Zelaya, at least to the extent of cutting the telegraph wires.

The department has no doubt that Mr. Caldera has attempted to communicate with it several times during the last week or more.

Owing to the absence of specific information, which was sought to be obtained through Vice Consul Caldera and other agencies, the officials here undoubtedly will delay at least for a time before taking furthe. action.

American Interests Safe.

A dispatch received from Bluefields reassures the United States as to whether American interests or American citizens are being interfered with by the revolutionary army.

In effect the dispatch states that gerat care is being exercised to protect American interests.

CHICAGO COMPANY IS LIKELY TO FURNISH TURKEY PHONES.

Ottoman Commission Favors Tender of British-French-American Group for System in Constantinople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 26.—A commission which has been making investigations with the object of obtaining a telephone service for Constantinople has decided in favor of accepting the tender of a British, French, and American group, which desires to install the system.

This group includes the Western Electric company of Chicago. It is expected that the government will confirm the decision of the commission.

INTEREST IN CHICAGO.

Interest was shown in Chicago yesterday in the announcement contained in the above dispatch. The telephone equipment probably will be furnished by the Western Electric company of Chicago.

The announcement was regarded as an indication of the progressive spirit of the new Young Turk government. Capital necessary will be furnished by the British, French, and American group of capitalists, who have been in negotiation with the Constantinople commission for several months, and the commission has carried on an extensive investigation of the merits of various systems of equipment.

"I know little about the Turkish negotiations relative to a telephone system for Constantinople," said E. M. Parton, chairman of the board of directors of the Western Electric company. "I should say, however, that if the government of that city and the national Turkish government finally decide to allow the installation of a telephone system, they will want the Western Electric equipment, which is the standard equipment the world over.

"That is what I believe the dispatch means. I haven't the slightest idea who the three groups of capitalists are who will furnish the money for the enterprise. The commission, I take it, has investigated the Western Electric equipment of Paris, Vienna, Budapest, Bucharest ,and of Italian, Belgian, and English cities and found it just what was wanted in Constantinople."

EDWARD VII. AS CHILE ARBITER.

American Charge d'Affaires Proposes That Alsop Claim Be Put Up to King.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 26.—William Pierrepont, the American charge d'affaires, today made a proposal to the Chilean government that the Alsop claim, in dispute between Chile and the United States, be submitted to the arbitration of King Edward, who is friendly to both sides.

WASHINGTON IS SILENT.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—While no expression of opinion could be obtained here tonight on the proposed selection of King Edward as arbitrator in the Alsop claim, it is generally understood that the state department will welcome any move that will bring about an adjudication of the vexed question.

The claim, which involves more than $1,000,000, has been held against Chile for over thirty-five years. It is based on concessions made by the Bolivian government to a syndicate of Americans.

The concessions covered territory then part of Bolivia's domain, but in the war between Bolivia and Chile this territory was lost to Bolivia. In the ending of the war Chile bound itself to recognize the concessionaires' rights, but this has not been done.

INQUIRES INTO PERIN'S LIFE.

American Consul at Melaga Investigates Conduct of Man Whose Wife Killed Self.

MADRID, Nov. 26.—Edward J. Norton, American consul at Malaga, arrived at Ronda today to look into the case of Lawrence Perin of Baltimore, concerning whose behavior at that place startling reports are current. Perin is the American who went to Ronda recently with the avowed intention of erecting there a memorial to his wife, who committed suicide at Harrow, England, last September.

Now come reports that Perin is acting strangely and according to one story he has attempted to take his life. One dispatch from Ronda today says that Perin is proceeding to Morocco under surveillance.

CHICAGO WOMAN FELLS MOOSE

Mrs. H. B. Parker Saves Two Lives by Shooting Animal.

INDIAN GUIDE UP A TREE.

Dramatic Tale of Adventure in Minnesota Woods.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. H. B. Parker of Chicago, who is said to be considered one of the best rifle shots in Illinois, saved her husband and their Indian guide from death beneath the pounding hoofs and antlers of a charging giant moose. The story was told when she and her husband returned here today from her first hunt in the northern Minnesota woods.

Through floating bogs and across hard portages, and often through interlaced cedar swamps, Mrs. Parker held her way with the Indian guide and her husband. She helped carry the packs, and sometimes assisted in taking the heavy canoe overland.

Parker had spent several falls in the northern woods, and this year decided to go to Cook county to hunt.

Headed for Sucker Lake Camp.

It was Parker's intention to pitch camp near Sucker lake, toward the headwaters of Poplar river. It was a long journey. Most of the way was covered by canoe, but there were hard portages. At Luteen the hunters hired John Beargrease, old Indian guide, who knows every foot of the country in Cook county.

After four days the party reached the northern end of the lake. That night they rested, for old Beargrease had seen fresh moose tracks near the shack and declared big animals were in the vicinity.

At daybreak the Indian went to the lake for a pail of water. He heard a sudden crashing of the underbrush in the rear. Glancing up, he saw the head of a huge moose towering above him. The animal's blood red eyes flashed; its nostrils were distended. Beargrease knew what these signs meant. The moose had fight in its eyes. The old Indian yelled for Parker. Beargrease was armed with nothing but a stout hunting knife.

Parker Dashes to Rescue.

Parker, without waiting to pick up a gun, dashed to the shore. The yelling of the Indian in front of him and the crackling of the brush behind, caused the moose to waver a few seconds. This was long enough to allow Beargrease to clamber to shore. Then, with a roar, the moose charged. The Indian climbed up a tree. The moose struck the trunk with such force that Beargrease almost was dislodged.

Parker came up at this point. Leaving the Indian up the tree, the moose turned its attention to the white man. Parker turned and fled for the camp. The commotion was heard by Mrs. Parker, who went to see what was the trouble, taking her rifle. She saw her husband plunging through the brush, with the moose behind and gaining fast.

Mrs. Parker Fires at Sight.

Without waiting for instructions, Mrs. Parker fired. The moose halted for a second and then lurched forward again. Another shot and the animal dropped.

Beargrease then took Mrs. Parker's rifle and killed the moose. Then the carcass was dragged back to camp.

On the return journey Parker fell in a floating bog while making a portage, but was saved by shoving the boat out over the swamp. The party was compelled to camp without bedding two nights.

HORSEMAN, HIT BY AUTO, DIES

James Howard, Noted as Handicapper, Succumbs to Injuries.

NEVER BET DOLLAR ON RACE

He Was Secretary of the Old Washington Park Club.

James Howard, the veteran handicapper and secretary of the former Washington Park club, died this morning at 12:20 o'clock at Grace hospital from injuries received in an automobile accident Wednesday afternoon.

He was run over at La Salle street in front of the Rookery building by a machine driven by Charles Gilbert, and owned by the Walden-Shaw Automobile company. One of his legs was broken, a rib was fractured, and he was injured internally.

Mr. Howard was known to racetrack men from coast to coast. He was one of the incorporators of Washington Park club, and throughout the entire history of the famous course his name was associated closely with it.

He became its secretary and official handicapper in 1884 and retained the post until the track passed into history with the closing of racing in Chicago.

In the subsequent division of the property into building lots Mr. Howard realized an additional premium on his stock holdings, and it is believed that his estate is large.

In spite of his rank as a sporting authority on running horses, and of his skill as a handicapper, he never bet a dollar on a Washington park race, not even on the annual Derby contests.

He was a man of education and an amateur naturalist of note.

Personally, he was the embodiment of nervous energy, and no one who saw him dancing literally around the office at the race course ever forgot his briskness. In spite, however, of his energetic manners, he was a man of a kind heart and his popularity was great.

Before coming to Chicago in 1884 he was a resident of California, where for a time he had interests in the trotting horse industry. He was 59 years old.

He was married twice and survived both wives. A son, Roland H. Howard, lives in California. A daughter, Miss Juanita Howard, resided with him at 5830 Prairie avenue.

Funeral arrangements have not been made.

INSANE OVER AUTO WRECK.

Man Who Was Driving Machine at Time of Crash That Caused Three Deaths Taken to Sanitarium.

Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The results which followed the "joy ride" in which an automobile crashed into a tree at West Springfield a week ago have made a madman of J. Lewis Perkins, who was driving the machine at the time of the crash. Perkins has been removed to a sanitarium.

He became insane when he heard of the third death from the accident, that of John Chadwick. The other two to lose their lives were J. Otto Dreikon and Joseph La Liberte. W. B. Reid, whose skull was fractured, has been brought home to Holyoke from the Springfield hospital. The doctors say he has a slight chance of recovery.

WIFE IS SUICIDE; POLICE HUNT MAN

Frank Adams, Broker of Indianapolis, Is Accused of Being a Bigamist.

ONCE A MUSIC TEACHER.

Woman Who Claimed to Have Married Him First Exposes Life by Inquiry.

Logansport, Ind., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—An attempt is being made to locate Frank R. Adams, politician and broker of Indianapolis, warrants having been issued here for his arrest on a charge of bigamy.

The warrant, which was sent by the sheriff of this county to officers at Chattanooga, Tenn., has been returned, the latter officials having found that Adams, who has an office there, had left for some place in the west.

The warrant was the result of charges preferred by Mrs. Robert Radabaugh of Logansport, mother of Lizzie Wooster, who committed suicide in Indianapolis after, it is alleged, she discovered she was the second wife of Adams. The complaint charges that Adams had previously married Anna F. Rice at Boston in 1885 and never had been divorced previous to his marriage to Miss Wooster.

The woman who claims to be the first wife of Adams now lives at Delaware, O. When news of Adams' second wife's suicide reached Delaware this woman called his club by long distance phone for details.

Adams Once Taught Music.

Adams studied music at Boston and later was a member of the faculty of the school of music of Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware. According to information filed here, he met Miss Rice and married her in 1885.

At the time Miss Wooster met Adams she was waitress in a local hotel. The couple went to Indianapolis to live, taking an apartment in the Pasadena building. While entertaining several women Mrs. Adams received a telephone call from a traveling man, who is supposed to have told her of Adams' alleged former marriage. She stabbed herself in the heart before the other women could interfere.

At the time of the suicide Adams' friends insisted that the Delaware woman was mistaken in believing she was his wife. Adams disappeared soon after and efforts to locate him since have failed.

First Wife Is Silent.

Delaware, O., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Anna Adams tonight refused absolutely to talk of the charges against her husband. She admitted, however, that she had recently seen her husband, but would not give his present address. The identity of Adams was established by a photograph published in a newspaper.

A man visited this city last week and paid a local bank $5,000 on a note given by Adams.

Mrs. Adams, previous to her marriage to Adams, was the wife of a man named Rice, whose home is now in Chicago. There appears to have been a separation between Adams and his wife here. Mrs. Adams has indicated she will take no part in the prosecution against her husband.

Family Cannot Locate Him.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Frank R. Adams is a son of J. W. Adams, a contractor, and brother of George Adams, an attorney. He is about 45 years of age. It is stated by a member of the family that Frank Adams has not made Chattanooga his home for many years and has not been in Chattanooga on a visit for a year. It is said the family had received information that Frank Adams had some trouble over a marriage.

It is said that Frank Adams is somewhere in the west, but his whereabouts are unknown by the family. The warrant for Adams' arrest was returned to Logansport after the failure to locate Adams in Chattanooga.

First Message Is Confirmed.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 26.—The records in the office of the city registrar of Boston show that Frank R. Adams was married to Anna F. Rice in this city in 1885. Nothing further is known here concerning either Adams or his wife.

BOYS BUMP STEINS TO U. H. S.

Celebrate Football Success in Spirit of "Bohemians."

SING AND IGNORE FACULTY.

Professors' Protests Forgotten When Beer Begins to Flow.

Despite faculty protests and like real college boys, according to common acceptance, the boy students of the University High school celebrated the successful close of the football season last night.

The celebration consisted of a "theater" night at the Majestic and a subsequent bohemian supper at the States restaurant. The attendance in a body at a theater and its accompanying ebullition of cheers is a fixed custom and rash, indeed, would be any faculty that would place it under the ban. But the midnight supper and its bohemian attributes the University High school faculty objected to, and the objections were expressed pointedly at chapel several days ago by Dean F. S. Johnson.

The theater night was a great success in point of noise. There were school yells and class slogans galore. The boxes, which were delegated to the girl students and their chaperons, were decorated with school colors and a big banner labeled "U. H. S." hung from the back stage drop. If any one in the audience didn't know what the letters stood for, a chance announcement by an actor from the stage might have enlightened him.

Meaning of U. H. S.

"If you don't understand the letters, I will tell you what they mean," the bold actor said. "They mean 'You here, Sonny?'"

But the theater performance really wasn't so much. You see, the faculty didn't disapprove of it, but it did of the supper. So at the close of the performance, a crowd of a hundred gathered and made a rush for the States restaurant. Tables had been reserved, and, settled in their seats, the near-collegians threw back their coats—sans waistcoats, by the way, for that needless article is calculated to dim the splendor of one's fraternity pin gleaming on a starched bosom—and prepared to bid defiance to their preceptors.

The first thing, of course, was to order brimming steins of beer and to bring out cigaret cases. One really can't be a collegian and show proper contempt for the faculty, you know, without drinking beer and smoking.

Where beer was distasteful, highballs and gin rickeys were substituted. With every draft of beer and every exhalation of smoke, contempt was proved to faculty orders and fellowship rose a notch.

The beer made everybody happy and festive games like bread throwing and pounding of glasses and plates followed. The vaudeville performers were cheered and the students joined lustily in the choruses. There were a few timid ones who didn't join in the beer drinking—or perhaps because three or four of the bolder girl students had accompanied their boy escort for the supper.

More Merriment, Also Beer.

But, anyway, the dinner went to a close with ever increasing merriment and ever renewed steins of beer until every one was satisfied that the faculty had been properly "shown" and until the last number on the program and the last school yell and song had been given. Then the future collegians thought it was time to adjourn, there being nothing else to do, for another year. By that time the faculty may be educated and may realize that young men and women are not to be ordered to do this or not to do that—and the dinner will have become the regular thing, perhaps.

DEATH IN HEADACHE POWDERS.

Coroner Investigating Tragedy in Philadelphia—Boy of Prominent Family Involved in Case.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The coroner is investigating the sudden death of a beautiful girl. She lived alone in the Vendome apartments, 131 South Thirteenth street, and when she died a young man, said to be a member of a prominent Philadelphia family, was with her.

The girl was Rae Boyd, aged 22, daughter of Charles Boyd of Trenton, N. J. The father has been notified of her death and is on the way here. Meanwhile the young man who was calling on her when she died is being kept under surveillance.

Deputy Coroner Foote reported that Miss Boyd probably died of heart failure, due to an excessive use of headache powders.

Buy the Beans They Like Best

The folks at your table are the ones to judge what beans should be set before them.

Give them a chance to vote. If you are serving home-baked beans, alternate once with Van Camp's.

The home beans will be broken and mushy, because of dry heat. Van Camp's will be nutty, mealy and whole.

The home-baked beans will ferment and form gas, because they haven't had half heat enough.

Van Camp's will digest, because, in our steam ovens, every bean has for hours been subjected to 245 degrees.

Let your people choose. And be glad of their choice. For think what it means to have a dozen meals in the house—beans that are already baked.

Van Camp's PORK AND BEANS BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE

Make the same comparison—if you have any doubt—between Van Camp's and rival brands.

Let your folks say which they prefer.

This is worth your while, for beans are Nature's choicest food. They are 84 per cent nutriment.

They contain more food than the choicest beef, and they cost not a third as much.

When you serve the beans that your people like they will eat them in place of meat.

You will find we are right in all the pains that we take to create this delicious dish.

WHAT ENTIRE WEST SAYS ABOUT THE TRIBUNE'S GREAT LAND SHOW.

Idaho's Debt of Gratitude Is Expressed by the Idaho Statesman of Boise.

When the United States Land and Irrigation exposition opens in the Coliseum in Chicago on Nov. 20, the people who are to be in attendance from every part of the country will see the greatest display of irrigated products ever collected in the history of the nation. Every available inch of space in that great building has been secured by private and public enterprises and the interest which is being manifested in the affair insures some lasting results. Idaho will be particularly prominent at the "Windy city." No expense has been spared and nothing has been left undone to have the Gem state and its products shown, in a way that the importance of the state and the excellence of the products demand.

While the Commercial club and League of Southern Idaho Commercial clubs have taken a keen and active interest in the exposition and have taken steps to have the vast southern empire well represented, private enterprises have given this event much attention. The men who were the first to see the wonderful possibilities that southern Idaho afforded and who were responsible for the inception and completion of the great irrigation projects, have decided to attend the exposition, to see personally what other sections ar doing in irrigation.

Has Sufficient Floor Space.

About 3,500 square feet of floor space has been bought by the various interests of Idaho. Although some of the products and exhibits will be from various companies as well as from the commercial organizations, it will all be together in a prominent place in the building, with appropriate banners. This state will probably have the largest display there, and as Idaho's reputation is now national in irrigation, it is expected that there will be a great deal of interest taken in the products and exhibits from the Gem state.

The Commercial club has 700 feet and several of the delegates have gone ahead to make arrangements for the display and arrange it so that it will show up well. Over 400 boxes of apples have been shipped, and they are said to be the best that could be found in the country. The Crowder display, which won the gold medal at the recent fair, has also been sent to the exposition. This comprised grasses, grains, and cereals.

Display of Apples.

One of the most interesting displays will be that of the apples. While the Rome beauties and Jonathans are grown for commercial purposes and the raisers have been most successful with them, there has been sent sixty-one different varieties. The Commercial club officers feel that this will cause some of the farmers in the middle west and east to sit up and take notice.

Among the men who have devoted their time and attention to the building up of southern Idaho and who will attend the exposition are Fred A. Voigt, R. M. McCullom, W. M. Wayman, G. F. Sprague, C. B. Hurtt, and James E. Clinton. The Commercial club will be represented by C. J. Sinsel, D. R. Hubbard, G. H. Shellenburger, and Will H. Gibson. Reilly Atkinson will be the representative of the League of Southern Idaho Commercial clubs, and also will be in charge of the state exhibit. He was appointed by Gov. Brady and will be the personal representative of the state.

Greatest of Its Kind.

"I thoroughly believe that this exposition," said Reilly Atkinson yesterday, "will be the greatest of its kind ever held anywhere. People from all over the country will be in attendance. They will want to see products grown on irrigated land, and Idaho undoubtedly will appeal to them as having at least the best, biggest, and most complete display. The fact that the exposition has been so thoroughly advertised both by the railroads and through the press insures a large attendance, and there seems to be much interest taken by people from all sections.

"One of the features which appeals to me in connection with the exposition is that the annual national live stock show will be held at the stockyards during the last week of the exposition. This always brings together probably the richest gathering of men in the country. Cattlemen are much interested in Idaho, and it happens opportunely for us that this animal show will come at the same time as the exposition.

Results to State.

"It is hard to calculate the results which will accrue to the state from this exposition. That there will be those who will want to see the borders of the state is almost certain. Idaho's reputation in the science of irrigation is well established, and the eastern and middle west farmers will have the opportunity of seeing what can be done in the erstwhile arid lands of the western country.

"We have 10,000 booklets printed with handsome illustrations, and these will be given to all those who are interested in the state. In addition to the advertising matter the representatives will be on hand and will willingly enlighten those who care to ask questions about this state of ours. It is going to be a great big thing, and this state, and especially southern Idaho, will be greatly benefited."

Most of the delegation will leave today, although some have already gone to look after the exhibits.

Choicest Fruits Sent from California.
—Sun, Colusa, Cal

H. G. Squires is in Colusa in the interest of the Pittsburg syndicate securing an exhibit of fruit which will be shipped to Chicago and put on exhibit at the United States Land and Irrigation exhibit. The choicest fruits will be secured and shipped from here to the Sacramento Valley Development association offices at Sacramento, where they will be added to the Sacramento valley exhibit and shipped to Chicago.

Every person donating fruits or vegetables to this exhibit will receive full credit in Chicago, for every jar of fruit will be labeled with the name and address of the person growing the fruit. A large shipment will be made immediately, but any one having choice products can send them to the association any time before Saturday and they will arrive in time to be sent with the exhibit.

The Pittsburg syndicate has taken an active interest in this exhibit, for they believe that anything that advertises the Sacramento valley is bound to advertise their lands. People coming to the Sacramento valley are bound to hear of the large land syndicate in Colusa and Glenn counties and will come this way to investigate. These two counties will receive much advertising in the near future. The syndicate is trying to help Colusa now, and it is the duty of every property owner to try and make this exhibit the largest and finest that will be exhibited at Chicago.

Colorado Boosters Plan to Enlighten the East.
—Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Colo.

Plans have about been completed for the Colorado exhibit at the National Land and Irrigation exposition which will open in Chicago Nov. 20, and those in charge of the arrangements are confident that the Centennial state will carry away enough of the prizes to convince the people of the country that it has reached the front rank of the agricultural and fruit growing states.

The people in charge of the big show allotted 1,200 square feet of space to Colorado for the exhibits of the state. It has been found that this space is not nearly sufficient for the class of display that the farmers and fruit growers of the state desire to make, but no additional space could be obtained and those in charge of the exhibit are now devoting their attention to selecting the best exhibits from the large number offered, and they are confident that the Colorado show will be the finest if not the largest at the exposition.

One of the principal purposes of the Colorado boosters in entering the show is to give the people of the east and middle west some definite idea of the agricultural possibilities of the state. Accordingly in addition to the exhibits there will be hundreds of thousands of papers, booklets, and pamphlets prepared for distribution among the visitors at the show, giving facts and figures on Colorado's crop reports that will probably astonish the majority of eastern farmers who have not yet found out that Colorado is no longer exclusively a mining and grazing state, as they learned from their text books several years ago.

The exhibits are not being prepared by any central organization, but the chamber of commerce, State Commercial association, and several of the fruit growers' organizations are assisting private exhibiters in arranging such a display as will give all classes of products from the state a chance at the show.

The fruit growers of the western slope have taken 400 square feet of space, which will be devoted to displays of apples and potatoes. The eastern slope exhibiters will also have fruit displays, but will devote their greatest efforts to preparing a display of agricultural products.

Salt River Valley Plans a Lively Advertising Campaign.
—Republican, Phoenix, Ariz.

Quite a number of the real estate men of the valley will go on the special train to the Chicago Land and Irrigation exposition. While they will go as representatives of their own firms they will at the same time do all they can to coöperate with Arthur L. Waterhouse, who has charge of the board of trade exhibit. All will work together to advertise the valley in the middle west as it is has never been advertised before.

Among those who will go are James S. Griffin of the firm of Greene & Griffin. This firm has just had printed a pretty little booklet descriptive of valley industries. Ten thousand copies of the book will be taken along and distributed where needed the most. The book was gotten out under the supervision of Mr. Griffin and is one of the strongest arguments for Salt River valley that has been printed in a long time. The mistake of long pages of descriptive matter has not been made in this book; everything is short and to the point. Each page is devoted to some one industry and contains a letter from some prominent rancher who tells just what he had done in that particular line. On each page is a photograph of some feature of the industry treated, with a short introduction just above it. The letters, collected by Mr. Griffin at considerable trouble, are interesting and convincing as no amount of descriptive matter would be. They are all signed so that the eastern doubting Thomas may communicate with the writer if any of the statements contained in them seem to him too good to be true.

C. T. Hirst and Garth W. Cate will represent the Bartlett-Heard Land and Cattle company. The Heard company will have as an exhibit an alfalfa house which will contain a fine display of valley products. W. S. Pickrell will also be one of the party and will have charge of the ostrich exhibit.

Mr. Waterhouse and the real estate men will work together in a harmonious body to boost the valley. One of the plans is to bring back here as many carloads of homeseekers as can be induced to leave the blizzard belt of the lake district. Arrangements are now being made with the railroad companies to get a special low rate for the incoming colonists.

It is hoped that all those who have any specially fine products and are willing to exhibit them for their own benefit and that of the community in general will notify Mr. Waterhouse at the board of trade rooms in the Fleming block. If the exhibits cannot be brought to the board of trade rooms a messenger will be sent for them.

The special car carrying the Salt River valley exhibit will leave Phoenix on the morning of Nov. 13 and in order that there may be no delay all exhibits must be in by noon of the preceding day.

"Debt of Gratitude Due The Tribune."
—Times, Cherokee, Iowa.

A debt of gratitude and a vote of thanks will be due THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE from the American people when the United States Land and Irrigation exposition is over. The inception of this great undertaking was entirely due to THE TRIBUNE. The idea originated with THE TRIBUNE, and the entire responsibility, financial and otherwise, was assumed by THE TRIBUNE.

So timely did this enterprise seem to be that all the great irrigation and other land interests were quickly won and promised their participation and support. The United States government has thought so well of THE TRIBUNE'S idea that it will be the largest exhibiter.

All the exhibits of the exposition will deal with the idea of establishing American homes upon small farms. All the features of this unique and wonderful show will be pivoted around the idea that the best place for an American family is in a home of its own, and that home a tract of land large enough to maintain the family in any emergency. With our better knowledge of plants and soils and cultural practices a few acres have an astonishing capacity for production. Valuable instruction along these lines will be found by the visitor at the coming exposition, Nov. 20 to Dec. 4, at Chicago's great Coliseum.

Besides the features specially prepared and brought from Washington, the best features of the government's exhibit at Seattle will be installed at Chicago. The reclamation service, the geological survey, the land office, the forestry service, the patent office, the bureau of animal industry, the bureau of plant industry, the weather bureau, the office of experiment stations, and the bureau of entomology will all participate in a manner worthy of the government of 80,000,000 people.

The value of the government exhibits to the visitor will lie in the fact that they are new and represent the latest thought and development in the various lines which they represent. All will relate to irrigation, drainage, dry farming, and to the industries of the farm, especially of the new farms which are being reclaimed from what has long been regarded as waste land.

El Paso Devises an Unique Exhibit.
—Herald, El Paso, Texas.

The El Paso chamber of commerce has closed the contract for its exhibit at the United States Land and Irrigation exposition to be held in Chicago from Nov. 20 to Dec. 4.

The exhibit will consist of a model of the Elephant Butte dam, the irrigating canals, and the irrigated lands. The model will be equipped with blue lights to show the dam, red lights for the canals, and green lights for the irrigated valleys.

The exhibit will be unique and handsome enough to attract a great deal of attention. It will cost about $1,000 and the model will be constructed under the supervision of the reclamation service at Chicago, thanks to the courtesy of Engineer Reed, in charge of the reclamation service here.

It is the intention of the chamber of commerce to prepare a vast amount of literature about this section to be distributed at the Chicago congress.

People of Salt Lake Electrified by Quick Response to Gov. Spry's Appeal.
—Herald-Republican, Salt Lake.

Five voluntary contributions of $1,000 each, all coming in less than five minutes' time, electrified a meeting of public spirited men in the office of Gov. William Spry yesterday and made certain a creditable exhibit from Utah at the United States Land and Irrigation exposition to be held in the Coliseum at Chicago from Nov. 20 to Dec. 4. Gov. Spry started the little burst of generous enthusiasm with an offer of $1,000, and was followed by O. J. Salisbury, George Austin, Thomas R. Cutler, all of Salt Lake, and Mat Browning of Ogden.

There has been a good deal of doubt in regard to a Utah exhibit at the exposition owing to the apathy on the part of a few who had originally interested themselves in the proposition. It was declared an excellent scheme to advertise the state, owing to the fact that the meeting of the cattlemen and other conventions will be held in Chicago during this time, which will attract upwards of a million people to Chicago from all parts of the United States.

Nature of Exhibit Unsettled.

Just what the Utah exhibit will be is not settled, and a number of meetings will be held in the near future to decide upon this matter. The mining industry will have a place in the exhibit, though not nearly in proportion to agriculture or horticulture. It is along these two lines, it was stated, that Utah needs advertisement, as Utah is chiefly known as a mining state and little is known of the wonderful possibilities in the state in other lines.

Gov. Spry was empowered by those in the meeting to close a contract with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which is handling the exposition, for 800 feet of floor space in the Coliseum for $1,000. A representative of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE attended the meeting, the second time he has been in Salt Lake City on the matter. He declared it to be one of the most enthusiastic and public spirited meetings he had attended in his travels through the west on the same proposition—seeking to interest other states in the exposition.

Space Near the Entrance.

The floor space set aside for Utah is probably the most advantageous in the Coliseum. It is near the entrance to the Coliseum and will instantly draw the attention of those who enter. It was stated by Mr. Griswold that most other states will be represented in exhibits from real estate men and irrigation concerns and that Utah would be one of the few which would be represented as a state.

For a time yesterday there was talk pro and con in regard to the exposition. All conceded it would be a good thing, but each time they wound up against the financial proposition. One member declared Utah was regarded as a mining state, "with lots of Mormons," in the east, and that this impression should be altered to let the whole country know of the agricultural and horticultural possibilities of the state, as well as the mines.

Spry Starts Ball Rolling.

"The east doesn't know what we of Utah can do in agriculture and horticulture," said Gov. Spry finally, "and with this exhibit we propose to inform them. Utah has not been advertised abroad. We have made a flurry at home, but that is all, and the time is ripe when we should go out and show the country what we can do in all lines. The proposition is to get before the people as a whole the wonderful climatic conditions in the state, the chances in agriculture and horticulture which await them, and the fact that this is really the only country in which to live. We cannot better advertise our state than in this proposition. Gentlemen, I want to put myself down for $1,000 to insure a grand Utah exhibit at Chicago."

Others Quickly Followed.

For a moment there was no word, and then the four others—Mat Browning, T. R. Cutler, O. J. Salisbury, and George Austin—also put their names down for $1,000 each. This completed the $5,000 necessary for a large Utah exhibit, but others also volunteered. It is probable several will go on each note for $1,000, and thus make the contributions more general. It is likely that the state will refund the $5,000 used for this purpose, but it cannot be returned for another two years at least.

Cases used by Utah in the great exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle will be sent at once to Chicago, to be used for the Utah exhibit there, and thus a large item of expense will be avoided.

Secretary of State C. S. Tingey, who recently visited Chicago to attend the national bank examiners' convention, and at the same time investigated the exposition proposition, talked for some time to the members present in regard to the conditions there. He was of the opinion that Utah could not well afford to miss this opportunity of placing its advantages before the country in general, and declared that $5,000 could not be better spent, in his judgment, than in this manner. The Utah floor space in the Coliseum, he said, was the best in the Coliseum, and everything could be shown off to advantage in the space allotted to this state.

Experts to Go to Chicago.

Mr. Tingey's idea for the education of the people who will visit the Utah exhibit is to have a number of men conversant with facts about Utah's agricultural and horticultural advantages on hand to deliver lectures and to be at the exhibit most of the time to answer questions regarding the state. This was received favorably, and will probably be accepted by the committee. The plan will be worked out later, but it is likely that three or four experts will be sent with the Utah exhibit, and will remain there during the exposition.

William Hayes was of the opinion that Utah should take a prominent place in the exposition, and declared that it would do much to educate the people of other states in regard to conditions here. Several others made short speches during the session, which was informal in the extreme.

Those Who Attended Meeting.

Those present at the meeting were the governer. Secretary Charles S. Tingey, Joseph Young, John Henry Smith, John Thornley, William Hayes, Le Roy Armstrong, Senator Herschel Bullen Jr. of Logan, Walter Calderwood, Senator C. E. Marks, John C. Sharp, Adolph Richter, Senator J. A. Hyde of Lehi, Senator Henry Gardner of Spanish Fork, speaker of the last senate; William Hansen of Fielding, Prof. Joseph F. Merrill, John C. Mackay, O. J. Salisbury, C. E. Allen, Thomas R. Cutler, and Mat Browning of Ogden.

The appointment of subcommitees will be made at once, as there is not much time before the exposition. Collections of fruits and agricultural products will be collected from all parts of the state, packed and sent on to Chicago at once. One of the chief items of expense will, of course, be freight charges and the floor space. Most of the fruit for the exhibits will be contributed. This will have to be arrranged immediately, however, and meetings will likely be held this week with the governor to discuss further plans.

"Tremendously Valuable to the State."
—Herald-Republican, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Because Gov. Spry was yesterday assured that the sentiment of Utah is in favor of taking part in the land and irrigation exposition in Chicago, contracts were signed agreeing to show there, and pledging the fund necessary to pay for it.

The land and irrigation exposition will be held in the Coliseum building, Chicago, for the fourteen days from Nov. 20 to Dec. 4. Utah's floor space will cost $1,000. It is probable the entire cost of the affair, to the people of this state, will approximate $3,000. It will not be permitted to go above that sum. Public spirited men pledged the money, confident in the belief that Utah will meet the obligation later.

Idaho has taken space in a number of places in the big building. Montana, Washington, Colorado, and a number of other states will be represented—not officially and by legislative action, of course, but by their people. It is the aim of the promoters of the scheme to show the people of the middle western states where they can get new land for reasonable prices; where they can better themselves. Utah's friends believe there is not a better place than Utah. And they are determined to prove that to whomsoever may visit the exposition in Chicago.

The Utah exhibits at Seattle and some from the state fair are already prepared. It will not be difficult or costly to assemble the materials for the show. Added to that, the Utah booth should be supplied with men who can speak truly and favorably about Utah; men and women acquainted with the state and its conditions, resources, and attractions.

This exposition can be made tremendously valuable to the state. The men who yesterday encouraged Gov. Spry to go forward with the appointment of necessary committees and to contract for space did a helpful work. If the work be as well done hereafter, Utah will have cause to rejoice that the invitation was ever presented to appear at the land and irrigation exposition.

Demand for Western Lands Pointed Out by Utah Paper.
—Herald-Republican, Salt Lake.

Most people in Utah have read something of the Land and Irrigation Exposition which will be held in the Coliseum building in Chicago in the two weeks from Nov. 20 to Dec. 4. It would be well for our people if an even greater interest could be evidenced in that enterprise.

One thing is tolerably clear, even at this distance: The eastern investor is looking favorably on lands in the west. There are not enough wheat fields. There is not enough wheat. The demand is getting more and more insistent with the passing of every day. It is clear to the sagacious man with money that land offers the best and safest investment that can be found. The area of possibly productive land in the United States is growing smaller and beautifully less with each passing year. Whether the land is dry or wet, whether it is capable of irrigation or fated to go arid to the end of time, they want the land.

At that exposition the facts about the land in all the far western states will be presented. The date falls coincident with that of the live stock show in Chicago—a meeting which always brings tens of thousands of worthwhile people into the big city. Part of those people are going to visit the Land and Irrigation Exposition. Those of them who are convinced will invest their money here—even if they have to come here with their families. And in most cases that last is a thing to be desired.

Idaho, Montana, the Dakotas, Colorado will be represented at that exposition. It will be an opportunity for Utah to tell all people the advantages of this state. We of Utah know there is no place under the sun more materially attractive to the investor than is our state. But they don't know it. At this exposition we can tell them effectively.

It will need figures. It will need pictures. It will need men equipped with the fullest and most reliable information. Products are not so necessary as facts. The exposition will not be greatly expensive. And the importance of it is so vital that the people of Utah should be present there with a representation which will be fair to the state; which will show to the world substantial reasons why a man should come to Utah.

That can be done. We understand Gov. Spry is actively working along the line of interesting prominent Utah men in the project. He should have every encouragement—for the good and the advancement of Utah.

Exhibit Sent by Officials Representing the Sacramento Valley, Cal.
—Union, Sacramento.

Harry Speas, Sacramento county commissioner to the land and irrigation exposition in Chicago, left for that city to take charge of the local exhibit which will be installed in Chicago. Mr. Speas will remain in Chicago until the last of December and will have charge of the exhibit, which will be placed in the live stock show as well as at the irrigation exposition.

Exhibit material has been going east for the last two weeks and local promotion men unite in believing that the Sacramento valley will have one of the best exhibits at the exposition. The chamber of commerce is daily shipping fruit, vegetables, and other articles to Chicago for the exhibit. The Sacramento Valley Development association is attending to the exhibit of the valley and is shipping box after box of articles to be placed in Chicago. Among the articles sent east are 10,000 numbers of the Special Opportunity edition of the Sacramento Union, which will be distributed to visitors along with other literature.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition exhibit, from which it was intended to select many things for exhibit at Chicago, is being held north of Kennett by the blockade in tunnel No. 1, and instead of waiting for the exhibit to arrive the chamber of commerce and the development association are duplicating the articles and forwarding them east.

Secretary O. H. Miller of the development association, and his wife will leave for Chicago next Sunday to attend the opening of the exposition. Mr. Miller will remain in Chicago several weeks and will assist in furthering the interests of the Sacramento valley.

"Well Done" Is the Verdict of Irrigation Age.

Now that the seventeenth national irrigation congress has passed into history, we turn to the next great event, the United States Land and Irrigation exposition, to be held in Chicago Nov. 20 to Dec. 4, 1909.

It is with satisfaction that we note this spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm upon a subject so long held sacred to our columns.

As the architect looks upon the progress of his plans and the tiller of the soil sees with kindling eye and loving heart the product of his thought and labor, we, in this triumph of irrigation, feel and hear the voice saying, "Well done." And so The Age joins with its friend, THE TRIBUNE, in thus advancing the cause of irrigation, and welcomes this great paper into its family.

A master stroke of policy was this on the part of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and The Age bespeaks for the United States Land and Irrigation exposition the hearty support of all true factors in the great work of reclamation and cultivation.

Following is the announcement appearing in THE TRIBUNE:

"From Nov. 20 to Dec. 4 of this year will be held in the Coliseum, under the auspices of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the United States Land and Irrigation exposition, which will provide authoritative, graphic information about the vast land opportunities now opening up in the many states for homeseekers, farmers, and investors. There will be exhibits of the wonderful fruits of this virgin soil from all sections of the country. Elaborate panoramas will show what is being done to irrigate, drain, and cultivate it. Arrangements have been made for government exhibits of great value to the farmer and of vital interest to every lover of American soil."

"Most Complete of All Showings of the Benefits of Irrigation."
—Gazette, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The United States Land and Irrigation exposition, which begins in Chicago on Nov. 20, promises to be the most unique and complete showing of the successes of irrigation that ever has been made. The products of the erstwhile Great American desert will be on exhibition in the richest profusion, and will tell their own story of what irrigation may be expected to mean to the American people in the generations to come. "Save the forests, store the floods, reclaim the deserts, and build homes on the land" is the motto of those who have the irrigation interests of the country at heart.

This will be the first exposition ever held solely to promote the colonization of new land in this country, now made available to homeseekers, because of the recent reclamation of vast expanses of arid tracts. The object of the exposition is to guide and inspire the "land hunger" of the nation. The irrigated lands of the west afford opportunities for thousands of new homes. It will not be a mere county fair exposition of land products, although the products will be exhibited, but it will be an educational institution for the exemplification of the possibilities of farming lands reclaimed from the desert.

California will tell the story of fifty years' progress from one lone orange tree to an annual crop of 28,000 carloads. Utah, Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Wyoming, all of the arid and semiarid states, will have exhibits showing that arid land with irrigation is to be preferred to the best of land without irrigation. It is said that there are from seventy to eighty million acres of irrigable land in the United States, each acre of which might be made to produce enough to support a human soul. Ten million acres have been irrigated, the bulk of it by private capital.

Irrigation Era.

It is well that America has embarked upon an era of irrigation. The statisticians calculate that the appetites of men are growing bigger with the passing years. Although the population of the world has increased only 22 per cent in the last forty years, the amount of food products required has increased 40 per cent in the same time. In other words, men eat about one-fifth more than they did a generation ago. With the population of the world increasing at the rate of 8,000,000 souls a year, and the appetites of the people growing proportionately, the business of making two blades of grass grow where one grew before will be an increasingly great benefaction to the race.

Statistics showing the per cent of the arable land actually under cultivation in the various states show remarkable facts. Only 33 per cent of the arable land in Massachusetts is cultivated. In New York only 54 per cent is cultivated; in Ohio, 70 per cent; in Indiana, 66 per cent; in Illinois and Iowa, 72 per cent; Nebraska, 31 per cent; Colorado, 3 per cent; Utah and Nevada, 1 per cent; and California, 12 per cent.

The ninety-seventh meridian, cutting in twain the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas, divides the climatic east from the west. West of that line lie the regions where the rainfall is perpetually insufficient for crop growing. Yet the west does not regard that as an evil. One of the enthusiastic irrigationists of the far west has gone the whole length of optimism by speaking of the "blessing of aridity," and he offers many interesting facts to prove his case. He first declares that the bible offers conclusive evidence that the Garden of Eden was an irrigated spot, and calls attention to the passage where it says that a river went out of Eden to water the garden. Then he looks around and sees that every ancient civilization had its birth in semiarid regions, and that most of the glories of antiquity sprang from the heart of the desert. He looks to Egypt, Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, Persia, Arabia, northern India, Carthage; into the lands of the Aztecs and of the Incas, and sees civilization rising from the sands and semiarid lands. He says that the common belief that the fertility of the Nile regions is due to the coat of mud deposited by the river's subsiding waters is not well founded; that it amounts to less than two ordinary two-horse loads of material per acre, whereas Americans may put three times as much manure per acre without as great resultant fertility. Furthermore, on going up to Fayum, in the Libyan desert, where irrigation is carried on with clear water, the land is just as fertile as the mud covered valley of the Nile itself. Also, in the loess regions around the headwaters of the Yellow river in China, which is known as the granary of the Celestial empire, the land is perpetually fertile though irrigated with clear mountain water. The conclusion is that the lands of arid and semiarid regions are inherently fertile, and that water is the golden key that unlocks their treasures to the use of man.

Much Water Needed.

Arid land has a thirst for water that reaches astonishing proportions. Often when the irrigation ditch is first completed and the water turned over the land it is found that it takes as much as 6,000,000 gallons of water to satisfy the burning thirst of an acre of land. It has been shown that the average cubic foot of earth will absorb thirty-two pounds of water, and that as much as fifty-eight tons of dew may fall on a single acre of ground in one night.

Experience has demonstrated that the amount of rainfall best suited to the successful growing of a crop is forty inches annually. In other words, to produce a good crop 4,526 tons of water must fall on every acre of ground annually. Some one has made a study of the use of water by plants, and estimates that every ton of hay directly absorbs 500 tons of water from the time of the germination of the seed to the mowing of the hay. Another scientist undertook to study the use of water by maple trees in their "digestive" economy. He counted 12,192 leaves on a single maple. Studying one tree carefully he found that 640 trees on an acre of ground would evaporate 3,875 gallons of water in twelve hours. At this rate the acre of trees in the ninety-two days' life of their leaves, would send into the air nearly 3,000,000 pounds of moisture.

Not long since a western railroad issued one of the most striking maps ever seen. One part of it shows the physical features of the Promised Land of Canaan; the other shows those of the Salt Lake valley of Utah. If on the map of Canaan Salt Lake were substituted for the Dead sea, Ogden for Bethlehem, Salt Lake City for Jerusalem, Provo City for Tiberias, and Utah lake for the Sea of Tiberias, Canaan would become Salt Lake valley. In that connection it is interesting to note that the three great religions of the earth began in arid or semiarid regions; Judaism sprang from the deserts of Sinai; Christianity from the hills of Judea; Mohammedanism from the deserts of Arabia.

Dense Population.

The densest population in the world outside of cities is to be found in arid and semiarid regions made to blossom by irrigation. The Nile lands of Egypt support a population of 1,200 to the square mile. The densest rural population in the United States east of the 97th meridian is to be found in Rhode Island, with 276 persons to the square mile. In some of the older irrigated portions of California one may find as many as 500 people to the square mile, practically all of them engaged in horticulture through irrigation.

Irrigation is as old as history. It is a far cry from the old hand power dumping machine used along the Nile to the modern twenty inch centrifugal pumps one may sometimes see, and from the baby dams of the ancients to the gigantic Assuan dam in Africa or the Roosevelt dam in our own western country. But wherever irrigation has been kept up, even after the passing of thirty centuries, the soil is as fertile and as productive as of old.

The United States is playing the part of one who helps others to help themselves in the irrigation and reclamation work it is doing. It does not always intend to be the good angel of the work, but expects to establish communities of settlers, train them up in the art of coöperation, and gradually teach them to care for the works it has built. As soon as they have completed the payments which liquidate the expenses incurred in the construction and maintenance of the works, Uncle Sam then surrenders possession to them.

Some statistician has estimated that when every acre of land in the United States is developed to its maximum productive power the country will support a population equivalent to one-fourth the present population of the world. If the history of the oldest irrigated communities of California becomes the history of the entire region eventually to be irrigated, the great territory east of the Mississippi will become a sort of side show to the main circus west of that river. But then the east may conclude to do some irrigation of its own. Irrigationists assert that even Illinois land might be made to produce five times as much as it now produces were irrigation and scientific farming combined.

Opportunities Unequaled Since the World's Fair.
—Democrat, Centralia, Ill.

The lowest excursion rates of the year are offered visitors to the "International Live Stock Exposition" and "International Horse Show of Chicago," to be held Nov. 27 to Dec. 10, 1909, also to the "United States Land and Irrigation Exposition," to be held in Chicago Nov. 20 to Dec. 4, 1909.

The International Live Stock Exposition is the latest, greatest, and best live stock show of the year, where the champions of all other shows enter a final contest for the highest honors of the season. There will be a big celebration of its tenth anniversary this year, and no farmer, stock raiser, or general visitor at all interested in agricultural advancement or development of the live stock industry can afford to miss this year's great show, which will surpass all previous events of the kind.

The International Horse Show of Chicago is the liveliest, most interesting, and most broadly representative horse show of the country. It is to be held during the second week of the international stock show period. This year's show will embrace the champions of all breeds, including numerous champions from abroad, also the great six horse team contest, and many new and interesting features will be added to the brilliant afternoon and evening entertainments.

These great shows, together with the land exposition, offer a series of attractions unequaled in Chicago since the World's fair of 1893. With the year's work laid by on the farms, the increasing prosperity of agriculture everywhere, the lowest excursion rates of the year, and the Christmas buying season at hand, added to the splendid educational opportunity and entertainment of the above great shows themselves, the inducements are great to visit Chicago this season.

No more interesting, no more enjoyable, and no more profitable investment could be made by the business farmer and stock raiser. And should he bring along his wife and son or daughter he would have all the more cause for rejoicing that he has added knowledge and recreation to their lives as well as his own. Many others will find this the best opportunity of the year for education, entertainment, and a pleasure trip all in one.

Don't forget the dates, Nov. 27 to Dec. 10, and ask your railroad agent for special round trip rates and days of sale for tickets.

Opportunities to Exploit Limitless Possibilities of the Newer West.
—Register, Lamar, Colo.

The limitless possibilities of the newer west, where by the expenditures of vast sums of money by the government and by private enterprise millions of acres of unproductive lands are being converted into farms of most wonderful fertility, will be exploited for the information and profit of those who seek either homes or investment at the United States land and irrigation exposition which opens in the Coliseum building, Chicago, Nov. 20, and closes Dec. 4, 1909.

This exposition has taken on a national significance, and promises to bring under one roof a really comprehensive review of the splendid opportunities offered the ambitious, in the rapidly developing south and west. It is to be something more than a prize pumpkin show; it is to be a demonstration of the newer agriculture which has doubled the yield, increased the flavor, and multiplied the food value of the products of the soil. It is promised that the results obtained by the irrigation of the arid country will be set forth in a way that will interest and instruct all who attend.

The great Coliseum building is being decorated in a most lavish manner, and the space so divided and arranged that the results obtained in the several sections of the west and south may be seen and understood.

The triumph of the plant breeder, who through careful selection, hybridization, and cross fertilization, has produced fruits of delicious flavor, great nutritive value, and enormous yield, will be shown in the east for the first time.

Among the most interesting and important exhibits will be the demonstration of modern methods of conserving the energy and fertility of the soil. The newly discovered fertilizer that collects nitrogen from the atmosphere and stores it in the soil, where the plants easily may secure it when needed. The scientific methods of the intensive farmer who forces the land to yield the most wonderful results also will be demonstrated. There will be exhibited the specially designed machinery used by the irrigationist, and the tools employed by the men who practice modern scientific dry farming.

The work of the staff of experts maintained by the federal government is of so far reaching a character that few realize its importance.

Through the work of the reclamation service millions of acres of desert land have been supplied with the water that alone was needed to make them productive. Over $50,000,000 have been disbursed up to this time, and the results have proven the wisdom of the expenditure. The men who have done this vast work will be present to tell by word and picture how the waste places were reclaimed and made to produce wealth and comfort for the employment of man.

The bureau of plant industry also will be represented and the marvelous results obtained by the explorers who have penetrated the most remote regions in search of new plants to improve the native varieties will be shown. In one year these men sent to the bureau for experiment over 1,500 varieties of seed and plants new to America. High land alfalfa from Arabia, grapes from the Caucasus, mangoes from India, barley from Moravia, cherries and wheat from Russia.

The Santa Fé and other great railway companies have taken space and by exhibits of products, by pictures, by word of mouth, and by other forms of expression will inform all who attend as to the possibilities of the several sections. Here in half a day one may see and understand what may be done in any part of the country from Michigan to Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California, or from Washington and Oregon to Florida.

One interesting feature of the Santa Fé exhibit will be an adobe pueblo with a number of Indian blanket weavers, silversmiths, potters and other craftsmen at work.

To aid the splendid work of this exposition the railroads will authorize special excursion fares. It is estimated that over half a million people will be attracted to Chicago in consequence.

"The First Real Land Show," Declares the Western World.

The first real land show ever given in this country will be THE TRIBUNE'S United States Land and Irrigation exposition.

Don't imagine that it is an agricultural [illegible]. Far from it. It belongs to the [illegible]. Nothing like it was ever done, and the visitor may be sure that not only will his fancy be tickled but his mind will be filled with new thoughts and his ambition fired by new ideas.

When the doors of the Coliseum are thrown open Nov. 20 there will be revealed a scene such as no visitor can anticipate. For two weeks the people of the country will have a privilege such as few can afford to pass by. Here they will behold the sum of all progress in land development and of all the closely allied arts and sciences which have been brought into play during one of the greatest periods of national expansion this country has known.

So many fortunes have been found in the work, and so many opportunities are being opened for those who can take advantage of them, that the exposition will have a priceless value for those whose plans in life are not settled, or whoever may be looking for openings in the country's new communities in the west and south.

Thirty States Represented.

More than thirty states will be represented in the various features of the exposition. Railroads are working in coöperation with chambers of commerce to show the growth of cities, towns, and communities under the spur of land development, whether by drainage, dry farming, or irrigation. The largest irrigation interests are each doing their part, spending liberal sums of money to show what private capital in coöperation with the states is accomplishing in reclaiming waste lands for agriculture. The showing will be a surprise even to those who are more or less familiar with this development.

During his term of office President Roosevelt appointed a commission to inquire into conditions in American country life and to report any suggestions or recommendations. The commission found that the one thing which seemed to be most discouraging to those engaged in farming was the uncertainty of results.

Farmer Unable to Predict.

The farmer is the one business man who cannot calculate with reasonable certainty what his harvest shall be. He plows, plants, and cultivates, hoping that flood or drouth may not deny him a reward for his labors and a fair return for his investment.

The forestry bureau of the United States government is doing what it can to stop floods, and the dry farming school of agriculture is showing how the winter's moisture may be conserved for summer's crops. The irrigator aims to show that by irrigation alone may definite results be assured. All these will have a place at the coming exposition in the Chicago Coliseum.

Methods of production in force in various parts of the country are to be shown, from the rice fields of Louisiana, the cane fields of Texas, and the winter vegetable gardens, fig and orange orchards of the gulf coast to the wonderful orchards and alfalfa fields of the Rocky mountain states and the Pacific northwest. The countless orchards of California, bearing the fruits of every clime, will have their representatives among the numerous exhibiters.

Individual Interests Not Shown.

The exposition is different from all others in that individual interests do not appear. Every exhibit is along broad lines for the benefit of large hearted communities who have room for others. It is also for those "others" who may be ready to accept some of the many invitations with which the whole atmosphere of the exposition will be surcharged.

The participation of the United States government is on a large scale. Twelve thousand square feet of space will be occupied by government exhibits. Hourly lectures will be given in the Coliseum annex by speakers employed by the government. The lectures will describe the reclamation work now being carried on in many states—lectures on the Yellowstone, Yosemite, Grand cañon, good roads, forestry, and other interesting subjects.

Only One Land Crop.

The oft repeated statement attributed to James J. Hill that there is but one crop of land is worth repeating. The steady advance of land values during the last few years throughout the country, particularly in these middle states and in the west and southern states, and the yearly migration of 45,000 to 50,000 American families to the cheap lands of Canada are forceful reminders of the truth of Mr. Hill's saying. The United States Land and Irrigation exposition will aim to show what is being done with the small remainder of the land [illegible]. It will teach what may be done with a few acres under the magic irrigation and under the new methods of soil management.

Exposition Has a National Significance.

The limitless possibilities of the newer west, where by the expenditure of vast sums of money by the government and by private enterprise millions of acres of unproductive lands are being converted into farms of most wonderful fertility, will be exploited for the information and profit of those who seek either homes or investment at the United States Land and Irrigation exposition, which opens in Chicago Nov. 20 and closes Dec. 4, 1909.

This exposition has taken on a national significance and promises to bring under one roof a really comprehensive review of the splendid opportunities offered the ambitious in the rapidly developing south and west. It is to be something more than a prize pumpkin show; it is to be a demonstration of the newer agriculture which has doubled the yield, increased the flavor, and multiplied the food value by the irrigation of the arid country and the drainage of the overwet, and will be set forth in a way that will interest and instruct all who attend.

The Coliseum building is being decorated in a most lavish manner, and the space so divided and arranged that the results obtained in the several sections of the west and south may be seen and understood.

The broad acres of western Kansas and Oklahoma, the Panhandle and south plains of Texas, the Las Vegas country in New Mexico—all are attracting attention. The products grown there, with normal rainfall plus scientific soil culture, compare favorably with the best grown elsewhere.

Louisiana Calls Attention to Reclaimed Swamp Lands.
—Item, New Orleans, La.

The Southern Pacific railroad and Mr. Edward Wisner, who has been foremost in the reclamation of Louisiana marsh land and its development, will both make exhibits of the products of Louisiana soil at the coming United States Land and Irrigation exposition which opens at the Coliseum in Chicago Nov. 20 and closes Dec. 4.

The Southern Pacific will exhibit samples of the products grown along the S. P. line in Louisiana and Texas, and Mr. Wisner will make an exhibit of land reclamation showing pictures of marsh land before reclamation, and this same land in cultivation after reclamtaion. There will also be exhibits of the products of this land, such as sugar cane, rice, corn, oranges, and a complete display of truck garden products.

The Land Show Is Open Every Day from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m.

JUDGES TO STOP WRITTEN PLEAS

Municipal Court Jurists to Model New Practice After London Tribunal,

WANT SIMPLE VERBIAGE.

Indorse Olson on Pay Roll Stand and Want It Made Out for Full Month.

The Municipal court judges of Chicago started a movement yesterday to simplify procedure in their courts by abolishing written pleadings.

When the proposed reform is instituted the long, technical legal statements will be thrown aside and the new practice will be modeled after that of the Commercial court of London.

Following an explanation of the London system by Judge Steven A. Foster at the regular meeting of the jurists, a resolution was adopted favoring the radical move for simplicity. The law creating the Municipal courts is cited as giving them the power.

The new system is to be an experiment in the belief that its success will be followed by legislation extending the simplified practice to the courts of the state. If the experiment fails the municipal court judges can abolish the new rules without delay.

Confer with Bar Association.

The action of the judges was embodied in a resolution declaring for the adoption of rules providing for practice in the first class of cases as in the fourth class. This means the abolition of written pleadings in the first class, which includes cases involving $1,000 or more.

A committee was appointed to confer with the bar association. The rules will be prepared and after approval by the bar association will be formally adopted for the practice in the Municipal courts.

"The new practice will be modeled after that of the Commercial court of London," said Chief Justice Harry Olson. "Instead of the lengthy and technical pleadings there will be presented points of claim and points of defense which may be in simple language and on which the issues will be made.

"This is the first time in Illinois that action has been taken to abolish written pleadings. Judge Foster spent several months in England last summer studying the system and will give the committee the benefit of his investigations."

Indorse Pay Roll Stand.

The judges indorsed the position taken by Chief Justice Olson on the pay roll question and adopted a resolution which will be sent to the municipal commission and City Controller Wilson. The resolution declared it to be the sense of the Municipal court judges that the pay rolls of the judges, clerks, bailiffs, and employés of the Municipal courts be made out for the full month, including the last calendar day, according to the statute.

If the city efficiency commission insists on making out pay rolls up to the 25th of each month, in spite of the resolution, the judges probably will take a more decided stand and the final issue will be a formal order of the court on the date of the pay roll.

The judges provided a form of oath and agreed that the heads of departments should make affidavit to the correctness of the time of their employés.

DEATH TAKES LAST MEMBER OF "FOUR CRONIES" CLUB.

George Johnson, Survivor of Unique Organization Composed of Old Time Lake Men, Dies in Evanston.

George Johnson, the last member of the Four Cronies club, an association of four old time characters on the great lakes, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, 2644 West Railroad avenue, Evanston, at the age of 77 years.

The other members of the association were Capt. James Comstock, who was killed last January by a Chicago and Northwestern railroad train in South Evanston; Capt. James Hall, who died ten years ago, and Capt. Martin Blackburn, who has been dead thirteen years.

Mr. Johnson was never a lake captain, as were the other three in the association, his line of endeavor having been shipbuilding. He was born in Clayton, N. Y., Dec. 25, 1831, and began building ships on the St. Lawrence river in 1851.

Ten years later he entered the employ of the government as a builder of gunboats on the Mississippi river.

"UNLOADED" GUN FELLS A BOY.

Illinois Youth Shot While Hunting by Companion—Face and Breast Perforated.

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—His face and breast perforated with birdshot, Fred Ley, 16 years old, lies dangerously wounded at St. Joseph's hospital, a "did not know it was loaded" victim. Ley was shot while hunting yesterday, receiving the contents of a shotgun in the hands of Howard Stafford, his hunting companion. His chances for recovery are about even.

NEWS OF MUSIC WORLD.

Theodore Thomas Orchestra Concert.

The noble company of the verbose tone poets was swelled yesterday by the initiation of Herman Bischoff. The newcomer bids fair to rise high in the order without appreciable delay. He has that trait of the accomplished bore already, for he is deadly solemn and equally conscientious. Neither Mahler, Bruckner, Elgar, nor Richard Strauss need handicap himself for competition with Herr Bischoff, for he can amplify with the best of them.

The Bischoff symphony followed that bright, compact overture to "Der Improvisator" by d'Albert. And after the epic solemnity of the symphony came Mme. Schumann-Heink, with the two excerpts from Wagnerian music drama. The first of these was "Erda's Warning," from "Rheingold," another solemnity. Altogether it was a solemn occasion.

Mme. Schumann-Heink was a great success. The audience was in sympathetic mood, and nothing more than the personality of the singer would have been sufficient for the storm of approval which is customary on the occasion of her every appearance. But it is a pleasure to chronicle the legitimate success of Mme. Schumann-Heink's offerings. Her voice has rarely seemed more satisfactory, her authority is one of her characteristics, and the deeply sympathetic interpretations of both the "Warning" and the "Waltraute scene" are tributes to her musicianship.

Mme. Schumann-Heink sang during the second half of the concert also. This time she gave the "Rienzi" excerpt, "Gerechter Gott," which has been heard here as often as it deserves. That and the overture to the same opera, the last number of yesterday's program, are not representative of Wagner nor of opera in general. But it must be granted that no one can make the "Gerechter Gott" aria seem so imposing, so charged with the spirit of tragedy as Mme. Schumann-Heink. And her success of yesterday was but a record already established.

Concerning that Bischoff symphony, the audience was of two minds. There are passages of beauty, there is masterly orchestration of a pedantic variety throughout, and there is continuous proof of obstinacy. Herr Bischoff evidently felt that occasions for the performance of his works were few and long separated, and he decided to make a comprehensive statement of all he thought and felt, of all he expected to think and feel.

What he wrote was not a symphony in reality. His score is the record of all possible and impossible variations of two rhythms. This observation applies especially to the first movement. There are themes of the flying buttress plan; they are mainly fantastic lines that touch accents here and there. But as far as the subjects per se are concerned the original might as well be a variation as not.

It is written that the work is not a symphony. In plan it is. There are the conventional four distinct movements. The distinction lies in the fact that there are four starts and four stops. Between these suspensions of complexity are firkins, vats, oceans full of thick, meaty orchestration spiced with pungent dynamics that ought to be intoxicating. There is strength enough.

Had he ended with the first movement Herr Bischoff's reputation would be greater than it is. Had he written only the last movement his audiences would have hailed him as one of the few composers of strong individuality. Had he been satisfied to produce the scherzo-like third movement as a tone poem on whatever subject, as an occasional piece or as a concert "Scherzo," his admirers might have pointed to it as a promising work.

But all this was not to his mind. He had to drag in a program, the usual depressing program, that old familiar kindergarten story whose best known variant is "Faust." He did it up in Leipsic counterpoint, and indifferent Leipsic counterpoint at that. But, to give Herr Bischoff the credit he deserves, the style with which he began his thesis is the style maintained throughout. He is consistent, earnest, and exhaustive.

It is easy to condemn a work of this sort without reference to the many excellences it may possess. But there is very apparent reason behind the attitude of yesterday's audience. That is the question of the variety of orchestration, the effectiveness of contrast. After sober reflection we are inclined to place the explanation of the symphony's chilly reception on that ground. The score is solid and sound to the uttermost. There are no thin places over which the runners scrape. Such a monumental example of closely woven progressions has been heard rarely from the modern composers.

But that in itself constitutes an element of danger. Too long continued, such a flow of unvaried tone affects one like the rush of water to a fall. It is mesmeric, and the result of the effort to resist the fascination of the current is fatigue. And despite the many passages of real beauty, despite the masterly handling of the various timbres of the orchestra, that is the impression made by the symphony yesterday afternoon. It is possible that another hearing might alter the conclusion. But it is significant that the only clear memory of Herr Bischoff's themes retained for one hour is the recollection of a few bars from the slow movement, and that memory is not inspiring.

In addition to the numbers so successfully sung by Mme. Schumann-Heink and the new symphony, the d'Albert overture and Wagner's "Lohengrin" prelude and the "Rienzi" overture were excellently done. The latter was played splendidly and its melodies and climaxes, while not of the brilliancy of Wagner's later work, sounded genuine, unforced, spontaneous, and not a bit labored and exhaustive.

Ludwig Becker acted in the capacity of concertmeister for the afternoon on account of the absence of Leopold Kramer. His excellent musicianship and good technique brought him success. The orchestra handled the complex Bischoff score well, and the d'Albert overture has rarely sounded so good.

The same program will be repeated this evening at 8:15. ERIC DELAMARTER.

SAYS COEDUCATION IS NOT A SUCCESS

Principal Declares Boys Are Forced to Study Things of No Interest to Them.

SEGREGATION FAVORED.

Prof. Armstrong Contends Parents, Teachers, and Pupils Want It.

"Parents favor segregation in the high schools, teachers want it, and boys and girls are overwhelmingly for it."

With this statement James E. Armstrong, principal of the Englewood High school, asked in an address before 400 secondary teachers of science and mathematics why boards of education stand against segregation of boys and girls.

"Looking at it from every angle," said he, "we must admit that coeducation is not to be desired. Boys and girls are not given the same books to read in the home and in general are not given the same home education. The two sexes embody two distinct minds, which must be given the proper individual training they demand.

Tells of Boy's Handicap.

"Many boys who apparently were dull and slow in school have turned out to be alert business men. They were handicapped by having to learn things they were not interested in—studies which perhaps were meant for girls, but which the boys had to take also.

"Thus their tendencies were not noticed by their teachers, or, at all events, were not properly coached.

"A boy dislikes a set task, and shirks from home work. The result is that he hands in slovenly papers, which show that his interest at most has been half-hearted. The girl takes delight in home work, and excels her brother at this. That accounts for the fact that most of our girls have been the valedictorians of their classes."

Majority Favors Segregation.

Mr. Armstrong read the answers to a question sent out, and they served to back up his conclusions. In them it was shown that 79 per cent of the girls and 90 per cent of the boys prefer segregation. One of the minority, a boy, replied:

"I do better work when I look into the faces of pretty girls."

From experience, the teachers of the Englewood school have adopted a plan, said the speaker, of having girls do prepared work at home, while the boys do theirs under the watchful eye of a teacher.

Prof. Ernest D. Barton of the University of Chicago oriental commission said that the American methods of education are looked upon as best by the Chinese and are being adopted.

Man Suffering from Nervous Breakdown Tries to Get Place as Minister to China.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—A well dressed, intelligent looking young man, evidently on the verge of a nervous breakdown, went to the White house today to ask the president for the position as minister to China. A White house official advised him to return to Chicago, where he has been living for the last three months. The young man has been a teacher in the Indianapolis public schools, and his mother and sister now live in Peoria, Ill.

ALTMAN JUROR TELLS WHY THEY VOTED FOR ACQUITTAL.

Did Not Believe "Bomb Confessions" of Three State Witnesses, Who, They Thought, Were After Big Reward.

Lorin J. Drake, one of the ten jurors who voted on the first ballot to acquit Vincent and Joseph Altman, accused of dynamiting the mills of the Standard Sash and Door company, said yesterday that the ten men voted as they did because there was a substantial doubt of the guilt of the defendants.

"We did not believe the testimony of Bruno Verra, Cassimir Woronowicz, and Martin Stasch," said Mr. Drake. "It looked to me that these witnesses, who confessed a knowledge of the bomb exploding business, were influenced by the big reward offered by the Chicago Telephone company for the conviction of the persons who dynamited their cable conduit. Had we believed them, we would have had to find the defendants guilty.

"The two jurors who voted for conviction on the first ballot," said Mr. Drake, "were David Hurd and Edwin Luettke. I believe Mr. Luettke voted for conviction because he honestly believed the defendants guilty. In arguing with Hurd the other jurors charged him with being prejudiced. He admitted that he was a contractor and that he had once been suspended from a labor union for nonpayment of dues.

"The talk that any juror was afraid to vote for conviction is a joke. The state did not prove its case."

At the state's attorney's office it was stated that the case in which Vincent Altman is charged with throwing the bomb that wrecked the cable conduit of the Chicago Telephone company will be brought to trial without delay.

Freed of Abduction Charge.

Charges against Louis J. Fletcher, accused of having abducted Mabel Rohwedder, 16 years old, daughter of Herman Rohwedder, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Beltler in the Harrison street police court.

View on the Belle Fourche U. S. Reclamation Project.

100,000 Acres Irrigated Land

The Government Irrigation Project in the Belle Fourche Valley of South Dakota will water 100,000 acres of fertile land.

This land is open for settlement under the United States Homestead and Reclamation Laws—a splendid opportunity to secure a home and have your crops pay for it.

What One Acre of Belle Fourche Land Can Do

Land in the Belle Fourche Valley has been under private irrigation for many years.

Oats run 40 to 100 bushels per acre, while from 30 to 60 bushels of other grain may easily be grown. Alfalfa, potatoes, sugar beets, hardy fruits and garden truck are exceedingly profitable.

Native hay sells for a high price, for the Belle Fourche Valley is surrounded north, east and west by vast ranges that afford pasturage to huge herds of cattle and sheep.

The Belle Fourche Valley is situated near the best markets of the middle west, including those of the mining towns of the Black Hills district. The demand for fruit, garden truck, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, etc., is constant. All such products bring big profits.

For accurate and reliable information about how to obtain some of this land apply to the Chicago & North Western Railway for a copy of the Belle Fourche Valley booklet, free on request. With it we include booklets describing the best countries for the homeseeker to be found in the United States—the profitable cut-over timber lands of Wisconsin—the dry farming methods and irrigation on government lands in Nebraska and Wyoming—and how to secure a U. S. Government homestead.

POSSIBLE VIRTUES IN JOUSTING.

Advance tidings regarding the jousting which is to be a part of the entertainment at the International Live Stock show permit of some perplexity. We are not accurately informed whether the Sir Knights are to "brast" lances against each other and take the chances of "brasting" each others' heads or are to confine their efforts to the lighter and probably more intellectual pastime of spearing rings. A humane consideration for their friends, relatives, and well wishers led us impulsively to hope that the latter was the sole intent and purpose of the tilting.

Further meditation and a hasty recollection of parts of Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte d'Arthur" have modified the hope, and we are prepared now to suggest that the debrutalized and expurgated sport of jousting as enjoyed in King Arthur's domain before the Jutes, the Angles, and the Saxons came along to disturb the nobility of those days might be found an acceptable substitute for football. The Celtic chivalry, as we see it through the Norman imagination, did much to reform the idea of personal combat, and with this season's football record before us we doubt that any great improvement can be noted in our days.

It is true that a gentleman occasionally suffered the misfortune to have his head "brast," a side of his torso caved in, or to have a hip smashed by a falling horse, and occasionally he suffered the inconvenience of being run through the body, in which case we presume that the coroner's jury brought in a verdict censuring the then prevailing steel trust, under whatever name it may have operated, for criminality in weakening the metal used for protection. It is true that these things happened now and then, but the knights for the most part were carried off by the gout or by fair enchantresses.

We do not insist that the jousters at the stock show give us a modern revival of tilting in all its phases, but we do call attention to the fact that if they could be persuaded to do so we might find an outlet for certain physical exuberances which now get dangerous expression in football, deer hunting, automobiling, and other perilous pastimes. It is merely a fugitive thought and we do not insist on it.

CHICAGO'S LACK OF PROGRESSIVENESS.

It is emphatically true, as John Callan O'Laughlin said in a recent dispatch to THE TRIBUNE, that Chicago lacks progressiveness as regards water borne commerce. It has been incurious of what other lake cities were doing with the aid of congress and through their own exertions to attract that kind of commerce to their harbors. Its attitude has been the reverse of that of New York. It has watched Boston, Philadelphia, Galveston, and other Atlantic and gulf ports with a jealous eye and has become excited when any one of them has seemed to be gaining on it in any particular.

Chicago has deliberately preferred the railroads and neglected water transportation, which was everything to it in its early history. In that respect it has been like St. Louis, which for years treated with indifference the great river to which it owed its existence. Both cities are awakening from their lethargy, but Chicago must be more thoroughly aroused than it is. It must have a more lively sense of the imperative need of harbor facilities and the cheaper freight rates which they would bring. Not Chicago alone but the vast region tributary commercially to it would be benefited.

There are railroads which are indifferent to harbor improvement. They compete with the great lakes. There are other railroads with which the contrary is the case. They should lend a helping hand to the movement to obtain for Chicago the harbor it must have to regain the commerce that has been slipping away from it to other ports.

NAT GOODWIN IS THROUGH WITH MINES.

Having dallied for a time with the goddess Fortune in the guise of a mine promoter, Mr. Nat Goodwin, the comedian, announces that he has renounced the jade once and forever and that henceforth he will be nothing but a player. Hereafter the only mine in which he will delve will be that of the drama and his promotion will be confined to his abilities as an actor.

As a comedian Mr. Goodwin has his limitations, but within them he possesses ability as interpreter of certain rôles bordering upon the farcical. His first successes were made in farce and burlesque, and there is talk of his returning to these styles of entertainment. He had laudable ambitions concerning comedy which were never quite realized, and it is even said that at one time he aspired to shine upon the tragic stage. There never was a comedian who didn't think he could play Hamlet.

His lack of success in late years was due to unsuitable dramatic material. He has a wide and faithful band of admirers. In the right play he can do so well that he will forget what Fortune promised him from holes in the Nevada soil.

THERE SHOULD BE NO FIRST WARD BALL.

It is given out that the 1 o'clock closing ordinance is to be enforced against that annual roundup of disreputable characters which is known as the First ward ball. No saloonkeepers will be enabled to say that an ordinance which many of them are now being prosecuted for violating was suspended to help out an aldermanic undertaking.

It would be more to the point to refuse to grant a special bar permit. That would cut down the profits of the promoters and convert into a tame and comparatively orderly affair what would otherwise be a disgusting carouse. And it is precisely because that would be the effect of the refusal of a bar permit that it should be refused. Even with the 1 o'clock restriction on the sale of liquor enforced, the hall where the ball is held will swarm with drunken disreputables.

This kind of entertainment should not be allowed. None would be more thankful than those individuals who, being subjected to some sort of pressure, buy blocks of tickets. The wonder is that they have not rebelled against the yearly exaction of tribute. What do they gain by submitting to it?

INVESTIGATING EXPRESS RATES.

The Hepburn act of June, 1906, made the rates of express companies as well as those of railroads the concern of the interstate commerce commission. It is a body which has much work to do of many kinds. It is not surprising, therefore, that it was only recently that it got around to the express companies. It is now making a thorough investigation, which has gone far enough to bring out some interesting facts.

One is that the companies constitute a much more complete monopoly of the business they transact than the railroads do of their traffic. There is no competition at points where there should be competition. The results of the monopoly they have enjoyed have been the payment of excessive dividends or the accumulation of immense surpluses which have made possible the present or prospective "cutting of melons."

Manifestly the rates have been too high. They have been based on the principle of charging all the traffic would bear. Illinois can regulate express tariffs within the state. Other states can do likewise and thus secure a measure of relief. The great mass of the business done by the express companies is interstate, and hence comes within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. It is only through proceedings initiated by it that general relief from the exactions of the express combine can be had.

An attempt by a state or the national government to reduce express rates will encounter determined resistance, but victory will be certain in the end. The sooner the contest begins, the better.

DESERTERS FROM THE ARMY.

For the fiscal year on which the adjutant general of the army has just made report the number of desertions is placed at the astonishing figure of 4,993, or 4.97 per cent of the entire enlisted force. This is an increase of .38 per cent over the desertions of the year before.

As to the causes of this remarkable defection from the ranks, Adjutant General Ainsworth assigns the abolition of the canteen, the monotony of garrison life, the increased amount of work and study demanded of the soldier, and the ease with which remunerative employment can be obtained in civil life at the present time.

All of these causes have been attributed before to army desertions, and undoubtedly each contributes to the dissatisfaction of the enlisted private. The restoration of the canteen would meet with strong opposition, and it is doubtful if efforts in that direction would succeed at the present time. One would think that the additional work and study complained of would destroy the monotony of garrison life. With the rewards which certainly await efficiency and intelligence even in the ranks, garrison monotony should be appreciably diminished. Dull times in trade and business increase enlistments, and when prosperous seasons return to the country the enlisted men naturally long for the freedom and opportunities of civil life.

Monotony, we should say, is the worst enemy of the soldier in times of peace, but it would seem as though the war department might easily devise means to overcome this and make the enlisted man more contented with his condition.

LOCOMOTIVES NOT ALLOWED TO SMOKE IN HOLLAND.

The London Railway Magazine says that all railway locomotives in Holland have to be provided with an apparatus for the burning of smoke. Every engine has to be examined and approved by a government inspector before it can be put in service, and one which would emit black smoke and soot would not be tolerated. The provincial and communal authorities are authorized to make and enforce regulations in regard to railways, and one province, in order to get rid of the possibility of smoke and sparks, allows nothing but coke to be used on locomotives.

As railroads can be run in Holland without letting loose clouds of dense smoke, why cannot the same degree of cleanliness be achieved in Chicago? The Illinois Central has many Dutch stockholders, who must have heard of the nuisance the engines of that road are creating in this city. That being the case, it is surprising that they did not speak out through their proxy holders at the last stockholders' meeting and say that what was necessary for Holland was even more necessary for a great city like this. It must be that they gave their proxies to men who are not in sympathy with Dutch ideas of cleanliness. Those stockholders should be better represented next year.

MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1909: By the Brentwood Company.]

GUY LAKING, who is now in this country visiting American art collections, is not only the keeper of the king's armory and a valued member of his household, but also a member of the firm of Christie, which enjoys international fame as having undertaken the sale by auction of all the most celebrated collections of art that have come into the market during the last fifty years or more. His academic career was not a success. For it is on record that he was requested to leave Westminster school at the age of 16 owing to his inveterate habit of truancy. But if he absented himself from his studies, it was in order to frequent the sale rooms of Christie, which exercised an irresistible fascination over the 16 year old boy. In fact, his presence was noted by members of the firm, and at length they asked whether he would care to take service with them. The boy was overjoyed and at once expressed his willingness. The next day his father visited the firm and the necessary arrangements were completed.

Young Laking's rise was rapid. In a few years he was appointed the expert of the firm, a most responsible position and one requiring endless knowledge of art, artists, and periods. There is not a museum in Europe with which he is not intimately acquainted, and he knows the contents of most private collections better than the collectors themselves. To this knowledge of European collections he is now adding an equally intimate acquaintance with the best collections in this country, and it is doubtful whether, with the exception of Dr. Valentina, the curator of the art collections of the Metropolitan Art museum in New York, who received his training under Dr. Bode at Berlin, there is at present any one in America better qualified to undertake the task.

It is said that Guy Laking intends to embody the information which he has obtained about the public and private art collections in America in a book, which will prove interesting reading. For European experts are united in declaring that he is the one man who always is right. The queen never purchases even the most trivial art object without consulting him, and he is constantly called in to advise the king. He prepared the catalogue for the Wallace collection at Hertford house, and was called in after the king's accession to value the late Queen Victoria's private collections, as well as the art treasures of the crown at Windsor and at Buckingham palace.

Although Laking is known as the keeper of the king's armory, yet his knowledge of art extends to porcelain, furniture, tapestry, in fact every branch of art, and his volumes on the furniture at Windsor and on the Sevres porcelain at Buckingham palace are known throughout the art world. He has an official residence in St. James palace, is married to a daughter of Charles Myine Barker, and is heir to the baronetcy of his father, Sir Francis Laking, the principal physician of the king.

Sir Francis first came to the fore through his attendance on the present prince of Wales at the time when he was overtaken by that illness which carried off his elder brother; and the royal family of England attribute the preservation of the prince's life, as well as the strength and vigor which Queen Victoria enjoyed in her later years, to the care and skill of Sir Francis.

With regard to the office of king's armorer held by Guy Laking, it is an ancient one, and in the reign of King Henry VIII. it was held by Sir Thomas Wollner. In those days its duties were limited to looking after the sovereign's hardware habiliments. Today its duties are more multifarious, since, as I have pointed out above, it includes the care of all the art treasures in the royal palaces.

Guy Laking has been decorated by the king with the Victorian order, and has received similar distinctions from nearly every sovereign in Europe in recognition of the services which he has given them in advising them about their collections. But he is not yet Sir Guy Laking, and as he is deeply attached to his father, he will be content to wait for many years before he inherits the paternal baronetcy.

French judges as a rule are recruited from the least eminent members of the legal profession. For the pay is so small that no one who has a large practice at the bar, or any prospects of obtaining such a practice, can afford the pecuniary sacrifice entailed by the possession of a seat on the bench. Occasionally, however, young lawyers who are blessed with abundant private means drift into the magistrature assise, that is to say, into the judicial career, for the sake of the honors in the way of orders of knighthood and official precedence which fall to the share of the higher ranks of judges; conscious, too, that their monetary independence, coupled with their cleverness, is liable to assure them rapid promotion over their dull colleagues of straitened circumstances.

It is to this category of judges of cleverness and large means that the justice who presided at the Assize court which tried Mme. Steinheil belonged. In private life he is Vicomte de Valles, who owns a beautiful house in Paris on the Qua d'Orleans, filled with art treasures and famous for its collection of relics of old Paris and of Rome before her decline and fall; a beautiful country seat known as the Château du Barry, in the Indre; and a seaside villa at Trepot.

The judge is a particularly well known figure in Parisian life, conspicuous at all the exhibitions of art and at the theatrical premiers, while he has a box at the opera, and also at the Française. A frequenter of all the shops of the dealers in antiques and old books, he is an ardent archæologist, an enthusiastic bibliophile, and a member of many learned societies. Both he and the vicomtesse always have belonged to the Elysée circle and are warm personal friends of the Loubets and of the Fallieres, as they were of the Faures.

Indeed, it was just because he was fond of Felix Faure that the judge displayed such animosity against the woman whom he justly regarded as the ecause of the shocking death of the president and of the sorrows added to the bereavement of Mme. Faure and of her daughter, his animosity being tempered, however, with an earnest desire to avert everything in the deliberations of the trial that could affect the memory of the president or revive the scandal of his death.

The Vicomte de Valles, despite the grayness of his beard, is young looking and alert for all his fifty-six years, and I may add that the title which he bears is perfectly authentic, as befits a grandson of the d'Hoziers, who were the most famous genealogists in France and to whom the nation owes the most reliable standard works about its aristocracy. Indeed, the d'Hoziers were the Gallic counterpart of Sir Bernard Burke, the founder of Burke's Peerage; only they were more reliable.

Sir Frederick Macmillan, who has just been knighted by the king in recognition of his philanthropic services as president of the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy, is the head of the great publishing house of Macmillan and descended in a direct line from the celebrated John Macmillan, who at the beginning of the eighteenth century founded the Reformed Presbyterian church of Scotland after a stubborn and determined struggle with the authorities.

The founder of the publishing house, the late Daniel Macmillan, father of Sir Frederick, inherited a good deal of the old covenanter spirit of religion, and it was upon this religious spirit that he may be said to have built up the firm. For when he started out in business for himself it was in the conviction that educational literature needed to be raised to a higher level, and he made it his aim to induce the most eminent men he could find to set themselves to the task of writing elementary text books.

The result of this bent of mind has been the publication by the Macmillans of some of the most valuable educational works.

Daniel Macmillan was the son of a farmer of Arran, on the west coast of Scotland, served an apprenticeship as assistant to Atkinson, a bookseller at Glasgow, then made his way to London, and from there to Cambridge, where he served under the bookseller Johnson for $150 a year. It was in 1843 that he first started in business for himself in London. He found his Cambridge connection of immense assistance, not only by reason of the backing which he received from the university itself, but also from the Barclays and other bankers whose acquaintance he had made when they were young men at college.

TO PROTECT MINERS' LIVES.

Buckingham, Ill., Nov. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In view of the recent deplorable loss of life in the Cherry mine disaster I would suggest a partial if not complete remedy for a repetition of such occurrences. I suggest that mine owners be required to construct at intervals in the various tunnels air tight chambers to be stocked with provisions and supplied with air and water from the surface, where miners could take refuge in similar occurrences.

MAROONED IN ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, Nov. 20.—Are we giving thanks today? How can we? We're still in St. Lewis (as the natives call it).

Through your valued column will you kindly tell me why so many of the men in this burg smoke cigars without removing the bands? Can't you reorganize your old "Save Your Bands" club and get all these in as nonresident members?

Again, is it the German strain in so many that prompts them to wear their derbies with the bow on the right side?

Also, in a certain theater here the candy butchers sell what is locally known as "marsh melons." Is that a fruit or vegetable, and do you preserve any in your pet little cannery?

Once more, please tell me just what is Sarsa-frilla? Is it a hair tonic or a liquid foot ease? Am inclined to think the latter, as it is sold here in a dump where many men stand on their feet all night around a table tossing about two small cubes with dots on each face.

Did you read of the Texas man who recently pawned a gold tooth and his wooden leg to raise enough to get out of town on? Gee! Wish I had a wooden leg!

In our part of the country we used to say,
"It looks as though," or "It looks as if." (Usen't we?)
Nic and all other southerners observe "It looks like."
I'm worried; how about it? LARRY.

[We fancy that Mr. Nic Coldwater uses it in a Nickwickian sense. But in Houston, Tex., "it looks like," or "it looks like as if," is employed by the most cultivated people. Besides, according to Prof. Lounsbury of Yale, if as many as eight people favor a certain word or phrase, "usage makes it correct."]

While others were on Mount Wilson intent.

For we had known him since he was a boy,
So when invitations were mailed us,
We accepted with greatest of joy.

ARGUES FOR A PARCELS POST.

Official of Farmers' National Congress Draws Lessons for This Country from the Experiences of Other Nations.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A comprehensive parcels post system will certainly be the best remedy for the high charges of the express companies. Some of us believe that such a system will be the only remedy. Such corporations as the express companies do not find it impossible to evade or annul laws or the actions of commissions. They could not evade the competition of the comprehensive parcels post, and they could not buy out the postoffice department and combine it with their corporation or make a gentleman's working agreement with it.

In the parcels post of Great Britain, New Zealand, the commonwealth of Australia, Italy, the Netherlands, Chile, and Cuba the weight limit is eleven pounds; of France it is twenty-two pounds; of Germany and Austria it is 110 pounds; and of Belgium it is 121 pounds. In the United States it is four pounds.

This weight limit compels the people of the United States to send by far the greater number of their packages by express.

Our domestic parcels post rate is 16 cents a pound. This is more than it is in any of the other countries named above. On the average our parcels post rate is more than twice that of the other countries named.

The express companies and their dupes that oppose a modern parcels post for the United States say that we cannot have such a parcels post as other countries have because in the United States the distances are greater and the population is sparse. But Australia, which is 2,000 miles by 2,500 miles, and in which the population is not near so dense as it is in the United States, has a parcels post that permits the sending of packages weighing up to eleven pounds at a rate of 12 cents for the first pound and 6 cents for each additional pound.

Cannot the lavishly supported government of this country furnish its people as good mail service as the government of Italy, New Zealand, or Chile furnishes its people?

Foreigners, the people of more than a score of countries, can send to this country or receive by mail a parcel of greater weight and greater size at a less rate of postage than a citizen of the United States can, by mail, send to or receive from another citizen of the United States, provided they are both within the United States.

But if one of the citizens of the United States goes outside of this country, 5,000 miles farther away from the other citizen than he was before, then our most sensible and consistent government will allow the one to send and the other to receive by mail a larger and heavier package than they could have sent by mail if both had remained in this country, and it actually charges less for the carrying of the package, although the distance is 5,000 miles greater!

The express companies have made small merchants believe that a modern parcels post would be a great aid to the mail order houses. It is said that Sears, Roebuck & Co. favor a more liberal parcels post. It is certain that Montgomery Ward & Co. oppose it. Certainly the merchant that patronizes his local paper has nothing to fear from the mail order houses. The fact that there are less than half a dozen successful mail order houses in existence, although many have been started and although there is abundant capital looking for profitable investment, would indicate that the success of the few notable mail order houses is due to exceptional business ability rather than to general conditions so favoring mail order trading as to threaten the local merchant that is up to date in his methods.

COMPLAINT FROM EVANSTON.

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—While the patrons of the Oak Park elevated are discussing the "smoker" problem, I think this an opportune moment to call attention to the abominable train service meted out to residents north of Wilson avenue by the Northwestern "L." When the track elevation was in progress we did not expect trains to run on schedule time, but even then there were not cars enough to take care of the passengers. Since the opening of the northern extension the only concession granted has been in the form of a few extra trains for the benefit of our southern neighbors, as the Evanston trains, with few exceptions, stop at all the express stations going and coming, and during most of the day are locals to and from Belmont. It is a common occurrence to find all seats occupied by the time a train arrives at Argyle from the north, yet passengers are loaded on at all stations down to Belmont.

AS TO COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Granville, O., Nov. 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Napoleon once said: "Scratch a Russian and find a Tartar." Is the time approaching when some cynic will say: "Scratch a college student and find a—ruffian"?

Justice, of course, forbids classing all American college students as sluggers, but recent events certainly raise doubts as to whether some of them are in training to become law abiding citizens.

The college that will suppress lawlessness and regulate athletics in the interests of humanity will be overcrowded with students, and the finer type of men won't be milksops, either. It is to be hoped that influential journals like THE TRIBUNE will aid college authorities to stiffen the sinews and rigorously eliminate the undesirable student.

EMIGRANTS BACK IN MAGYAR HOME

Many Return to Hungary from America, Some with Much Money.

LIVING IS CHEAPER HERE.

Coming of Galician Jews to the Towns Makes Departure of Natives Serious.

BY GEORGE A. DORSEY, PH. D., LL. D.

[Copyright: 1909: By Tribune Company.]

NYIREGYHAZA, Hungary, Aug. 16.—I have visited the houses of a number of those who have been in America or who have friends there. These do not differ in any material respect from those I saw in Hajdudorog. I talked with the wife of a man, at the time working in another part of the city, who made three trips to America. On the first visit he sent home 1,400 crowns, with which he purchased a house. On his second and third visits he was unsuccessful, and his wife was obliged to sell the house to pay his passage home on the third visit. They are now living in a tiny single room house and apparently are in straitened circumstances.

Another man I talked with worked for a fur novelty dealer on Broadway, New York. He proved a jolly, well fed man, who apparently had been successful. His is the largest peasant house I have seen, well furnished, with floors of wood, covered with rugs. He has taken out his first citizen papers, and returns to New York next week. As soon as he is sure of a good position he will send for his wife and family. His wife has been in America, and two of his children were born there. There is no doubt of his enthusiasm for America or his belief of its superior advantages over Hungary. I found him in a gauze undershirt and a pair of American trousers, barefooted.

Large Farm Owned by a Jew.

A mile or so beyond the town I found a large farm of several hundred acres owned by a Jew. He does not live on the farm, but in town, and hires his help by the day or month. On the farm near the road I found a long, low, whitewashed house with three rooms. The living room of the house has a wood floor and is pretty well furnished. I was told that the house was better than the average. The little narrow beds were piled high with big, clean looking pillows. About the house were perhaps a dozen blue eyed fair haired boys and girls; in front of the house was an exceedingly vile pond in which were lots of ducks, and beyond was the stable where the cows are sheltered during the winter. About the house and the stable was a general atmosphere of disorder. The occupants were plainly tenants.

While we were there two men came up who had been in America. The first one was dressed in peasant costume and barefooted. He had worked in a pipe factory in New York two years and a half; during that time he sent home 3,000 crowns. He likes New York, and proposes to return in the spring. Should he succeed he will send for his wife and four children. At the present time he is working "on shares" in a tobacco field. If he has good luck with the crop he will make $40. If he has bad luck he may make little or nothing. He displayed a considerable enthusiasm over America, and said the nights are better there than the days in Hungary; that there he gets meat every day, here only two or three times a week. This man has a fine face, a good physique, and like all the peasants that I have met is keen and intelligent.

Finds Living Cheaper in America.

While we were talking another man came up who had spent two years and a half in Bridgeport, Conn. He returned to Hungary last year owing to inability to find work. He will go back to America next year if he can secure the necessary funds. He is now taking care of a flock of sheep. He wore a typical peasant's costume and primitive cow hide sandals. He also maintains that living is cheaper in America than in Hungary. This man is of slight build, but has an open, frank countenance. In him, as in the other, one detects at once the characteristic Magyar traits of self-confidence and politness.

There is a museum in Nyiregyhaza, now in process of rearrangement, in charge of an old man who loves his specimens and knows all about them. The museum is exclusively prehistoric in its contents and contains some of the finest bronze weapons and utensils to be found in any museum in the world.

It was pointed out to me with some degree of pride that the city is lighted by electricity. The gasoline tram furnishes communication across the long axis of the town. In the plaza in the heart of the city is a statue to George Bessenyei, who was born here, and who is sometimes titled the founder of Hungarian poetry.

As illustrating the pride of the Magyar in his own nationality, the remark of one of the minor officials is interesting. This man was especially resentful toward the Slovaks who go to America and pose as Magyars.

From the seeds of the sunflowers which may be found so frequently in the Alföld farms, is made lubricating and illuminating oil, used almost exclusively by the peasants.

Distrust of Roumanians.

I have found here amongst the officials the same distrust encountered elsewhere of the Roumanian. They claim that the Roumanians were not only disloyal to Hungary in the revolution in '49, but they have been disloyal ever since. It is maintained that they have scarcely any education, less than 5 per cent knowing how to read and write. I also found here the same distrust and dislike of the incoming tide of Jews which I found in Debreczen. Up to 1840 the Jews were denied the privilege of residence in many Hungarian towns and they were not even allowed to pass the night in such towns. Certain municipalities and estates tolerated Jews and kept them in a condition which bordered on serfdom. In 1840 they were granted the right to live in towns and in 1867 they were accorded certain citizen's rights. In 1895 they were given the privilege of intermarrying with the Christians. The great majority of the descendants of these early settlers in this country are now well to do, control practically all the business of the town, and many of them have become rich.

But recently the Jews have begun to come in from Galicia. These are Russian Poles, poor and extremely orthodox in their religion and appearance and are not liked. Their language is Yiddish. The number of Jews in Debreczen has increased from 3,000 in 1890 to 6,000 in 1900. At first they lead a miserable existence, but soon become petty dealers and keepers of inns. They decline to do a cash business; in fact, insist on giving credit; especially do they like to exchange their wares and spirits for butter, eggs, and grain, and to extend credit in every way. Thus gradually they come to own the peasant's crops, and finally his few acres.

Permission to Build Synagogue.

Just recently these Jews in Debreczen have been given permission to build an orthodox church, but only on condition that the services are held in Magyar. This immigration of orthodox Jews into Szabolcs county is keenly resented, but the authorities are powerless to stop it. As one official explained, the emperor of Austria is anti-Semitic, but as king of Hungary he is pro-Semitic. Many of the Jews, in fact the majority of those who settled two or three decades ago, have found it profitable to become Magyarised, and the younger generation today has become to a large extent Christianized. In many cases one may still detect their origin in the names on their shops, but more often Weiss has become Veszi; Kohn, Kardos; Weinberger, Biro; Klein, Kiss; Rosenfeld, Rado; and Grunhut, Mezei. These few examples of the transformation of non-Magyar into Magyar names are characteristic of a movement which has and is taking place not only among Jews but even among other nationalities in Hungary.

There remains to be described before taking leave of this northeast section of the Alföld certain impressions of the territory which I have passed through in making a wide detour between Debreczen and Nyiregyhaza. On this journey I made three changes of cars; the trains arrived and departed on time to the minute. This is not to be wondered at, however, for the running time of the local trains is so slow that the wonder is that they arrive on time and not ahead of time.

To the north of Hajdudorod the country becomes open and there is much pasture land, but still there are the wide cornfields and the smoke of many thrashing machines. The type of the peasant's costume, especially in color and decoration, changes and becomes more picturesque. Farm wagons drawn by horses give way to ox carts.

At Tiszalok, at the western end of Szabolcs county, the Hegyalja mountains appear. These are the foothills of the Carpathians and mark the northern limit of the Alföld. Beyond this point to the west the railway passes through rolling country, with great meadows and many tobacco fields. I noted twelve four-ox teams plowing and harrowing in one field with modern implements. Each team was in charge of a boy. From Görögszallas to Szerencs are many fine tobacco fields in which are working many women and girls. Near one of the stations between these two towns I saw two naked children, the first I have seen in Hungary.

On Canal Embankment.

Next we cross a canal and run for miles on a high embankment over a low plain, narrow to the right and shut in by the hills of the Tokaj region; on the left the plain extends as far as the eye can reach on a perfectly dead level. On this plain are literally thousands of haystacks and long rows of beautiful poplar trees. Across the River Tisza, we stop at the station of Tokaj, famous all over the world for its wine, Tokay souvenir bottles of which are sold alongside the train by a woman. Beyond the station and for miles on the right hand side rise the hills of Tokaj, forming one vast vineyard which extends up the hillside 270 feet. Then the hills recede on the right, the plain becomes wider and continues on the left as far as the eye can reach, vast meadows alternating with great cornfields. The region about here is as beautiful as any I have ever seen.

The way is now toward the southwest, but the fertility and beauty of the land are continued. At Miskolcz the road turns toward the south, with the mountains still in sight on the west and the north. Tobacco fields are succeeded by corn and wheat and alfalfa. Then for more than half an hour our train, now express and running at a good rate of speed, passes through a single estate, consisting almost entirely of the most beautiful and the vastest meadow I have ever seen. The sun had gone down behind the mountains and the last picture before the night came on was a great herd of sheep down in the plain, in charge of a shepherd and his wife. Each stood in a characteristic attitude, the shepherd wrapped in his coat, with his long pipe, his cowhide sandals, and leaning on his crook. This is the great Alföld, pure and undefiled.

CALLS RICH BIGGER CRIMINALS.

Wisconsin Archbishop Defends Lower Classes Against Charge of Being Only Crime Breeders.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In a sermon at the dedication of the new St. Bernard's church and school Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee combated the oft made charge that the lower classes breed criminals.

"It always provokes me to hear about the ignorance of the poor and to hear the lower classes put down as the only breeders of criminals," he said.

"It is a lie. It is a foolish statement made by foolish people. If a study of the lives of the rich be made it will be found that the greater crimes are committed by them, and that there are greater tricks employed to prevent publicity."

COLLEGES ARE BEHIND TIMES?

Banker Says Institutions Fail to Train Men for Business of the Present Day.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 26.—That the American colleges are 100 years behind the times in fitting young men for business life was the charge made today by Vice President James G. Cannon of the Fourth National bank of New York in an address before the Massachusetts Teachers' association. Mr. Cannon said there was a surprising lack of business training. He advocated an immediate change in the curriculum.

To Those Whose Pianos Are Unsatisfactory.

An inferior piano, at best, is but a makeshift, an imitation.

It is a source of annoyance, a constant reminder that you have either bought without judgment or that you have been misled in making your selection.

It may be taken as evidence that you lack discrimination; it is a detriment, not a help, to musical education.

Such a piano should be a daily suggestion of the necessity for replacing it by one in whose qualities you can find pleasure and a means for satisfactory musical development.

There is no premium to be paid on our pianos. You do not pay any more for one of these instruments than it is actually worth—not so much as it may be worth, perhaps, if you place a just estimate on its returns in enjoyment and education.

We invite you at least to satisfy yourself of the opportunities we offer. To examine our pianos will give you a clear idea of what a good instrument is and its worth.

You can inspect at your leisure the Mason & Hamlin, Conover, Cable, Kingsbury, Wellington, and Inner-Player Pianos—a complete range of reliable grades.

DE MORGAN'S LATEST ROMANCE IS A DISTINCT LITERARY DISAPPOINTMENT.

Characters a Lot of Shillyshallying Folk, Weak and Contemptible, Do Not Interest.

We are sorry to say it, but Mr. William de Morgan's latest novel, "IT NEVER CAN HAPPEN AGAIN," is a disappointment. To those who have fallen quickly and naturally into the way of counting on this writer for transportation to rich blooming fields of fiction, this disappointment will come almost in the nature of a personal misfortune. Though this gentleman has been writing for but five short years, he has given the lovers of fine fiction three substantial and unforgettable novels in which the contemporary style, and the manner of fifty years back were felicitously mixed, so that the reader experienced a delightful blend of literary impressions—one reminiscent, the other outlooking.

Signs of failing concentration appear, however, in this latest book, and the charm seems broken. The interest is not focused, but is distributed among too many characters. Dickens used to introduce a large number of characters, and at times the relationship established between them was tenuous indeed, but at least one had no doubt as to the identity of his hero and his heroine. True, some of the subordinate characters might, because of their eccentricities, remain fixed more vividly in his memory than the personalities of the protagonists. But for all that, the proper estimation of the dramatic values was one of the constituents of Dickens' power. He knew which person to keep at the front of the stage. Let pathos have its storms and mirth her frolic, still the heroic figures of his hero and heroine arose above all else, securing and holding the sympathy of the reader.

It is precisely in such concerns as these that Mr. De Morgan has failed. He has offered us a group of shilly-shallying folks, whose weakness and contemptibility distress us almost to the point of making us cast aside the book. There is a somewhat shadowy character, a clergyman, whom we might like if we were permitted really to form his acquaintance; and, aside from that, the only persons with whom we feel at home are a blind sailor who begs and his daughter, who dies at the age of 7.

No quarrel is to be picked with Mr. De Morgan for killing off his quaint little Lizeran of the slums. Little children in real life as well as in fiction often attain the sweetest sort of immortality by being incased in the memory like flies in amber, by the ever new and strange incident of death. The old sailor man, her father, is slain, too, in the most popular method, by a speeding automobile, and the tears we shed for him are of the sort which mark the book as sincerely pathetic. But we cannot forgive the Philistine wife of the hero—a hero with the moral rickets—nor the utter villainy of the villainess.

Finally, it may be said that the book is interminable, that it is difficult to fix the attention upon it, and that its innumerable digressions have lost the charm that similar excursions had, in the previous books by this author. The story hinges upon that grotesque, but now rescinded law forbidding a man to marry his deceased wife's sister. Hence the title, "It Never Can Happen Again." (Henry Holt & Co., publishers.)

It would be a dull Christmas which did not see the issuing of a number of new editions of that favorite poem of our neo-pagans, the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, as it is immortally Fitzgeraldized. Several new editions appear this year, among them one from the house of George H. Doran company, New York. The illustrations are by Edmund Dulac and are in color. The spirit in which they are conceived is one of beauty and irony mixed, and the effective caricature which now and then appears in them is well suited to the bitterness of the great Omar's accent. The margins of each illustration are design in gold, presumably of Persian inspiration. The press work is interesting and unusual, the ink being a dark, slate color with sepia page margins. The cover is white canvas with a design of a conventional character, in which peacocks, elephants, and lotus insinuate the oriental character of the contents. It would be diverting, did not lack of space forbid, to comment at greater length upon the paradox of the pious attention paid to the most pessimistic of pagans by the occidental Christian. Perhaps the secret of the poem's singularity lies in the fact that it saves us the offense of uttering our own doubts.

Mr. Henry James is never so much what we are always wanting and expecting him to be as when he writes about his journeys into other lands than ours. When he writes about us, let us candidly admit we are not so well pleased. The truth is, he never wanted to understand the American, or to get at the idealistic core of him. The violently constructive game of life does not commend itself to Mr. James' admiration. But when he writes about Italy, when to the demand beauty has upon him, is added the appeal that pathos makes, Mr. James is felicitous indeed. His "ITALIAN HOURS" consists of a group of articles written at one time and another for various periodicals, and now collected in one volume, all commemorating experiences in Italy.

It cannot be said that Mr. James' adventures in Italy differ greatly from the experiences of other folk, nor does he for a moment assert that they do. But he brings to happy excursions by lagoon and grassy pathway, by pre-Christian temples and mediæval palaces, a delicate play of fancy which could emanate from no mind not saturated in literature, or vivified with a sincere and instinctive love of all the arts. Moreover, Mr. James would not be Mr. James were he unconscious of the human figures in his landscapes and architectural pieces. He introduces the human element now and again into his descriptions in a manner inimitably his own, making them no more vivid than is consistent with the purposes of the essay, and at the same time redeeming the essays from that dismal abstractedness which forever menaces the essay. The temptation to quote is strong, but it requires, after all, no quotation to convince the public that Henry James is delicious when he writes of Italy.

The illustrations by Mr. Joseph Pennell give us pause. They are almost monochromatic, the prevailing tone being a dun brown, with tawny lights here and there. Mr. Pennell evidently has desired at all costs to avoid mere prettiness, and it may be that, looking up at some fourteenth century hill town on a rainy day, he saw the sad gloom of the rotting walls and said to himself that Italy could be delineated in neutral hues. There is no denying that under an autumnal sky the glooming cathedral in the almost deserted Isle of Torcello can be brown enough; no questioning the mellow dimness of the towers without the Florentine gates; no gainsaying that the façade of St. Mark's itself can seem on some windy day to grow old and wrinkled and bowed with a weight of its own shames and sorrows. But for all of this, it may well be questioned if Mr. Pennell has been true to facts, or even more subtly true to essences, in picturing Italy under somber skies, with brown reaches of foreground and frowning edifices in the place of that urbane architectural, smile—broken, yet polite, like that of a decayed nobleman—with which Italy greets even the rawest of her admirers. The celebrated technique of Pennell, his sureness of touch, his fine comprehension of the best limits to set for a composition, cannot make up for the mere sense of depression caused by his sad colored pictures. He aimed for distinction, but he seems after all to have achieved no more than an annoying oddity which convicts him of self-consciousness. Every page of description in Mr. James' book discountenances Mr. Pennell's coloring. We read a paragraph like this, for example: "The shrubs and flowers about the ancient well were blooming away in the intense light, and the twisted pillars and chiseled capitals of the perfect little colonnade seemed to inclose them like the sculptured rim of a precious vase. Standing out among flowers you may look up and see a section of the summit of the great façade of the church. The sky was ultramarine and everything radiant with light and warmth—warmth which a steady, soft breeze kept from excess."

And then we turn from that, the truth of which we recognize, to Mr. Pennell's anticlimacteric pictures, and find it hard to forgive an artist who can be so exhilarating and who chose on this occasion to be merely odd. (Houghton-Mifflin company.)

Those interested in Africa in general, and in the hunting of big game in particular, will find in "THE LAND OF THE LION" a record to their taste. The author is Mr. W. S. Rainsford, a noted American clergyman, and one who has hunted in various parts of the world, and who has combated and conquered the most dangerous beasts.

His record of a prolonged African hunt gains from the fact that he usually wrote the history of each day's experiences as he went along. The result is a spontaneity and vigor which never could have been secured by any other method. His enthusiasm over each day's adventure is still warm and glowing as he writes, and since, in a book of this sort, it is the exciting and graphic account which is desired, and not the polished literary manner, the book is precisely what it ought to be.

Mr. Rainsford confesses to that subjection to the spell of Africa which is felt not only by those who have visited the dark continent but by thousands who never have and who never expect to set foot in its mysterious forests or ride through its tossing grasses. Though Mr. Rainsford went out to shoot lions, he had an eye to many other things than game. He has avoided, however, the hackneyed subjects. He knows what has been written about Africa and is at some pains to avoid a retelling of well known facts. As the chronicle of a man to whom adventure is as the breath of his nostrils, yet who undertakes such diversion only as a rest from hard and important work, this volume will have a genuine interest for busy Americans. Many of our most high spirited men refuse to seek amusement because they can find no form of it which intrigues their interest. After their invigorating game of "business" all other things seem tame. It would appear that Mr. Rainsford is of this kind also. No mild diversion would have satisfied him. But with a brave mute under him, two or three congerial companions, a great company of black men at his back, and death dealing wild beasts to meet and slay, he finds adventure worthy of his metal. The book is illustrated with photographs. (Doubleday, Page & Co.)

"THE CATHEDRAL CITIES OF SPAIN," by W. W. Collins, is a book of personal observation recorded with pen and brush. It is not at all by way of adverse criticism that one feels impelled, in the interest of candor, to say that Mr. Collins saw his Spain with the eye of an artist first and of a writer incidentally. The beautiful surface of things is what appeals to him. The color enchants him, the mysterious perfection of the old cathedral piles hold him in thrall, and he has enthusiastically reproduced their beauty. His written record is agreeable and replete with information which will aid the traveler to appreciate this land of violent contrasts and of exhaustless fascination, but the record, it must be confessed, lacks originality. There are sixty full paged colored plates. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

PUBLICATION OF EMERSON'S JOURNALS AN EVENT IN LITERARY HISTORY.

Edited by His Son and Grandson, They Complete the Works of the Sage of Concord.

It is a great Christmas present that Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have given us in the two volumes of Emerson's Journals that will be published this week. These Journals, as journals, have never been published before though they contain the beginnings of some of the Concord sage's finest thoughts.

The Journals are edited by Edward Waldo Emerson and Waldo Emerson Forbes, the son and grandson, if I am not mistaken, of Ralph Waldo Emerson. Emerson's publishers have long known of the existence of these journals and in 1902 they asked permission to publish them with the centenary edition of Emerson's works. The matter was referred to Mr. Cabot, Emerson's executor. He said "Yes" to the suggestion, as he considered that the time was ripe for this first record of Emerson's thoughts to be given to the world. Mr. Cabot, who was no longer young, declined to do the work of editing and turned that task over to Mr. Edward Waldo Emerson. It is well that he did, for the consent had barely been given before Mr. Cabot died. His last instructions to Mr. Emerson were to take time and not do the work too hurriedly. Mr. Cabot belonged to another generation, and to him hurry in work of this sort was unseemly. It is now seven years since the work was begun, and it is unquestionably all the better for the time that has been given to it.

At first the editors thought only to give the later and more mature journals of Emerson, but upon thinking the matter over and taking the advice of the judicious they decided to begin with the beginning. They argued that "those who care about Emerson, his thought and ideals, may wish to look beyond the matured and sifted work that he left in his books, and see the youth in his apprenticeship, the priest in his novitiate and in his full office caring for his people; his studies, questionings, and hopes."

Thanks to this wise editing, we may now trace the growth of his "literary taste, his style, his independence of thought, and originality in writing verse." In almost every life there is an "influence." In the life of Emerson that influence was his aunt, Miss Mary Moody Emerson, "poor, remote, only self-educated, hungry for knowledge, extraordinarily well read, exalted in her religious thought, critical but proud of her nephews, especially Ralph, and a tireless correspondent." The most careful youthful writings of Emerson are his letters to this aunt.

After 1833 the journals become more interesting as the life of the man became more interesting. It is curious, in these more liberal days, to read that Emerson when he stood for free thought in literature and religion was regarded by "professors, clergy, and leading citizens," as "visionary, dangerous, or insane." His journals show how bravely he stood up against the tide which came near outlawing him as speaker and writer. At one time it looked much as though he would have to go to farming to make a living for himself and family, for there was now a new Mrs. Emerson and several little children. Finally the tide turned and Emerson was on the top wave of intellectual popularity. Naturally he was pleased, but he never said "I told you so."

As the journals go on we find comments not only on the books that he read, but upon the people that he met, and he met the best, the giants of those days.

In among his meditations upon life and love I find a joke. No comment is made, it is merely recorded. He is up among the White mountains and the incident is recorded in a paragraph by itself:

"'Ah me,' said the mourner to me, 'how natural he looked when they had put on his dickey!'

"'It was this that caught him,' said the wife to me, touching her pearl earring."

I do not know whether Emerson recorded this as a bit of grim humor or as an illustration of a certain point of view. It is interesting, however, no matter how you may classify it.

Mr. Haldane Macfall has made a most beautiful and interesting book on the "FRENCH PASTELLISTS OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY" (Macmillan). It is more than a gift book, for it has value not only for its letter press, but for the unusual quality of its reproductions in color. They give all the effect of pastel work which is so much more alive than oil. It is a great medium for the artist, but alas it is a fragile and as readily destroyed as the characters of the ladies whom it has immortalized. The artists have caught the light and airy grace of the women whom they depicted better than they have solidity of the men, for the reason, perhaps, that pastels lend themselves more readily to light and airy than to sober subjects. Mr. Macfall has caught the style of the pastellists in his writing, which is much more French than English in its airy grace.

JEANNETTE L. GILDER.

The story of "THE WARES OF EDGEFIELD," by Sarah Orne White, would read like real life to one familiar with the peculiarities of society in a New England town. To any reader it would carry a sense of the writer's sincerity, but to one of western training it would suggest a discomfort and narrowness beyond the sanction of experience. The book portrays one phase of life and it contains a lesson that every man is his own worst enemy. One's first criticism of it is that it sobers rather than uplifts. (Houghton-Mifflin company.)

The People's Leader in the Struggle for National Existence

By GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM, Litt.D., author of "Books and their Makers in the Middle Ages," etc.

With Photogravure Portrait, $1.25 net (by mail, $1.40).

With the above is included the speech delivered by Lincoln in New York, February 27th, 1860; with an introduction by Charles C. Nott, late Chief Justice of the Court of Claims, and annotations by Judge Nott and by Cephas Brainerd of the New York Bar.

The volume presents the main events in the career of the people's leader. The development of Lincoln's character and the growth of his powers from boyhood through his work at the Bar, in his work as a leader in the political contests that preceded the war for the restriction of slavery, and his final service to the country as War President and commander-in-chief of its forces, are recorded in outline, but with such measure of comprehensiveness as serves to make the picture and the record practically complete.

PHILLPOTTS' NOVEL "THE HAVEN" IS A DISAPPOINTMENT.

The Inspiring Breath Which Runs Through His Other Stories Is Here Lacking.

MR. PHILLPOTTS, whose previous books have been filled with so many readable characters and friends, has written another, "THE HAVEN" (John Lane company), which is a great disappointment, if one takes it up with the hope of enjoying it with the wholeheartedness of its predecessors. "The Haven" is situated in a little town, Brixham, on the coast of Devonshire. An old seaman, his son and daughter, and their friends make up the characters. The father is doomed to sorrow through his children from the beginning, for his son, whom he had hoped would carry on the calling of the fishermen, which had been his and his forefathers' for generations, hated the water and loved the land, and the daughter loved and married a man at whom suspicion seemed to point because of his hardihood.

Other characters, closely connected with these, who are fitted or unfitted for the place they hold in life, make up the personnel of the book and bring to pass the incidents upon which the story is built. In the course of the narrative as in the course of life, some gravitate toward those things for which they are adapted, others lose themselves hopelessly, and there is still the third class, which, under the stir of emotion, hurl themselves back with gratitude upon that which was before hated. So it was that the father found joy upon the last day of his life, and seemed satisfied, though the fact that his son turned toward the sea meant that his own nature had been transformed through a great sorrow. The novel has the impress of human truth upon it, but it is cumbersome, awkward, and tedious to a high degree.

For some reason the inspiring breath that has carried the reader through many pages of the other stories is here lacking, it might be from lack of perfect sympathy with the characters, or because the author, loving the land, the hills, the fields, and the people who live upon them, is less certain of himself when he attempts to tell of their habits of life and thought.

A young man who finds there is no longer a place for him in what he supposed was his uncle's house, takes his fortune in his pocket and sets off on a world tour, finally arriving in the city of London. There he is accosted by an old man who calls him "Lord John," and despite the remonstrances of the other asserts that he is the lost earl. Others persist in the assertion and the man, seeing no other way out of the difficulty, accepts tentatively events as they are thrust upon him. Such is the opening of the new story by Frederic Van Rensselaer Day, "A GENTLEMAN OF QUALITY" (Page). The narrative continues disclosing the life of the pseudo earl as he believes himself to be until such time as the return of a long absent relative gives occasion for the elucidation of the mystery.

The plot is most cleverly managed, the incidents have all a telling value toward the end, the dénouement is managed and the epilogue added which is in sound agreement with the desires of the novel reader, is in accord with the dictates of good taste, and the book, as a whole, is one that never fails to hold the attention, while at the same time it exhibits the better sides of men's natures. The plot is not wildly exciting, but there is that steady stream of interest which increases as the tale goes on, as does the reader's admiration of the man who finds himself in what under other circumstances might have been an embarrassing situation.

A little book, "THE LADY NURSE OF WARD E" (The Baker & Taylor company), comes to remind us of some of the suffering of the four years' conflict between the north and south. In 1862 President Lincoln conceived the idea of having an army hospital in the vicinity of the steamboat landing of the city of Washington, and accordingly what was known as the Armoty Square hospital was established. There the wounded soldiers were brought throughout the conflict, and as there were not enough trained nurses, the services of volunteers, called "the ladies," were gratefully accepted. Among the latter was Mrs. Amanda Akin Stearns, the author of the present book. It is no more, however, than a printing of her letters to her family and then of her diary, written during the part of a year she worked in ward E. An account of Whitman's visit to the hospital is also included. There is no expansion of the account originally transcribed, but the letters or the entries are permitted to tell their own tale, one of sorrow and dignity.

The mystery which is at the bottom of Caroline Atwater Mason's story, "THE MYSTERY OF MISS MOTTE" (Page), is of as harmless, ingenuous a nature as the whole book, not a terrifying matter at all, and yet not one that will command a large amount of attention from the reader. Miss Motte, who is an efficient church worker in a parish whose head is bent upon fashion and luxury, becomes enamored with a youth, and he with her, who comes to fill the position of assistant to the before mentioned prelate. He is earnest, enthusiastic, and an ascetic, so that his advent is productive of a change in the viewpoint of his superior. As for the heroine and the mystery surrounding her, it is sufficient to make her refuse several offers of matrimony, and is only satisfied toward the close of the book, when the secret of her birth is learned, and the additional fact that she is a descendant of a noble family, and is the heiress of a considerable fortune. This is to be used in the service of religion in her native Indian country. The story is gentle and not wholly without charm, but it is a slight thing, and there has been little attempt to give it vitality or originality.

An attractive little book, rather whimsical in its plot and certainly in its choice of characters, is "AN UNOFFICIAL LOVE STORY" (The Century company), by Albert Hickman. In a little village of Canada, which is rapidly declining, lives a young girl, who makes the most of her many charms to win to her side the stray young men that temporarily wander into that region. Finally comes a representative of the foreign office, and she is at her wits' end to capture him, then to hold him and secure him. Her means to accomplish her ends are original in the extreme, but as they gain her object and satisfy the demands of the novel reader there can be no no valid objection raised. The story may be enjoyed throughout the greater part of an hour, and then as its gave pleasure, is a pretty thing to look at, may well be passed to another whom in a spirit of friendliness we would assist to a few minutes' enjoyment.

A gay little book for small children is Grace Duffie Boylan's "YAMA YAMA LAND" (The Reilly & Britton company). Sylvia on her birthday resolves to go riding in her red car, which "takes the bit in its teeth," so to speak, and refuses to stop when the little chauffeuse has finished her ride. On and on it goes until it meets a queer little man whose hat, shoes, and cloak are three cornered. With this agreeable person she journeys to the land of rainbows, finds where all the lost pins are kept, and, to make a long story short, passes through a most astonishing experience. The book fairly blazes with colored pictures by Edgar Keller, and on the fly leaf there are two black lines with "For" and "From," so that names of donor and recipient will be written, not on the bias, but straight, as they should be.

ADLAI E. STEVENSON'S RECOLLECTIONS OF POLITICAL NOTABLES.

"Something of Men I Have Known," a Book of Reminiscence Concerning Public Life.

IT is not easy to characterize "SOMETHING OF MEN I HAVE KNOWN" (A. C. McClurg & Co.), a book containing the personal reminiscences of Adlai E. Stevenson. The general terms of the title are appropriate, for the 400 odd pages contain material which varies widely from the ordinarily found in the memoirs of a public man. If there is orderly arrangement, it does not appear to the reader. The chapters show no thought of chronological sequence. Perhaps the impression given of reminiscences likely to be noted in the course of chance conversations with a public man is the suggestion of the real value and charm of the book.

In many respects it is a printed scrap book containing many more or less effective bits of poetry, a large number of good stories, ten or a dozen formal speeches by the author, a collection of essays on topics of historical and political interest, and many pages of running comment upon men of different parties and opposing ideas, some of this being helpful to the one who likes to know about those who have made history, some of it mere flattering allusion of no value. The effect of years in softening the asperities of politics was never better illustrated than in this book, where hostile criticism and sharp censure are notably absent. Some of the topics appear to be literally dragged in, such as an account of dueling in the United States, the story of the Mormons, the review of the Lincoln-Douglas campaign, and the account of the senate. In a number of other cases comparatively unimportant incidents are used as sufficient grounds for retelling tales of earlier days in no way associated with the life of the writer of the book. A collection of anecdotes connected with the legal profession is an illustration of this tendency. This does not mean that Mr. Stevenson's reminiscences are uninteresting. The reverse is true.

The book is filled with matter well worth reading. The sidelights it casts upon the history of Illinois, the tribute to Grover Cleveland, the flotsam and jetsam of American politics, the evident appreciation of the humorous incidents of life, the stories told of men prominent in the history of Illinois and the nation all add elements of lively interest. It is this illustrative material that will be remembered by the reader rather than any connected story of an era in American political history in which Mr. Stevenson played a part with a distinct policy and purpose reflected in these recollections of his later years.

The principal events in the life of Capt. Grant Marsh afford the substantial basis for "THE CONQUEST OF THE MISSOURI" (A. C. McClurg & Co.), by Joseph Mills Hanson. A trustworthy memory and a correct appreciation of the significance of experiences made Capt. Marsh admirably fitted for telling the story of the redemption and opening to settlement of the vast area through which the Missouri flows in its long channel from the mountains to the Mississippi. The upper valley was the scene of his most notable adventures and the impressions he formed during a busy life have been carefully reviewed by critical experts who have corrected the occasional errors or added touches which strengthen the narrative. Mr. Hanson has interwoven the history from a wider outlook necessary to give the right setting to the personal reminiscences of an actor in the various campaigns through which the United States government quieted the Indians and made available for eager settlers the great domain included in the two Dakotas and Montana. The lover of tales of adventure, the reader who likes to follow the career of Indian fighters, the enthusiast who is zealous for the new cause of inland navigation, and the one who finds constant attractiveness in every volume telling of the way in which the frontier has been pushed forward as the United States has filled up with people, will each turn from this interesting book with satisfaction. It is an important addition to the lengthening list of McClurg publications on the winning of the west.

In "AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY" (Houghton, Mifflin company) attention is called to the new demands made upon the United States by the changed relationships in world affairs which recent years have brought. "A Diplomatist," for so the author veils his identity, reviews briefly the story of the past, and then opens up the possibilities connected with American attitude toward the Latin republics, the far east, the near east, provided diplomatic service is elevated to the position it should have in the nation's policy. The recent changes in the state department relative to diplomatic work and the additional improvements remaining to be made are outlined. The magnitude of the country's new responsibilities and the loftiness of its manifest destiny is the rounded phrasing which indicates the thought of the writer. To help in stimulating public opinion to a better realization of the importance of diplomacy and its needed contribution to the national welfare is the mission of this suggestive volume, easily read at one sitting.

Oliver Marble Gale and Harriet Wheeler have produced a readable story in "A KNIGHT OF THE WILDERNESS" (Reilly & Britton company). It is a narrative in which Abraham Lincoln plays a conspicuous part. He is introduced on a flatboat run aground in the Sangamon river, and the droll remarks of the tall young boatman amuse the inhabitants of New Salem as they watch his efforts to bring his craft out of its troubles. He is seen as a clerk in the village store, studying his grammar between tasks and giving youths of the village effective lessons in wrestling.

In scenes presenting the Indians, the villagers, and the lovers, Lincoln appears at frequent intervals, and always the best word is spoken, the wisest advice given, and the kindest act performed by the great emancipator. Black Hawk and his dusky tribe, Jefferson Davis and other historical personages come and go, while not the least engaging of the characters are the gallant young Virginian and the pretty girl he loves. There are fights with the Indians, who capture two maidens, and a number of incidents cleverly contrived to woo the favor of the true lover of vigorous romance.

CLARK E. CARR'S BIOGRAPHY OF STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Emphasis Laid Upon Statesman's Purity of Character and Deep Patriotism.

THE interpretation of the career of Stephen A. Douglas made about a year ago by Prof. Allen Johnson of Iowa college as a study in American politics was an attempt by a teacher of today to catch the spirit of those who adhered to the "little giant of Illinois" with faithful enthusiasm. "STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS," by Clark E. Carr (A. C. McClurg & Co.), supplements the impressions gained from a reading of former publications with the memories and the judgments of one whose "day and generation" began when the senator was a power in national affairs. Although Republican in politics and antagonistic to the theories which Mr. Douglas held, Col. Carr believes that scant justice has been done to a statesman whose nobility and purity of character, sublime patriotism, and transcendent abilities have not had the appreciation they rightly deserve.

The narrative ranges through many years of national history, is illustrated by numerous pictures of prominent men of varied type, and is supported by a hundred and fifty pages of extracted material in the form of speeches and letters which make the appendix more extended than the main body of the text itself. Reminiscential in character, Mr. Carr's story brings out many interesting matters connected with the life of Douglas from the time when he walked into Winchester, sixteen miles from Jacksonville, an entire stranger and with 37½ cents in his pockets as his capital with which to begin life in the state that was to do him so much honor. Within four years Douglas was a candidate for congress and on the high road to fame. What took place between that day of small things and the deathbed scene ennobled by the last words of a patriot to his absent sons, "Tell them to obey the laws and support the constitution of the United States," all the world knows.

But the appreciative words of one of the few who remain who knew Douglas during his life will find welcome as an aid to the understanding of a man whose achievements suffered eclipse because of the trend of events which brought another and rival leader from Illinois into the forefront of the nation's great battlefield.

With a title suggested by Keats' ode, "THE BLUSHFUL SOUTH AND HIPPOCRENE" (Lippincott), Robert Loveman presents a volume of poems to the public. The majority of them are songs, however, either through fault of their lightness or because the author was desirous of avoiding that disagreeable practice of using the first line to designate the verse, being given no title. Many of them have a suggestion of the love songs of idleness of the period following Shakspeare; they are fanciful creations, not unpleasant to read, and yet transmitting not a bit of the reality of life. This, of course, cannot be maintained of all of them, for an element of seriousness enters into a few, but the general tone of the collection is light—and one may say diverting and refreshing.

LIEUTENANT SHACKLETON'S Own Story of His Antarctic Voyage, 1907-1909

The Heart of the Antarctic

With twelve full-page color plates, and over three-hundred marvellous illustrations from photographs actually taken by members of the expedition, and three colored maps.

NOTHING could be more timely than the publication of this wonderful work by a real discoverer whose achievements have placed him on a plane with such explorers as Peary and Cook. Although his goal lay in the opposite direction, and his path led into a much less explored section, he succeeded in locating the South Magnetic Pole and came almost within sight of the South Pole.

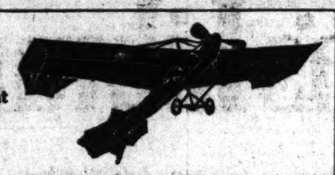

This is the first exhaustive book on a subject that is creating a veritable sensation in all parts of the civilized world at the present time. It is not merely made up of newspaper articles and fragmentary sketches, but is Lieutenant Shackleton's own account of a wonderfully successful expedition, carefully planned and executed. Outside of the important scientific facts and discoveries revealed in the book, it is full of exciting adventure, wonderfully illustrated, and is undoubtedly the greatest work of exploration and travel of the year.

A KNIGHT OF THE WILDERNESS

By OLIVER MARBLE GALE and HARRIET WHEELER

$1.50

Those who love the Lincoln character should read this big fresh novel at the open.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Abraham Lincoln is one of the dominating figures of the story. We see him in his earliest phases, as flatboatman, crossroads clerk, candidate for the Legislature, storekeeper, his backwoods district, and a soldier in the Indian wars. Already he is a virile and impressive personality, full of the milk of human kindness, with a shrewd philosophy and kindly humor ever at his tongue's end. He is shown to us as poring over his law books as he dangles his long legs from the counter of the New Salem general store between sales, 'wrestling' with some frontier champion while men in butternut and coonskin caps look on, dreaming fitful dreams to point an argument. His pastels love affair with Ann Rutledge is a mere shadowy intimation in the tale, but we are able to detect the first frost-touches of this great sorrow that was to ripen and soften and deepen Lincoln for all the after years. Lieutenant Jefferson Davis is one of the minor characters, and there is a suggestion given in the meeting of these two young men destined to be immortally antagonistic hidden and unhinted for in the future."

SALE OF PHILLIES GAINS WARD VOTE

New Owners of Philadelphia Nationals Elect Horace Fogel President.

WANT KLING TO MANAGE.

Overthrow of Dreyfuss-Herrmann Faction Seen in Sensational Deal.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In one of the most sensational deals known to major league baseball, the Philadelphia National league club was sold tody to a syndicate represented by Horace S. Fogel, a local sporting writer. Mr. Fogel was elected president of the new company and an offer of $15,000 was made for Catcher Kling, formerly of the Cubs, to manage the team if his reinstatement is obtained.

The deal has greater significance than its local features, however, for the transfer of the stock to new ownership means the overthrow of the Dreyfuss-Herrmann forces which have been backing President John Heydler for reëlection to that office next month, and the control of the National league by the coalition of John T. Brush of New York, Charles W. Murphy of Chicago, Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn, M. Stanley Robison of St. Louis, and the new Philadelphia owners.

Thousands to Elect Ward.

Involved in the sale is the most cunning coup known to fast set baseball, for the interests supporting the candidacy of John Montgomery Ward for the National league presidency virtually spent thousands of dollars to buy a club to make his election sure.

Prior to the sale four clubs were for the retention of Mr. Heydler and four clubs were against him, but under the rules he would hold office if a majority of the votes were not cast against him.

Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago club, knew that Senators McNichol and Wolf, former owners of the Phillies, had pledged their support to Heydler. When the news reached Murphy that Horace Fogel was in the market for the Phillies, the Chicago magnate at once lent his influence to the move on the belief that the new régime would remove the club from the Heydler column. In this instance it is said the Chicagoan had his wish fulfilled and that the Philadelphia club will cast its vote for the election of Mr. Ward for the National league presidency, which will break the deadlock.

"No Murphy Money in Deal."

Under National league rules no transfer of the ownership of a club can be made unless sanctioned by that body. Therefore Mr. Fogel welcomed the friendly offices of Mr. Murphy, who even went to the trouble of coming to Philadelphia to see the deal through, but of course merely in the rôle of an interested spectator.

Messrs. Murphy and Fogel may have talked over the National league presidency, or they may not have, but there is every reason to believe the Philadelphia vote will be cast for John Montgomery Ward.

At a dinner at the Majestic tonight given by Mr. Fogel to fellow members of his craft the new president said positively that no Murphy money was in the deal that made him the controlling factor of the Phillies.

"I have here," said Mr. Fogel, pulling out documents from his inner pocket, "987 shares of the 1,000 issued by the Philadelphia ball club, and every share is in my name. The only reason that I did not get the other thirteen shares is because the owner, who is a Mr. Fox of Drifton, is in Europe.

Mails $15,000 Check for Kling.

"I want to say that every dollar advanced for the purchase of the Phillies came from men born and bred in Philadelphia. The rumor that Charles W. Murphy or any of his interests helped in the sale is absolutely untrue. That report is entirely without foundation and I can't be too positive about it.

"The only way Murphy's name figures is because I wanted a National league owner to know about the deal, because I knew one had to in order that I would be satisfactory to the National league family. Murphy merely sanctioned me as an eligible member."

Another remarkable statement was made by the new president. He said he had mailed a check for $15,000 to the Chicago National league club for the purchase of John Kling, rated as the king of catchers in baseball. Kling did not play the entire season last year, owing to salary grievances.

This offer is a further indication of the close relations between the new Philadelphia ownership and Charles W. Murphy of Chicago. It is generally understood Kling will come to Philadelphia in the rôle of manager as well as backstop. This may be contingent on the action of the national commission, which is the "supreme court" of baseball. The commission suspended Kling for a period of three years for failure to report to the Chicago club last April, and for the additional offense of playing with an outlaw club.

Kling will not be able to play with the Phillies or any other club in organized baseball until this ban is raised.

May Compromise With Murray.

President Fogel, however, declared that he did not take the presidency of the new club with any malice toward Manager William Murray, Business Manager William Shettsline, or any of the players.

"We haven't decided on any changes," remarked President Fogel, "but we are business men and will make any move if we think the interests of the club will be improved."

Nevertheless, it is considered a foregone conclusion that the new ownership of the Phillies will try to effect a compromise with William Murray, whose contract as manager of the Phillies has two more years to run. A man involved in the deal said positively that Manager Murray would be superseded. In this respect it can be added that the holdings of William Shettsline, who for years represented the Phillies in almost every capacity, have been purchased by the new owners and that he no longer will be connected with the team in any way.

The price Fogel and his associates paid for the franchise and players was $350,000. In addition the new owners have an option on the big plant at Broad and Huntington for $300,000. This property is owned by Reach and Rogers, and the new owners will at once exercise the option and take over the property.

New Officers Elected.

As soon as the papers transferring the stock had been signed the representatives of the syndicate proceeded to Camden, N. J., and organized by electing Horace S. Fogel president, William Conway secretary, and Frank S. Elliott treasurer. These men, together with John A. Schwartz and Thomas Curley, will comprise the board of directors. This step was made necessary because the club is incorporated in New Jersey.

Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago club, represented his organization at the conference in order to see that the provisions of the National league constitution were properly observed. He denied that he was financially interested in the new organization.

The Philadelphia club was formerly owned by Clarence Wolf, a banker; James P. McNichol, a politician; and the late Israel W. Durham, also a political leader.

Of the new owners William Conway was formerly president of the Philadelphia Builders' exchange, Frank S. Elliott is a lawyer, John A. Schwartz a silk manufacturer, and Thomas Curley a lawyer and politician of Camden.

Efforts to obtain a statement from President Murphy regarding his connection with the deal and the likelihood of his accepting the offer of $15,000 for the services of Kling were unsuccessful. At the Majestic hotel, where Murphy usually stops when in the city, it was said that he was in Atlantic City. He did not attend tonight's meeting of the new owners nor the banquet at the hotel at which President Fogel entertained the sporting writers.

Attempts to locate the Chicago club owner in Atlantic City failed.

JOHN KLING

JOHNSON SOUNDS WAR NOTE

Will Quit Commission if Ward Succeeds Heydler.

THREATENS TO OUST MURPHY

Herrmann Says John Kling Is Ineligible to Organized Teams.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The attitude of Chairman Herrmann of the national commission and Ban Johnson of the American league toward the sale of the Philadelphia club and the candidacy of Ward is expressed in their own statements.

President Johnson came to town today on matters pertaining to the national commission and was wrought up when he learned the Quakers had been sold to a syndicate.

"Just say for me that the American league will refuse to serve on the national commission if John M. Ward is elected president of the National league," was his announcement.

"What is more, the American league is opposed to syndicate baseball in the National league and we will endeavor to drive Charlie Murphy from the game. We have worked hard to put the sport on a firm basis and to get the confidence of the public and will not stand for any one to manipulate the business end of the game simply for financial returns. That goes, and you can tell it to the whole world."

Mr. Herrmann, who was present when Johnson declared himself, showed plainly that he deplored the entrance of a syndicate into baseball.

"I am not in the least discouraged over the outlook," said Mr. Herrmann, "and though Mr. Heydler may be defeated for president I do not think that the future of the league is in danger. Baseball has won its way into the hearts of the people and the game must be honest in every detail. Owners realize this, and syndicate or no syndicate, the sport will be kept clean.

Herrmann Wants Heydler.

"I am for Heydler because he has proven himself true blue. He took up the duties of our departed president, Mr. Pulliam, in a masterly manner and deserves to be elected. I am for Heydler, but am not as confident that he will be elected as I was a few days ago."

When asked concerning the proposition of the release of Catcher Kling by the Chicago National league team for $15,000 to Philadelphia, Mr. Herrmann said:

"Kling is ineligible at present, but the commission will take no action in the matter unless he starts playing with Philadelphia or some other organized team. Then his case will be taken up."

"Why talk of Kling; he cannot play; he is ineligible for four years," declared President Johnson. "If he is sold the sale is a joke, or else some one is buncoed. I made this statement some time ago and I have not changed my opinion. There is no more chance of Kling playing with Philadelphia, or any other team in the National, American, or any other league in organized baseball, than there is of my becoming the next president of the National league with Charles W. Murphy's vote to secure my election."

Dreyfuss Surprised—Not Interested.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—When asked his opinion regarding the sale of the Philadelphia National league baseball club Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburg club, said: "Until I received a wire from a friend of mine in Philadelphia today I knew absolutely nothing about the sale and know nothing of the syndicate that is reported to be behind the deal. I was greatly surprised to hear that Horace S. Fogel was elected president."

When asked if he thought the purchase of Catcher John Kling for $15,000 was true he said:

"I do not think Kling will play ball again with a National league club and think the report that he will play for the Quakers is the result of the workings of a vivid imagination.

"I am unaware whether Mr. Murphy is connected with the new ownership of the club or not, and do not care. Murphy's affairs fail to interest me in the least."

Kling Has Quit for Good.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 26.—After reading the details of his provisional sale to the Philadelphia National league baseball club, John A. Kling said tonight he would not entertain any offers the owners of the club might make for his services. Neither will he play with any other club in the league.

"I am out of baseball for all time," said Kling. "My business interests are here. I am making money. Therefore here I shall stay."

It was learned tonight that Kling had just signed a seven years' lease for a site for a baseball park here, where his semi-professional baseball club will play.

MATHEWSON SENDS REGRETS.

Giant Hurler Writes He Is Unable to Go on Cuban Trip and Reulbach May Take Place.

A. M. McAllister, who is engineering the scheme to take a team of "all-star" ball players to Cuba for a three weeks' stay, was disappointed yesterday on hearing from Christy Mathewson that the latter would be unable to go to the island at this time. However, the trip will not be given up because of Matty, and the chances are Ed Reulbach will be taken along in his place. Edward will confer with Mr. McAllister this morning, and if terms are agreed on will make the journey.

"Ham" Hyatt, the Pittsburg utility man, has been engaged for Bransfield's job. Kitty having sent regrets. The berth originally reserved for Babe Adams will be occupied by Nap Rucker of Brooklyn. The team, which now includes Catchers Archer and Simon, Pitchers Brown, Camnitz, and Rucker, Infielders Hyatt, J. Miller, and McMillan, and Outfielders Bates, Thomas, and Magee, will start south as soon as a third sacker is secured. Hank O'Day will go along to umpire.

Joe Tinker, shortstop, actor, hunter, and editor, intends to make his season's theatrical bow in about two weeks. This time Joe will be in vaudeville and will have a lady with him. The first appearance will be at a west side theater.

DEMAREST VICTOR OVER FRENCHMAN.

Chicagoan Goes Out with Run of 102; Cline Beats Cutler with Ease.

SLOSSON QUITS TOURNEY.

Veteran Billiardist Declares Two Games in One Day Is a Great Injustice.

Standing of the Players.

	W.	L.	Pct.	High run.	High average.
Cline	3	1	.750	146	20 20-24
Demarest	3	1	.750	163	17 1-29
Sutton	2	1	.667	235	31 4-16
Slosson	1	1	.500	95	17 8-29
Cassignol	1	2	.333	101	16 10-29
Cutler	0	4	.000	153	15 23-30

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Calvin Demarest made another swift finish tonight in the 18.2 balk line billiard tournament and defeated Firmin Cassignol by a score of 500 to 474.

Demarest came from behind, passed the Frenchman with a run of 102 and went out. He and Harry Cline are tied for first place, each with three wins and one defeat.

Demarest's run was due to perfect balk line nursing and he clicked off the points with great rapidity. Earlier in the game he had protested a ruling by Referee McGraw. He fouled an object ball with his hand and the referee replaced the fouled ball to its original position. Demarest declared the referee hadn't the right to do that. He was behind at the time, but made a stubborn, uphill fight, winning the most interesting game of the tournament.

Slosson tonight announced his withdrawal from the tournament. He is scheduled for two games tomorrow. To schedule a man for two games on one day was an injustice, he said; hence his withdrawal. His action made it necessary to make a quick readjustment in the schedule. Tonight's scores:

Demarest—0, 0, 0, 2, 0, 50, 19, 49, 70, 10, 37, 1, 0, 0, 1, 4, 0, 5, 12, 2, 0, 34, 9, 7, 70, 0, 4, 13, 102. Total, 500. Average, 17 1-29.

Cassignol—0, 77, 0, 4, 0, 5, 9, 1, 3, 2, 23, 2, 31, 4, 101, 0, 3, 0, 4, 45, 0, 28, 97, 1, 8, 2, 2, 2, 15. Total, 474. Average, 16 10-29.

Cline won the afternoon game from Cutler in the thirty-ninth inning by a score of 500 to 438. Although the contest terminated as was expected, it was not without a determined struggle. Cline did nothing worthy of special note until the eighteenth inning, when he made a run of 88. It was from this point that he improved his position.

He gradually drew up on his opponent, and in the thirty-sixth inning obtained the lead. His contribution was a string of 43, which he supplemented with 64 in the next inning and made victory assured. Cutler at times gave a pretty display, but he plainly showed lack of experience. Scores:

Cline—0, 6, 0, 14, 4, 0, 1, 6, 19, 11, 4, 47, 11, 1, 9, 2, 14, 88, 7, 5, 11, 3, 2, 28, 11, 16, 3, 10, 10, 2, 6, 9, 0, 2, 1, 43, 62, 6, 16—500. Average, 12 32-39. High runs, 88, 62, 47.

Cutler—3, 9, 5, 35, 0, 0, 7, 1, 17, 80, 1, 16, 2, 21, 1, 14, 9, 16, 11, 54, 16, 12, 9, 0, 16, 3, 0, 2, 4, 7, 25, 2, 0, 1, 1, 5, 1, 27—438. Average, 11 15-38. High runs, 80, 54, 35.

At Hicks'—Werd [50] defeated Hunerbein [48] by 50 to 38. Chase [42] defeated Shields [50] by 42 to 44 at three cushions. Tonight, Berry [50] and Steuart [42].

A. A. F. STAGES RUN TODAY.

Over 100 to Compete in First Annual Cross Country Event Under New Body's Auspices.

Over one hundred athletes affiliated with the Amateur Athletic federation will compete this afternoon in the first annual cross country run held under the auspices of that body. Representatives of nearly every organization in the federation will participate. The run is over a three mile course, the start and finish being at Sherman park.

At least five teams from the Y. M. C. A.'s, the Central, Evanston, West Side, Hyde Park, and Wilson Avenue branches, will run. Several high schools will be represented. River Forest and Oak Park "prep" runners will combine. The park playgrounds, bible class organizations, and social settlements will have a number of squads.

The course was put in the best of condition yesterday by officials of the A. A. F. and excellent time is expected. A banner will be awarded to the winning team and athletes making the best time will be given medals.

Forty managers of indoor baseball and basketball teams under the jurisdiction of the Amateur Athletic federation met at the Illinois Athletic club and made preliminary plans for the organization of the Mutual Indoor Baseball and Basketball association.

No schedule was drawn, but contests will be arranged each Monday night between the managers. It was decided to divide the basketball section into three divisions, the final action on this question to be taken at a meeting at the I. A. C. a week from Monday night.

The stand taken by this new association is peculiar in view of the fact that they will extend invitations to teams affiliated with the A. A. U., provided, however, that the national organization will allow teams under its protection to compete in the A. A. F. events.

H. A. Stotz, assistant physical director at the Central Y. M. C. A., was elected president. The other officers are: E. B. De Groote, vice president; E. C. Seaton, secretary and treasury; A. H. Badenock, E. B. De Groote, E. S. Robbins, and H. G. Reynolds, board of directors.

At the meeting several contests were arranged for next week. It was decided to award banners to the first two teams in the basketball league and three to the first three teams in the indoor baseball organization.

KNOWS NOTHING OF PURCHASE.

Mike Donlin, Prospective Manager of Phillies, Says He Was Not Consulted on Sale.

Mike Donlin, who is vaudevilling here this week, said last nigth he had not been consulted about the Philadelphia matter. He had an offer last summer from Felix Isman, a prospective purchaser of the Quaker club, to manage the Phillies as soon as Isman gained control. The deal involving the sale of the club at that time was blocked, however, but the Philadelphia man told Mike he still had a good chance of securing the team and that the management business would go if he were successful in his effort. Donlin is curious to know who the real purchasers are. He thinks Isman may yet have something to say. But Mike is not particularly anxious about the matter. He will play ball if the figure suits him, and, if not, the stage is just as big if not as exciting a game.

"PROFS" INDORSE "BIG FIVE"

Midway Instructors Put Official Stamp on the Plan.

ASK RETURN OF WOLVERINES

Alumni Revive Agitation for Michigan as Member of Conference.

Midway professors yesterday indorsed the student plan for a "Big Five" of Chicago, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Illinois, to replace the present "Big Eight" among the western colleges, and the scheme now has the stamp of official approval. Incidentally they expressed more than passing interest in the talk of Michigan returning to the conference, and said they hoped Coaches Yost and Stagg might get together and schedule a game of football next fall.

Director Stagg, it was learned, will not be back for a week. He is taking a rest from his strenuous coaching duties, spending his brief vacation in Hot Springs, Ark. It is thought he will be strongly in favor of the "Big Five," as he stood by the "Big Four," and has said several times he hoped Michigan would see its way clear of getting back in the conference.

Michigan alumni have revived the agitation for the Wolverines' return to the western association, and it is thought at the Midway they will seize upon this year as the psychological one for getting back where they formerly were.

A prominent alumnus of the Ann Arbor school is quoted at length in The Daily Maroon this morning in a fervent appeal to the governing body of Michigan to become a member of the conference body again.

In view of Michigan's action in scheduling a game with Minnesota and obeying the conference regulations, it was declared by one professor there is no reason why the Wolverines should object to returning to the conference.

"It is easy to see why Michigan held out until its four year men had finished their careers," said one member of the athletic board. "But there are no more of these, and the road is now paved to a triumphant entrance into the conference. It is well known that practically all that kept Michigan from coming back was the insistence that Schultz be not deprived of the captaincy because he was a four year man. Michigan does not make the demand this year."

HONOR TO NOTRE DAME ELEVEN.

Students Haul Members of Squad Through South Bend and Street Traffic Is Suspended.

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—For the first time in Notre Dame's history a public parade in honor of an athletic triumph was held on the streets of South Bend. It was with the sanction of the faculty, which allowed the entire student body to meet the members of the team at South Bend when it arrived from Milwaukee.

With the university band at the head of the procession, and the members of the team in a carryall drawn by the students, a parade was held through the principal streets, where traffic was suspended and immense crowds gathered to watch the thousand and more students who marched all the way to the university, where the western champions were received by a specially delegated committee chosen from the students and faculty.

The time until the supper hour was taken up with speeches by athletic officials and university authorities. The principal address was given by President Cavanaugh, who, in addition to congratulating the team on its great triumph, took occasion to laud the individual members for the manly showing throughout the season.

FAULT FOUND IN NEW RULES.

Schoch, Former Cornell Star, Says Uncertainty of Modern Football Is Responsible for Injuries.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Football as an intercollegiate sport was tonight stanchly defended by a group of men who have themselves won distinction on the gridiron and who consequently know intimately its trials and its dangers. The Sagamore club, a social organization of college football graduates, dined at the Hotel Walton, and around the board were men whose names are famous in the annals of football. Layton M. Schoch, a former Cornell star, attacked the so-called "new rules."

"A hard flying tackle never hurt anybody and every one in this room knows that it has not," he declared emphatically. "The whole trouble now lies with the new rules.

"Under the rules as we used to play the game a man made up his mind to tackle a runner and the runner knew that the man who was coming after him had only that one thing in mind. Now both players are in doubt as to just the proper thing to do, and they hit one another in an unprepared mental and physical state."

"RAW DEAL" HANDED CRANE?

Manager King Declares Referee Allowed Touchdown by Springfield When Ball Was "Dead."

Manager King of Crane High claims his team received a "raw" deal at Springfield, where the west siders were defeated Thanksgiving day by a score of 6 to 5. He said that shortly after the first touchdown Crane punted and while the ball was in the air the Springfield umpire blew his whistle.

The Crane team stopped play on hearing the signal. In the meantime a Springfield man picked up the oval and ran down the field for a touchdown. Crane raised a protest, but the referee declared the umpire had no right to blow the whistle.

During the contest Crane was penalized 180 yards, while the home team did not lose a yard. It is claimed by King that the crowd, numbering about 3,000, hooted the officials and in the second half was rooting hard for the Chicago team.

Morris A. C. Accepts Challenge.

In a post-season game to be played tomorrow afternoon at Gunther park the Morris Athletics will defend their title of middleweight champions of the Chicago Football league against the All Collegians, who claim a clear record for the season. Although the Morris boys laid claim to the championship by defeating the Silver Swans on Thanksgiving day, the north side boys have consented to tackle the west side aggregation in order to remove any doubt as to their right to the league title.

BLAME PLACED ON WRESTLERS.

National Sporting Club Declares It Is Not at Fault for Disappointing Its Patrons.

Promoters of the National Sporting club plan to use legal means to compel wrestlers who sign contracts to appear in advertised contests under the management of the club, according to a statement issued yesterday. At the recent wrestling entertainment at Dexter pavilion the club was criticised for the failure of three men advertised as attractions to appear on the mat.

"Leo Pardello, Henry Ordeman of Minneapolis, and Fred Beell, the Wisconsin light heavyweight, were the wrestlers who broke their contracts," said Dr. Krone. "Pardello gave as his excuse for refusing to go on with Zbyszko that he had an injured ankle. We have all the documents in the cases to prove that we did not break faith with the public, but that the three wrestlers did so by breaking their contracts. We have a telegram and letter from Manager Barton announcing that Ordeman missed his train at Minneapolis.

"Beell's contract, executed by himself and Manager J. H. Herman for Zbyszko, and agreeing to wrestle at the National Sporting club, as well as in two other events, the last to be on Dec. 4, is in our possession."

POLES WILL GREET ZBYSZKO.

Plan Great Reception for Man Who Held Champion Frank Gotch Safe for One Hour.

Polish athletic enthusiasts are planning a great reception for Zbyszko, the big fellow who stood off Frank Gotch for an hour without a fall in Buffalo Thursday night. Ald. Frank Koraleski is at the head of the movement, assisted by Vincent Bardonski, and the plan is to give their countryman a dinner on Monday, when he will be here to meet Leo Pardella at Riverview rink that night.

MAHMOUT FAILS IN HIS TASK.

Leo Pardello Too Much for the Turk, Who Lasts Fifteen Minutes in Handicap Bout.

Yussiff Mahmout failed to throw Leo Pardello in fifteen minutes at the Empire last night, the local man winning the handicap bout. In the other match Farmer Sandy won in straight falls from Jack King.

TEAMS LAY ASIDE FOOTBALL ARMOR

Thanksgiving Day Sees End of Important Gridiron Battles for 1909.

MARQUETTE FANS HAPPY.

Tie Game with Notre Dame Considered a Victory by Milwaukeeans.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Thursday's football games practically closed the season of 1909. The headgears, padded suits, shoes, and other paraphernalia will be stored away until next September.

The Marquette-Notre Dame game at Milwaukee was the most bitterly fought contest of the day. Two more evenly matched elevens seldom have met and the result showed the relative strength of these powerful machines. Only once was the goal of each team threatened seriously. These danger periods came in the second half.

On the kickoff at the beginning of this period the ball was booted to Dwyer of Notre Dame, who fumbled badly. He finally recovered the oval and brought it out to his fifteen yard mark. While he was running with the ball Smith, the full back, used his hands in the interference and Notre Dame was penalized to its one yard line. Hamilton barely got his kick away, and after this Marquette never came close to a score.

Hoosiers Threaten to Score.

Late in the second half Notre Dame through classy end running by Miller and Dimmick, took the oval to Marquette's fifteen yard mark. With a second down and eight yards to go, Dimmick was sent around the side close to the side lines. He gained four yards, but the oval rested less than a yard from the side line. Miller made a gallant attempt to make the remaining four yards, but he failed by less than a foot.

With the exception of these two times the ball was between the two twenty-five yard lines continually. Both elevens used every play at their command to win this battle, which will go down in history as one of the hardest and cleanest fought ever played in the west. Marquette, expecting defeat, was more than pleased with the result and considered it a victory. Naturally enough, Notre Dame rooters were disappointed, for they wanted to win this game badly and have a clear claim to the western title. They asserted after the game that if Vaughan and Ryan had been in the struggle Notre Dame surely would have been the winner.

Consistent Showing by Tigers.

By defeating Kansas, 12 to 6, Missouri won the championship of the Missouri valley conference. The "Show Mes" have played consistent football all season and their right to the title is undisputed. They have met and defeated such strong teams as Nebraska, Ames, Iowa, and Drake, and in each one of these struggles they played hard, aggressive football.

Drake won from Ames, 11 to 0, and annexed the championship of Iowa. Drake is coached this year by Griffith, who played football at Beloit in the days of Ed Merrill, who was one of the best all round athlethes ever produced in this section of the country. Griffith had a likely squad at the beginning of the season and he gradually developed it to a point where it gave Missouri a hard fight and finally conquered Ames in the big game of the year.

St. Louis was defeated overwhelmingly by the Carlisle Indians, 32 to 0. It was a case of brother against brother in this struggle, and "Pop" Warner was the victor. His brother has coached St. Louis all fall, but he had not had the material that turned out for the teams of former years. The team on the Mississippi has met with several setbacks this year, and, on the whole, the season cannot be considered a successful one.

As in former years, Pennsylvania was successful in winning from its old rival, Cornell, 17 to 6. Before the game was played the elevens looked to be evenly matched and a close, hard battle was predicted on all sides. As the battle wore on it was the same old story of Pennsylvania's getting the jump and winning by a comfortable score.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

BY HEK.

Of course, evil minded persons will say that Thursday night's wrestling match at Buffalo was framed up and consummated to create the impression that Zbyszko is a mat artist, or grappler, capable of compelling Gotch to swing his ace in a finish bout. Evil minded persons may be wrong in their premises, but that does not alter the conclusion which is that Gotch and the Polacjit is tedious to repeat that jumble of consonants—now form the richest wrestling "card" that has been shuffled up since the revival of interest in the wallowing game.

The marathon record for fifteen ball pool is now thirty-two hours. The mark of forty-eight hours continuous sitting at faro bank has not been approached in sixteen years. It was made in New Orleans by a western man, since hurriedly deceased.

"What shall I do?" cried the rescued man,
The man who had just turned square;
"Is there ever a chance for the likes of me
To be found either here or there?"
"When you've blown the trade that you used to ply
And resolved to cut out the bad,
You will find the game that you're up against
As strong as the one you had."

Just a few lines from Malachi Hogan to let us know that himself and the missus are snugly housed at 1943 Grant avenue Denver; that he hasn't had occasion to consult a doctor since he has been out there; that he is eating like a horse and sleeping like a baby, and that he is ready and willing to make a fuss over any good Chicago friend that happens along. Mr. Hogan incidentally says, as if it were important, that 1943 Grant avenue is in a prohibition district.

Curly Brown does not propose to be frozen out of his rights as discoverer of Jacksonville as a racing preserve as he was out of New Orleans. He has delegated to himself the last guess in all matters of policy and procedure. His titles are general manager and director, starter, racing secretary, and ex-officio chief steward. This covers everything but placing the horses at the finish, and it doubtless will cover that, too, in races which permit of Curly's getting back from the post in time. To make his position stronger he has cast himself for the rôle of dictator of the "Southern Jockey club," a creature of his own, which assumes jurisdiction over the southeastern territory in matters of racing. Nor is that all. Curly declares that he will exercise a strict press censorship, and "will not stand for petitioners, gossipers, or scandal mongers" about his racetrack. Even Tom Williams has never tried to intrench himself as strongly in California as Curly has in Florida.

Can he get away with it all? Well, that remains to be demonstrated.

Pat Dunne, the choicest of whose classic bon mots, have been made at the expense of judges under whom he has raced his horses, is now in the judicial pagoda at Tampa where possibly he will not find it quite so funny.

Interest in hockey in Chicago seems to have suffered a thaw.

The hookworm of overdoing already is at work in Florida. Two games have been opened at Jacksonville and Tampa each to run 100 days or more, and another Jericho is planned for Pensacola. It shouldn't require anything stronger than a pair of gig lamps to see the finish.

While pledging his personal support to John Heydler, Garry Herrmann intimates that if the young man is offered a bank presidency or anything like that he would be foolish to turn it down.

Any kind of politics, gentle "Subscriber," can be improved by fumigation.

There is no question as to John Montgomery Ward's fitness for the office of league president, but Mr. Ward has always given us to understand that he was wedded to his golf clubs and law books.

When you take a slant over the precious birds that Nat Goodwin tied himself up with when he went into the business of gold mine promotion you cannot wonder that the comedian's experience was tragic. Nat was there with the "come-on" stuff himself.

At least Jeffries has spared us the contemplation of himself as the star in a drama.

NEW YORK BOWLERS OUTCLASS LOCAL PAIR IN TEAM MATCH.

Smith and Dunbar Roll Brilliantly at Flenner's, Defeating Stehno and Karlicek Easily.

Rolling in wonderful form at Flenner's new alleys Jimmy Smith and Alex Dunbar, the New York bowlers, yesterday swamped Stehno and Karlicek, the local Bohemian players, winning four out of the five games rolled in the seven game match.

Dunbar averaged 230 4-5 and Smith 221 1-3, the latter featuring his performance with a total of 289 in the third game. He left the No. 10 pin up on a perfect hit and had hard luck in not getting a perfect score. Scores:

Smith	242	289	167	214	194
Dunbar	214	213	227	279	221
Stehno	153	190	198	182	182
Karlicek	214	176	223	167	208

Stehno took on Jimmy Blouin after the big match, Blouin winning six out of the first nine. Scores:

Blouin	180	238	227	208	204	194	182	176	233
Stehno	189	158	180	172	211	193	170	186	201

The opening of the Mercantile league at Flenner's was the feature of last night's bowling, all eight of the clubs in the new league shooting the first night. Scores were away below the usual mark on account of the hard pins and new alleys. Only one series was shot in the Chicago league the leading Boiler Planos strengthening their position by taking all three games from the Artesians. Other features of the night were an average of 213 2-3 by Joe Shaw in the Kiowa league and Steve Geroux's 211 flat in the Millionaires' league. Three close finishes were seen in the Phoenix league, two games being won by one pin and one by two pins. Scores:

Y., Sam Karpf, former secretary of the American Bowling congress, sends word that Rochester bowlers, backed by the chamber of commerce, will make a strong bid for the 1911 tournament of the A. B. C. Although the city is in the territory of the National Bowling association, which held its tournament there in 1908, the bowlers there are anxious to land the bigger event, and with this end in view already have made application to Secretary Langtry of the A. B. C. Rochester will send a big delegation to the A. B. C. tournament at Detroit.

STARS OF EAST ARE ASCENDANT

Golfing Planets Shine Brightly in Milky Way of Talent at Lakewood.

SECKEL IN DEEP ECLIPSE.

Scintillating Play of Herreshoff Dims Twinkling Efforts of Chicagoan.

Lakewood, N. J., Nov. 26.—The big four of the eastern golfing world will meet tomorrow in the first division semi-finals of the autumn Lakewood tournament. Fred Herreshoff is to oppose Findlay S. Douglas, and Walter J. Travis will be pitted against Jerome D. Travers. All are New Yorkers and the last three named former national champions. Herreshoff has been national runner-up.

No such quartet of stars has met in the semi-finals of a tournament this season, nor were the four ever bunched before at this stage of the premier set. Fine weather is predicted for tomorrow, and the struggle should prove of great interest.

Douglas administered the severe defeat of 9 and 8 to J. E. Smith of the Wilmington, Del., Country club this afternoon. Travers of the Montclair club beat H. M. Forrest, Lakewood, 5 and 4, while Travis, Garden City, beat W. B. Simons, Westbrook, 3 and 2. Herreshoff beat J. A. Janin, Fox Hills, 2 and 1.

The weather was fair and in great contrast to the "stuff" of the previous day, but the course was soft from melting snow.

In the morning round Herreshoff defeated Albert Seckel, the Chicago and Princeton player, 4 and 2. The latter was able to win only two holes. The cards:

Other results in the first round were as follows: Douglas defeated F. C. Jennings, 7 and 6; Travis defeated J. F. Shanley Jr., 4 and 3; W. E. Simons defeated J. C. Parrish Jr., 5 and 4; H. M. Forrest defeated C. R. Gillett, 6 and 4; Travers defeated A. F. Jamieson, 4 and 2; J. A. Janin defeated J. P. Knapp, 1 up; J. E. Smith defeated W. R. Gillett, 2 and 1.

MARSHALL IS CHESS CHAMPION.

Brooklyn Man Wins Title from Showalter in Twelfth Game—To Contest Again in the Spring.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Frank J. Marshall of Brooklyn now holds a clear title to the chess championship of the United States. He won it in the twelfth game of his match with Jackson W. Showalter of Georgetown, Ky., which began Nov. 9 and ended this afternoon.

Marshall opened the game, choosing queen's gambit decline, and intended to play for a draw. Showalter replied with a king's pawn counter gambit and tried to force a win. This put him into an embarrassing position and compelled him to resign on the twenty-ninth move.

Showalter immediately challenged for a return match, to be played next spring. Marshall accepted, stipulating that the date shall be in advance of the tournament in Hamburg, Germany, in which he expects to play.

JOHNSON FAMILY TO LIVE HERE.

Champion's Relations Leave Galveston to Reside in Chicago—Mother Denies Jack Is Spendthrift.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Tiney Johnson, Mrs. L. Rhodes and four children, Laura and Charles Johnson, the mother, nieces, sisters, and brother of Jack Johnson, the champion pugilist, left here tonight for Chicago, where they will reside.

The champion sent them word he had furnished a $15,000 home for them and sent Charles here to bring the family to Chicago.

Mrs. Johnson says false reports have credited Arthur ("Jack") with extravagance, while, as a matter of fact, he has $50,000 invested in real estate, a good deal of it in Chicago. She says he has provided well for his family, and certainly could not squander many thousands of dollars.

Shake Up Referees.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—As a result of dissatisfaction over recent fight decisions in which it is alleged various sums of money have been wagered, a change of referee has been made by the local fight club holding contests under the new statewide boxing laws. Jack Redmond, former middleweight of Chicago, succeeds Dave Barry, who in turn succeeds Yank Kenney.

Notes of the Soccer Players.

Englewood High school will play the Campbell Rover Jrs. this afternoon at Hamilton park at 2:30 o'clock.

Teams from Braceville, Carbon Hill, South Wilmington, and Coal City are organizing an Illinois Valley league to play for a cup to be presented by C. B. Mill of Coal City.

The Peel cup commission yesterday refused to allow the protest made by the MacDuff team against Referee Doig, who officiated in the Thanksgiving day game. A similar protest had been made by the Blues, who claimed that the original referee should officiate in the replay of the tie game. The Blues therefore get into the second round.

DECEMBER FUTURE IS WEAK

Nearby Wheat Delivery Drops Under Heavy Liquidation.

EXPORT DEMAND IS BETTER.

Cash Corn Is Lower, with Futures Irregular; Provisions Higher.

Heavy liquidation of the December was the one big feature of the wheat market yesterday, and the wholesale selling by big and little holders served to bring about a sharp readjustment in prices. Wednesday night at the close of the market December was at a premium of 2¼c. Yesterday at one time there was a premium of only ¼c, and at the close the difference was ⅝c. The fear of more wheat coming here from outside points, with the possibility of being obliged to take delivery of heavy lines, was too much for the bulls. The selling was started after the market had been given a strong and higher start, owing to the bullish Argentine news. It became apparent at once that the December was under heavy pressure, and stop loss orders began to be uncovered on the way down, accelerating the decline. At the close prices had rallied a little from the low point, showing December 1¼@1⅜c off, May ⅜@½c up, and July unchanged.

Big Holders Are Sellers.

Peavey, Bartlett-Patten, Rankin, Chapin, Hulburd-Warren-Chandler, and Barrell all had the December for sale, and for a time it appeared no one wanted any. In view of the heavy selling, however, it was a mystery where all the wheat went to. Some of the sellers of December bought the May to replace it. Shearson-Hammill were about the best buyers of May.

Argentine news late Wednesday had given the trade a scare, and nearly all the commission houses had buying orders at the opening. The initial range of prices showed sharp gains, especially for the May. A little later more reassuring advices were received from the same correspondents in Argentina who had sent the pessimistic cables Wednesday. This caused the bull movement to flatten out, and May reacted with the December.

Argentine News More Encouraging.

The most reliable Argentine reports indicate that the crop is late and has been damaged to some extent by the wet, cold weather, but, generally speaking, a fair crop is expected. One crop expert notes some traces of both black and red rust. Cables received via Liverpool and Paris were quite optimistic in regard to the outlook, although admitting there had been too much rain and that weather conditions continued cold. Liverpool was firm, closing ⅜@⅝d higher, due largely to light offerings of new crop wheat from the southern hemisphere. World's shipments are expected to be much smaller this week, the total being estimated at 11,500,000 bu, against 7,952,000 bu a year ago. Clearances for the week from North America were 4,347,000 bu, against 4,936,000 bu a year ago.

Big Decrease at Duluth.

Duluth stocks will show another big decrease this week, about 1,135,000 bu, while Minneapolis increases about 185,000 bu. Receipts at Minneapolis were heavy, but comparatively light at Duluth. December wheat in outside markets was relatively firm, but the May eased off commensurately with local prices. Export business at Duluth was the signal for a little buying flurry in midsession, 400,000 bu being reported taken. Receipts here were 48 cars, with 97 cars promised for today. Primary arrivals were 1,518,000 bu, against 1,392,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts were 1,305 cars, against 1,357 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 440 cars, against 635 cars a year ago. Sales for shipment here were only 10,000 bu. Clearances for the day were 443,000 bu.

Nearby Corn Futures Easy.

As in wheat, the principal pressure in the corn market was on the December, that month losing ⅛@¼c for the day, while May gained ¼@⅜c and July ¼c. Weakness in the cash market was the main factor in making the nearby future heavy, sample prices being ½@1c lower, with no demand to speak of. Shippers were not in the market and sales were only 45,000 bu. Country advices were bullish in the main and warm weather is still a factor to be taken into consideration. Corn shipped east is arriving out of condition, and the country movement is reported light, owing to the unfavorable weather. The Price Current said corn was turning out according to expectations, but that it was still in poor shipping condition. Receipts here were 269 cars, with 433 estimated for today. Primary arrivals were 413,000 bu, against 448,000 bu a year ago. Clearances for the week from this country were 255,000 bu, against 865,000 bu a year ago. Liverpool closed ½d up.

Trade Broader in Oats.

A broader trade was in evidence in oats, with buying early heavy, led by Bartlett-Patten and Shearson-Hammill. Peavey filled the pit full of May on the advance, and bought on the decline. Final prices were ¼c to ¼@⅜c higher. The strength in other grains was a factor early, and there was not a great deal of pressure on the market. Receipts were 111 cars, with 183 cars expected today. Primary arrivals were 443,000 bu, compared to 538,000 bu a year ago. The shipping demand was fairly good, with sales of 155,000 bu. Sample prices were ¼c higher.

Sharp Gains in Hog Products.

Substantial gains were scored throughout the list in hog products. Packers were credited with covering some of the short sales made earlier in the week, and there was an excellent investment demand. Commission houses bought freely and there was no heavy pressure on the market. Some profit taking was encountered on the advance. The shipping demand was fair and high prices are still being obtained for almost any kind of product. There were deliveries of 750 tcs. lard on November contracts. Receipts here, 28,000, with 13,000 expected today. At western points there were 72,300 hogs, against 105,200 a year ago. Hog packing in the west for the week was 250,000 short of the same period a year ago at 530,000. Lard at Liverpool was 3d higher, while hams were 6d lower and Cumberland sides, 1s off. Receipts of product were 30 cars and shipments, 115 cars.

Flaxseed Prices Advance.

Flaxseed had an advance of 4c in sympathy with the strength in northwestern markets. No. 1 northwestern closed at $1.84 and No. 1 southwestern $1.74. Receipts 1 car.

Rye was quiet, but steady. December closed at 73c asked and May at 76½c bid. No. 2 was quoted 75@76c, No. 3, 70@73c, and No. 4 65@68c. Receipts were estimated at 5 cars.

Barley was unchanged. Malting was quoted 55@66c, mixing 51@53c, and screenings 40@52c. Receipts were estimated at 72 cars.

Timothyseed was neglected. November was offered at $3.75 and March, $4.10.

INTERESTING TRADE GOSSIP ON CHANGE.

Peavey brokers were heavy sellers of December wheat, and there were indications that Waterman, who is credited with being the principal eastern holder, had also unloaded more of his line, supposedly selling it through Hulburd-Warren-Chandler and Barrell. The prospect for heavy deliveries have scared out many of the minor longs, and there was free selling on stop loss orders on the break. The situation at present is regarded as being much different from the September position. At that time there was but little wheat available for delivery, which was closely held, and cash prices were at an abnormal level. Mills and cash buyers in all directions were bidding frantically for the wheat, and there was no chance for accumulation. Now there will be enough wheat available to make a burdensome "corpse," and they do not appear to be anxious to hold the bag. In some quarters the drive at December was regarded in the nature of a shakeout, but there were more who believed the future was adjusting itself to a more natural position in conformity with the surrounding market conditions.

Argentine news a big factor early, but later advices were more favorable and there was less anxiety felt later in the session. The trade was much concerned over the cable Le Count forwarded late on Wednesday saying there had been too much rain, and saying the crop had been damaged by lodging. Yesterday morning Barrel had another cable from Le Count saying weather conditions were more favorable, and that the damage had not been important. Broomhall's advices were also more favorable, although admitting the weather was too cold. Slaughter's cable read: "Weather favorable. Damage to crop from rain is light. Crop retarded by cold, wet weather. Sellers holding for further advances. Have no reason to change our previous estimate of 102,500,000 bu as the exportable surplus this season."

The break in wheat prices here put Duluth No. 1 northern out of reach for the time being at least, and there was nothing doing in that direction in the cash market. Prices here were about steady relatively, and there was no change relatively in the other markets. A little better export demand was reported in the northwest and Duluth reported 400,000 bu Manitobas and durums taken for export. Cash corn here was weak, the demand being slow, with shippers and elevator people generally out of the market. Country offerings were not large and the weather is still too warm to permit of much corn being put in condition. Elevator people are making corn quite freely. Prices here were ½@1c off. Oats were steady to ¼c higher. Shipping sales were 10,000 bu wheat, 45,000 bu corn, and 155,000 bu oats.

The poor quality of corn is giving rise to some speculation as to how the rule will work permitting No. 3 corn to be delivered on December contracts at a penalty. One student of corn conditions advances the theory that elevator people will buy No. 4 corn, dry it sufficiently to make No. 3 corn, and deliver it out on contracts by paying a 5c penalty. As there is no guaranty as to how long the corn would stay No. 3, it is possible that the ones receiving the corn would soon have some hot grain on their hands which might be a total loss. With this possibility staring them in the face, some of the traders are not anxious to be long any December corn unless the weather turns cold and stays that way.

"The selling of December wheat today and for several days has been by the long interest, but the floating long interest in May, we believe, is to a large extent still intact," said Bartlett-Patten. "Outside markets firmer on their December wheat compared with our own, but the May kept about on recent parity. The liquidation in December wheat puts the market in a different position and it is a question whether there will be as many buyers on weak spots for an inevitable rally as heretofore. Much will depend on further news from the Argentine."

"It looked much today as if manufacturers who have been selling product because it was high had been forced to change front, and they were panicky buyers for a time," said Barrell & Co. "This, of course, affected others and made a wild market, especially for ribs; the pork, while higher, was neglected, and profit showing lard was for sale all day, and we believe it will be from this on every time the short sellers get anxious. Admitting a hog shortage, there is a limit to all things, and we still believe it is prudent to take profits on this level."

"Husking and cribbing of corn delayed by recent rains," said the Price Current. "The corn yield is equaling expectations and the quality is good except for the excess of moisture in grain which retards marketing. Growing wheat is in excellent condition for the winter. Packing of hogs at leading western centers for the week were 530,000, against 780,000 a year ago, decrease of 250,000 hogs. Total packing for Nov. 1 to date, 1,705,000, against 2,335,000 year ago, decrease of 630,000 hogs."

"We have 151 reports on corn this morning," said Clement-Curtis, "the chief feature of which is the slowness in curing and shipping. Last year the corn was grading early in November and in full shipping swing during the month. This year the average shipping is from a month to two months later. The outlook depends entirely upon the weather and it will take from ten to thirty days of cold, dry weather to bring corn up to contract grades and to a free shipping basis."

New England advices complain of corn being received out of condition, and said that unless weather conditions changed soon there would be heavy losses sustained. Nebraska and Iowa messages were bearish, claiming there was little corn ready to ship and that dealers and farmers were becoming discouraged.

Bids on the call for wheat to arrive were ½c to 1c lower; corn, ½c higher to ⅝c lower; oats, ¼c lower to ¼c higher; and rye, ½c lower. Sales were 5,000 bu No. 3 yellow corn or better, November shipment; 59¼c Illinois proportional, and 3,000 bu No. 3 white oats or better, ten days' shipment, 41c Illinois proportional.

A private Liverpool cable read: "Wheat is strong. Stocks in small compass. Bears covering their shorts. Wheat advancing because it is feared Argentine crop will be later than usual coming to market. Freight rates firmer and advancing."

The death of R. Julius Richardson was announced on change yesterday. He died on Thursday at Los Angeles, Cal. For many years Mr. Richardson was one of the big grain shippers on the floor and was well known to all the older members.

The Modern Miller: "Winter wheat maintains a healthy appearance nearly everywhere. Complaints are unusually few. Cold weather, however, is needed to check the growth of the plant, the condition of which is tender."

Minneapolis stocks of wheat increased 185,000 bu for the week, compared with an increase of 400,000 bu the corresponding week last year. Duluth stocks are estimated to show a decrease of 1,135,000 bu for the week.

An epidemic of hog cholera was reported in Kansas and advices from Kansas City said the United States authorities have been appealed to for serum to vaccinate approximately 100,000 hogs.

Two small cargoes of wheat aggregating 120,000 bu Duluth No. 1 northern were received here yesterday. More cargoes were expected to come late Friday or today.

Martin J. Detmer has posted his board of trade membership for transfer. Thomas C. Janisch has applied for withdrawal of membership.

Receipts of wheat at Winnipeg were 440 cars, compared with 380 cars last week, and 635 cars the corresponding day a year ago.

Estimated receipts are: Wheat, 97 cars; corn, 433 cars; oats, 183 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 72 cars; hogs, 13,000.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK MARKET.

CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—A moderate supply of native steers, including odd lots of strictly fancy beeves, met with a fairly active demand on local and shipping account, and prices were sustained at a firm to a shade higher level. One full load of prime 1,477 lb beeves topped the market at $9.00, and a small load of yearling steers and heifers reached the same figures, while odd lots of fat heavy offerings cleared from $8.00 to $8.75, and the next best price for full loads was $7.75. A large share of the supply consisted of medium to good steers, which sold at $6.50@7.25, and a clearance of the plain light offerings was made at $5.50@6.25. Receipts were placed at 3,000 head, but there were close to 1,000 show cattle included in the run, and the total supply at the disposal of buyers was much smaller than represented by receipts.

Only a few loads of western range steers were marketed, and they sold early at $5.35@6.50. Butcher stock trade was sluggish, but offerings were not burdensome, and prices were sustained at an unchanged level, most sales being at a net decline of 15@25c from last week's prices. Shippers paid steady prices for bulls, but local packers secured their quota at weak to 10c lower prices. Calves met with a fairly active inquiry and were sustained at a steady level. Quotations:

Cattle at six western markets, 24,100, against 16,600 a week ago, 22,200 a year ago, and 17,800 two years ago. Total for 1909 to date, 7,725,000 against 7,586,000 the same period in 1908.

HOGS.

Small packers, shippers, and speculators paid an advance of 5c for all offerings at the outset, but buyers for leading packers had orders to buy their hogs at steady figures and staid out of the trade until late in the day, when they finally succeeded in making up droves at a cost that was little changed from Wednesday's basis. Receipts were placed at 20,000 head at the start, but were raised to 25,000 head later, and this increase in the supply was instrumental in enabling packers to get in the trade at more profitable prices than prevailed at the opening. The quality of the offerings was uniformly good, the demand was broad enough to furnish an outlet for practically everything received, and few hogs were left in first hands at the close.

Best sales of heavy hogs were made at $8.30, showing the full 5c advance over Wednesday's extreme figure. The bulk of the prime fat butcher grades sold at $8.15@8.25, while mixed packing grades made $7.90@8.15. Choice light hogs made $7.90@8.20. Pigs were in moderate demand, but not many were offered on sale and prices held at a steady level. Stags met with favor and choice handy weights sold at $8.50@8.60. Quotations:

SHEEP.

Market for sheep and lambs opened firm and active at the best prices of the week and practically everything received in time for the early trade found an outlet at firm figures. There were about forty loads of stock, mostly lambs, received after buyers had filled their most urgent orders, however, and as receivers were anxious to dispose of such stock before the close of business, they accepted a reduction of 25@35c from early prices for the bulk of the late arrivals. Leading packers had representatives in the sheep house until late in the day and a complete clearance of the receipts of more than 15,000 head was effected before the finish.

Best native lambs again topped the market at $7.85, and there were many sales at $7.75, while the bulk of the good kinds sold straight at $7.00@7.50. Fed western lambs reached $7.75, while 97 lb yearlings made $6.50, and some heavier offerings cleared at $6.00@6.25. Fed western wethers sold at up to $5.00, with odd lots of natives at $5.00@5.25. Native ewes sold at $3.00@4.90, with the bulk of the good killers at $4.50@4.75. Receipts for Nov. 27 were estimated at 1,500 cattle, 14,000 hogs, and 4,000 sheep, against actual arrivals of 1,400 cattle, 12,396 hogs, and 3,201 sheep for Saturday, Nov. 28, 1908.

STOCKYARDS GOSSIP.

Speculators were aggressive buyers of hogs at the opening, but they had a great deal of difficulty in trying to dispose of their holdings on the later trade, as packers refused to bid on stock which they believed was being sold for scalpers. Packers have had much to contend with on account of speculators' aggressiveness the last few days, and with about 2,000 hogs in direct and a generous supply left from Wednesday, they thought it was time to show them that they could not bid up prices with impunity.

Best hogs at $8.30 reached the highest price since Oct. 5, when $8.35 was paid. The day's supply sold within a much narrower range of prices, however, and the average price, at $8.15, was the highest average since Sept. 28.

Shippers were energetic buyers of prime cattle and were the mainstay of the market. They could not get all the steers they wanted, however, and carried over some unfilled orders.

Armour & Co. had 700 hogs from St. Paul, while the Anglo-American company had 1,000 head in from Milwaukee.

Hogs left over unsold from Wednesday's market were officially counted at 4,208 head. Besides these packers had stock bought late and not slaughtered on that day.

Feeding stock, cattle and sheep, met with a surprisingly urgent call from country buyers.

Groceries.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Dan Talmage Sons Co. of New York, in a weekly review of the rice market, said: "A fair demand is reported for the week. Receipts are moderate and prices steady on Honduras styles. The low prices on Japan sorts have attracted much attention and buyers are taking freely, somewhat in advance of immediate requirements, as values compare favorably with any other breadstuffs. Advices from the south note slight improvement on the Atlantic coast, although, under accumulation of stock, mills have shut down. At New Orleans distribution is slow, but buyers are watching the market very closely. In the interior southwest, Louisiana and Texas, a fair movement is reported, mostly of Japan sorts, which are ruling at very low prices. Market for such is in a decidedly chaotic condition; prices are irregular, there being no standard of values. Some sections are accepting offers ¼@⅜c lower than others, and all of them selling at from 1c to 1½c below intrinsic worth. With no more rice produced than will be required for distribution, and nothing in the wide world to compete with it under 1½c per lb higher cost, the action of planters and holders recently is about as sensible as if the bankers of New York should sell gold dollars at 70c and pat themselves on the back because they did a big business on that basis. When producers show lack of faith in and little appreciation of the value of their specialty it is difficult to inspire others with confidence. Still, buyers who know, without being told, a good thing when they see it, are quietly taking advantage of this unusual opportunity to secure bargains at about 40 per cent under values."

Sugar and Coffee.

SUGAR.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Market had a firm undertone and values were closely adhered to. Following were the ruling prices in wholesale circles, quotations being on 100 lb lots: Standard granulated, beet and cane, $5.24@5.34; cut loaf, H. & E., $6.37; standard powdered, $5.75; extra C, $5.05; canary, $4.75; chemically pure milk sugar, 22c per lb in bbl lots.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—SUGAR—Raw quiet; fair refining, 3.86@3.92c; centrifugal, 96 test, 4.36@4.42c; molasses sugar, 3.61@3.67c. Refined quiet; crushed, 5.95c; powdered, 5.35c; granulated, 5.25c.

COFFEE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Market opened quiet but firm, and there were no accumulations on hand. Receipts of green coffees at Rio were 11,000 bags; Santos, 62,000 bags.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The market for coffee futures opened quiet at unchanged prices to an advance of 5 points. Foreign markets showed little change, with Havre closing ¼ higher to ¼ lower than last Wednesday, but a moderate demand here was sufficient to impart a steady tone to the situation, a few December notices were promptly stopped, and the market closed steady at a net advance of 5 points. There was a little switching from December to later months. Sales were 19,250 bags, including December at 6.85c, March at 6.50@6.55c, May at 6.85c, and July at 6.75c. Spot quiet; Rio No. 7, 8⅝c nominal; Santos No. 4, 9⅜@9½c; mild steady; Cordova, 9@11½c.

Dry Goods.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade said: "Holiday merchandise shows most activity. A special sale of fancy ribbon lots for holiday uses proved especially successful. Orders from the road are exceeding anything in our history. Bookings for spring are reaching satisfactory proportions, particularly in wash goods, laces, and inexpensive drapery fabrics. Low railroad rates next week on account of live stock and horse shows have spurred wholesalers' preparations for cleaning up stocks before approaching inventories. Many merchants will combine a profitable buying trip with their visit to the stock show."

Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. in their weekly review of the wholesale dry goods market said: "With the semi-annual clearings now in progress, the splendid season's business which has been experienced promises to terminate most satisfactorily. Such line as comfortables, couch covers, bedspreads, gloves and mittens, hosiery and underwear, handkerchiefs, umbrellas, furs, men's, women's, and children's ready to wear garments, are noted as offering attractive price concessions. Special inducements in cotton blankets, outing flannels, bleached and unbleached shaker and baby flannels were productive of many inquiries. Some important orders were taken for dress goods. The readiness with which silk and cotton weaves are being accepted presages for spring unusual popularity in this fabric. It is admirably adapted for evening wear and is being used extensively for that purpose. Numerous requests are being received daily for immediate delivery on shipments originally booked for spring. Tussahs, diagonals, shadow stripes, jacquards, and rough weaves are all in demand. Marked interest is manifested in Adriatique, the new shade. Furs showed great activity, a large business being accomplished in sets of mink, black fox, black and blue wolf, and Japanese mink. Fifty and fifty-two inch Russian pony, Hudson seal and near seal coats are in excellent favor. Market on all floor coverings remains firm and anticipated advances on some tapestry and axminster rugs have already been scheduled."

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Business started vigorously after the holiday and dry goods houses are receiving many requests for advance shipments of goods under order. The jobbers are doing a moderate but steady trade. The primary market remains generally quiet, and it is affected adversely by the high price on cotton goods and yarns. A meeting of the sales note committee of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association was held during the day, at which preparations were outlined for a joint meeting of the committee and merchants for the purpose of receiving objections to the uniform sales note now under consideration.

LOEB OUSTS TEN MORE MEN

New York Collector Continues Customs Clearing Out.

RESULT OF SUGAR FRAUDS.

Twenty-five Per Cent of Weighers Now Are Out.

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Ten more assistant weighers were dropped from the customs service by Collector Loeb today.

The wholesale dismissal completes the general house cleaning the collector has been carrying on as a result of the disclosures of the sugar underweighing frauds. There still are some individual cases in which Collector Loeb may deem it wise to act later.

The ten employés dropped today were civil service appointees and men from the civil service list of eligibles have been selected by the collector and by Deputy Surveyor Parr to fill the vacancies.

The names of the ten employés dismissed were not made public because there was not sufficient evidence to warrant formal charges against them. To Collector Loeb, however, the investigations made it apparent that the services of the men ought to be dispensed with for the good of the service.

Eighty-three Are Ousted.

In all there have been eighty-three men dropped since house cleaning began. Twenty-five per cent of the entire number of weighers in the service has been dismissed since Loeb went in and about 15 per cent of the entire customs force.

Collector Loeb is keeping close mouthed about the appointment of a successor to Gen. Clarkson as surveyor. It was said today that he had recommended James Bronson Reynolds. President Taft, however, would not give the place to Reynolds, because he had him in mind for a job under the civil government in Panama.

Another Weigher Arrested.

Thomas C. Giddings, an assistant customs weigher, was arrested today, charged with conspiracy to effect the entry of two consignments of figs at less than their true weight.

The accused weigher was held in $2,500 bail for trial.

GOMPERS AGAIN DEFIES JUDGE.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—"I repeat what I have said heretofore. Justice Wright is biased and is unfit to wear the judicial ermine."

In these words Samuel Gompers today referred to Associate Justice Wright of the District Supreme court, who sentenced Mr. Gompers, John Mitchell, and Frank Morrison, all officers of the Federation of Labor, to varying terms of imprisonment for contempt of court in the Buck Stove and Range case.

Mr. Gompers denied he would ask the president for a pardon. A writ of certiorari is to be applied for on Monday and if this is denied a writ of habeas corpus will be asked, which, if granted, will insure a hearing by the highest tribunal.

STOCK LIST HAS A RECOVERY

Activity Marks Resumption of Trading After Holiday.

COPPER STOCKS RESPOND.

Negotiations Looking to Merger Continued in Spite of Ruling.

[NEW YORK TIMES FINANCIAL LEADER.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The resumption of business on the stock exchange today following the holiday found sentiment much improved and as a result a decidedly higher range of prices was established for stocks by the end of the day's session. Advantage was taken of the unsettlement caused by the Standard Oil decision in the earlier days of the week to force liquidation of holdings of weak or timid speculators and four days of declining prices ensued.

Today's rise was, therefore, in a technical sense a normal reaction, but it went further than it would have gone otherwise owing to the extremely favorable statement made by the Bank of England on Thursday. The showing of the bank, almost unprecedented at this season in many years, testified to the growing ease of European money markets and carried conviction that while political exigencies might prolong the maintenance of the 5 per cent discount rate now in effect, a turn for the better politically would lead to an immediate reduction, with the possibility of a cut being made shortly in any event.

Copper Negotiations Still On.

Copper stocks responded to the hurried short covering and to the replacement of lines sold out earlier in the week upon the theory that in the face of the Standard Oil decision the negotiations for the merger of a number of the larger companies would be abandoned. It appears now that such negotiations still are under way, that a number of details incidental to the final completion of the plan have been agreed upon since the court's decision on the Standard Oil case was rendered on Saturday last.

Rock Island issues were also in demand at higher prices, the 5 per cent collateral bonds in particular moving up sharply in connection with the definite report that an offer had been made to the Rock Island for its Frisco stock, which represents control of the Frisco, underlying or securing these bonds.

The usual weekly compilation of bank clearings attested further growth of trade in all parts of the country with their substantial increases over the exchanges of last year and 1906, while the excellent traffic coming to the railroads was illustrated by the Atchison's October earnings statement with its increase of $1,666,000 in gross for that period.

Banks Gain in Cash.

Preliminary estimates of currency movements of the week indicated a moderate gain of cash by the banks' known transactions, but just how this will effect tomorrow's statement depends largely upon the part played in that document by last week's late shipments of gold to Argentina. If the weight of these shipments falls upon tomorrow's return a decrease in cash may be exhibited.

Money on call firm, 4¾@5 per cent; ruling rate, 4¾; closing bid, 4¾; offered at 4¾ per cent. Time loans steady; sixty days, 5 per cent; ninety days, 4¾ per cent; six months, 4¾@4¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 5@5½ per cent. Sterling exchange firm, with actual business in bankers' bills at 4.84@4.8405 for sixty day bills and at 4.8760 for demand. Commercial bills, 4.83@4.83¾. Bar silver, 50¾. Mexican dollars, 42. Government bonds easy. Railroad bonds strong.

IN THE FOREIGN STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Money was in increased demand on the market today for settlement and month end requirements, causing further borrowings from the bank. Discounts were steady. On the stock exchange, with the settlement concluded, trading was better than expected, only one small failure being announced. The markets generally were cheerful and there was fair buying of copper shares, Argentine rails, and kaffirs. Foreign bonds, especially Russians, improved, but British securities were neglected in view of the political uncertainty. Trading in American securities was light during the early session, pending the Wall street opening, with prices generally unchanged from yesterday's final. At noon the market was steady, with Reading 1¼, Amalgamated Copper 1¾, and the rest of the list from ¼ to ⅝ higher than Wednesday's New York closing. Wall street accepted the London level and advanced prices further, but offered stock later, causing an uncertain close.

ELECTRIC GAINS IN EARNINGS

North Shore Company Reports Over 6 Per Cent for Year.

BIDS FOR DRAINAGE BONDS.

Trustees Seek to Keep Securities at Par or Better.

Net earnings of the North Shore Electric company for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1909, were equal to 6.02 per cent on the present outstanding capital of $4,000,000. For the fiscal year the gross earnings were $1,005,432, an increase of $189,882, or 23.3 per cent. The net earnings were $243,035, and it is understood the dividend rate early next year will be increased from 3 to 4 per cent, something the net returns warrant.

In the annual report to the shareholders Samuel Insull, president of the company, says:

"To provide for the acquisition of additional electric light and power properties and for the construction of substations, and the enlargement of the company's distribution system necessitated by the growth of the company's business, an increase in the capital stock of $220,000 and in the outstanding first mortgage bonds of $285,000 was made.

"The results of the operation of the new generating station at Waukegan have been satisfactory and have enabled the company to secure contracts for the furnishing of additional power to interurban railways.

"There has been a substantial increase in the industrial power business during the last year, and from present prospects it promises to show a still greater increase during the coming year."

Bank Statement Forecast.

Known movements of money for the week indicate the New York banks have gained $7,116,000 cash by direct shipments from the interior. The banks lost to the subtreasury, however, $1,617,000, so that the apparent net gain in cash for the week was $5,499,000. The effect of gold shipments as changing the foregoing is uncertain.

Drainage Bond Market.

Complaint was made yesterday over the opening of bids for the $2,500,000 drainage bonds. It was asserted by one of the bidders that a letter accompanying the bid was to the effect that unless the trustees would consider bids under par the bid indicated should not be opened. The trustees had advertised that no bids under par would be considered. However, they opened all the bids, but made no award. The bid of the bankers was 98 and a fraction. One interest said concerning the drainage bond market:

"As I view it, the trustees in their effort to secure par or better for the drainage bonds have injured the market for their securities. Some time ago, when the banks and bond houses were unwilling to pay par, the trustees declined to accept any bids and opened popular subscriptions. As a result they received better than par, but the bonds were distributed among many investors, who, when they fell in need of funds, sold their bonds below par and the banks were not in a position to protect quotations. Had the market been under their control prices would have been maintained at par or better. Now the market ranges from 98¾ to 100."

The foregoing is given as a statement from the viewpoint of the banks and the bond houses. The drainage trustees naturally have been unwilling to sell the bonds below par, but where the margin is so close the machinery of the bond houses and banks may be necessary to maintain the price at 100. The bonds are in the highest class securities and are handled pretty much as a staple article. While there is not much profit in sales to investors, still there is a steady demand for the bond, which the banking houses feel it necessary to supply.

Corn Products Refining.

President E. T. Bedford of the Corn Products Refining company announces the company is now grinding 85,000 bu of corn daily as compared with 100,000 bu a few weeks ago. There has been some falling off in the general demand. Elgin-Joliet Increases Stock.

The Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railway controlled by the United States Steel corporation has increased its capital stock from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000. This is supposed to be in connection with its payment to the Chicago, Lake Shore and Eastern railway of $4,000,000 cash as provided for in the lease of the latter railway, which owns the exclusive and terminal facilities at the Steel corporation's new plant at Gary, Ind., and at the South Chicago and Joliet plants of the Illinois Steel company. The Chicago, Lake Shore and Eastern railway has outstanding $9,000,000 bonds issued for 50 per cent of the cash cost of its property, guaranteed by the Steel corporation and the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railway and purchased some time ago by William A. Read & Co.

AGED MOTHER SEEKS DAUGHTER

Police Lieutenant, Touched by Woman's Plea, Aids in Search for Mrs. Theresa Pierce.

A mother's plea to see her daughter before she dies so touched the heart of Lieut. James Gleason of Central station yesterday that he urged every detective available to make a search for Mrs. Theresa Pierce, 30 years old, who came to the United States thirteen years ago, and now is believed to be residing with her three children in Chicago. According to Mrs. Katherine Kennedy, the 70 year old mother, Mrs. Pierce lived for a time in Boston and later in Pittsburg. She is thought to have come here five years ago.

TRADE ACTIVITY WELL SUSTAINED

Gross Earnings of Chicago Railroads Show Steady Gains Over Last Year.

SHIPBUILDERS ARE BUSY.

Demands on Wholesalers for Shipments of Holiday Goods Are Increasing.

In its weekly review of Chicago trade Dun's Review, published by R. G. Dun & Co., will say in today's issue:

"Thanksgiving trade in the leading retail lines responded amply to expectations, and sustained progress in business generally is evidenced by further gains in solvent payments through the banks and decreased ratio in trading defaults. Industrial conditions disclose no cessation in the extent and variety of new demands, while in most branches of heavy production activity steadily extends.

"Contracts include fair tonnages of pig iron and substantial quantities of rails, cars, power and equipment, and machinery and hardware. Ore docks show heavy augmentation for the winter consumption, and with the near close of lake navigation there is more pressure in forwarding mine and forest products, breadstuffs, coal, and minor metals.

"Chicago railroad earnings maintain notable gross gains over those of a year ago. Western needs require more adequate rolling stock, and difficulties multiply in getting cars to make deliveries of heavy materials and merchandise. Ship building is strengthened by additional orders, thus permitting increased employment of capacity and workers, and the iron, brass, electric, and furniture shops produce more extensively to meet urgent requirements.

Upward Tendency in Prices.

"Prices of the principal materials for factory consumption remain quite firm, while various finished products soon may be marked up. Lumber dealings reflect broader absorption of both hard and soft woods, and scarce grades for commercial uses sell readily at advanced cost. Hides, leather, and wool continue in good demand.

"Reports from the farms testify to satisfactory condition of corn, but there is no rush of marketings. Winter wheat and rye show satisfactory growth. Agriculturists reap profitable returns and now buy liberally of accessories, machinery, vehicles, and materials for farm improvements.

"Interior dealers find their stocks of general merchandise under rapid depletion. Prompt replenishment is noted in seasonable lines and wholesalers have remarkably well maintained calls for immediate shipments of holiday wares, dry goods, notions, footwear, and food products. Mail and road orders for spring goods add largely to forward bookings in the principal staples.

"Money remains in good general request by the manufacturing and mercantile interests, sales of local securities largely exceed those at this time last year, and further gains appear in new building permits and realty sales.

Local Movement of Grain.

"The total movement of grain at this port, 6,400,983 bushels, compares with 8,224,065 bushels last week and 7,514,382 bushels last year. Compared with 1908, receipts decreased 28.5 per cent, while shipments increased 7.3 per cent. Flour receipts were 175,660 barrels, against 208,488 barrels last week and 192,250 barrels a year ago, and shipments 208,520 barrels, against 231,914 barrels last week and 199,279 barrels in 1908. Receipts of live stock, 368,809 head, compare with 294,819 head last week and 384,451 head last year. Receipts of hides were only 2,864,524 pounds, against 4,240,639 pounds last week and 3,822,932 pounds in 1908. Receipts of wool, 358,080 pounds, compare with 531,168 pounds last week and 649,566 pounds last year. Lumber receipts were 53,471,000 feet, against 63,926,000 feet last week and 47,780,000 feet a year ago.

"Compared with the closing a week ago, cash prices are unchanged in pork, ribs, choice cattle, and hogs, but lower in wheat and oats, each ¼ cent a bushel; corn, ½ cent; flour, 2½ cents a barrel; lard, 2½ cents a tierce; and sheep, 5 cents a hundredweight.

"Bank clearings, $251,006,184, exceed those of the corresponding week in 1908 by 8.2 per cent, and compare with $159,781,910 in 1907.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district number twenty-three, against twenty-seven last week, twenty-six in 1908, and twenty-three in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number seven, against six last week, five in 1908, and thirteen in 1907."

Approach of Holidays Stimulus.

New York, Nov. 26.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

"Colder weather and the approach of the holiday season have continued to stimulate retail trade and measurably improve reassorting trade with jobbers, while rains or snows, while temporarily retarding country trade by making the roads bad, have checked excessive growth of or insect damage to winter wheat and given a good quantity of moisture to the growing plant, thus placing that crop in good shape to enter the winter.

"In wholesale trade there are, however, some intimations of cross currents tending to restrict fullest activities. The high price of cotton is still responsible for some curtailment of output and also some hesitation on the part of buyers, who are slow to follow the goods market upward. It is to be noted, however, that the advance in prints going into effect this week has been quite well received. Western trade reports reflect slightly more optimism than do those from the eastern seaboard.

"Business failures in the United States for the week ending with Nov. 25 were 211, against 232 last week, 198 in the like week of 1908, 258 in 1907, 174 in 1906, and 188 in 1905."

New Production Is Greater.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade tomorrow will say:

"Favorable industrial conditions remain unchanged and new production is now proceeding at an enormous rate. All through the west the thought and talk of the people is concerning things actually produced and wealth created from the soil. The recent warm weather checked activity in some mercantile lines and high prices and speculative developments work unfavorably in others, and this gives the superficial impression of a pause in business revival. But the basic facts still point to a remarkable industrial expansion.

"The heavy demand for steel products continues, and some reports indicate that specifications and new orders thus far this month have been even greater than the remarkable tonnage booked during October.

"Trade continues to improve in footwear and business at present is of larger proportions than at any time in the last two years. Eastern manufacturers' salesmen are taking the road for next fall's business, and those who have returned from former trips report a satisfactory demand. The leather situation remains strong, although business is not quite as active."

Bank Clearings of the Week.

Bradstreet's bank clearings report for the week ending Nov. 25 shows an aggregate of $2,800,136,000, as against $3,490,103,000 last week and $2,540,718,000 in the corresponding week last year. Following is a list of the cities:

WITNESS INJECTS HUMOR INTO COAL LANDS INQUIRY.

Seattle Banker Testifies He Got So in the Habit of Signing Affidavits That He'd Sign Anything.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 26.—Humor was injected into the Cunningham coal land inquiry today when Horace C. Henry, Seattle banker and railroad builder, was placed on the stand by the defense and admitted he had joined the claimants without knowing anything about the proposition and that he had signed numerous affidavits without knowing what they contained.

"I got so in the habit of signing affidavits that I just signed anything that Cunningham and Glavis asked me to," said Mr. Henry.

Henry said that he was approached by Cunningham in 1903. Cunningham told him that C. J. Smith and former Gov. Moore of Washington were interested in the claims and asked if Henry wanted to file on one.

"I told him to go ahead and put me in," said the witness. "I told him further that if he wanted any money to draw on me. He always did.

"I did not have anything to do with the Guggenheim negotiations and did not know they were being carried on. Later when I heard about the Guggenheim proposition, I thought it was all right. I knew that it would cost close to $2,000,000 to build a railroad and docks to handle the coal, and I knew that one man could not do it alone. When the Guggenheim negotiations fell through we organized the Behring River railway company."

Henry was shown an affidavit signed by him, in which it was stated that he knew most of the claimants.

"That statement is false," he said. "I know only three or four of these men. This shows that I signed affidavits without looking at them. Cunningham brought Glavis to my office and asked me to sign the affidavit. They said it was all right and I signed it. I did not read it over."

SIMS, BACK FROM WASHINGTON, PREDICTS END OF PANDERING.

District Attorney Says Congressman Mann Has Introduced Bill to Stop Interstate Traffic in Women.

United States District Attorney Edwin W. Sims, upon his return from Washington yesterday, expressed the belief that the pandering traffic in this country will be effectually broken up under the operation of a law that probably will be passed by congress at its forthcoming session.

"This proposed law has been framed by Congressman James R. Mann of Illinois," said Mr. Sims, "and its purpose it to bring the objectionable traffic under the provisions of the laws regulating interstate commerce.

"The Mann bill makes it a crime to aid in transporting women from one state to another, or from a foreign country to the United States, for improper purposes.

"This will bring the traffic directly within the control of the federal government, and I believe the result will be the stamping out of the trade in women and girls."

Argo, Ill., Now on Postal Map.

ACQUIRE $284,000 MICHIGAN AV. LAND

Ayres Boal and Associates Increase Holdings by a New $144,000 Purchase.

CISCO BUILDING IS SOLD.

George F. Porter Revealed as Buyer at Judicial Sale of Minor's $51,500 Interest.

It is reported that Ayres Boal, in connection with other parties, has practically closed the purchase of the James R. Todd property at 92-96 Michigan avenue, on the east side of the street, 89 feet north of Randolph street.

The lot fronts 64 feet, with a depth of 130 feet, and is improved with a four story and basement building. The sale is said to have been on the basis of $2,250 a front foot, or a total consideration of $144,000.

The property adjoins on the south the property at 88-90 Michigan avenue, which Mr. Boal, in connection with Robert Stromson Jr., acquired about ten days ago from E. B. Sheldon for about $140,000. The two will give a total frontage of 125¾ feet and will comprise one of the largest single holdings in that part of the avenue.

The purchase of the Borden property at 84-86 Washington street, known as the Cisco building, was completed by the acquirement at judicial sale in the real estate board rooms of the one-quarter minor's interest for $51,500, which is at the rate of $206,000 for the entire holding.

The transaction revealed the fact that the purchaser is George F. Porter, who was represented in the sale by Francis E. Manierre of Dibblee & Manierre, who bid the property in for him.

The property, which was bought as an investment, is 41.6x90 feet, with seven story building, and lies between the Equitable building on the corner and the recent purchase of the Chicago Title and Trust company. The building is one of the Washington street landmarks and was erected by George Manierre just after the fire of '71 and sold by him to William Borden about twenty-five years ago. It has housed many of Chicago's most famous lawyers. The board of review valued the property at $251,000.

World's Fair Hotel Sold.

The Yo Semite, one of the world's fair apartment hotels, located at the northwest corner of Monroe avenue and Sixty-first street, has been sold by Josephine S. Hubbard and husband, Willard W. Hubbard, of Indianapolis to Edward Hellman of Canton, O., for $125,000, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000.

The lot has a frontage of 100 feet, with a depth of 177 feet, and the building is a six story and basement structure containing forty-two apartments.

The deal involving a new plant for the F. C. Traver Paper company in Ontario street, west of Orleans street, has been closed, the deed in connection with the acquirement of the land being filed for record yesterday.

For this land, 136 feet, south front, 175 feet west of Orleans street and 100 feet deep, running back to a Milwaukee and St. Paul switch, Mr. Traver paid $54,400, which is at the rate of $400 a front foot. The grantors were the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, under deed from Percy B. Coffin, Arthur W. Burnham, and John N. Wilcox.

The paper company plans to improve the entire lot with a three story and basement standard mill construction building, to cost $60,000.

In connection with this and the purchase of the land Mr. Traver gave two trust deeds to Oscar H. Haugan, trustee, securing loans of $60,000 and $29,400 respectively, five years at 5 per cent.

Booth Fisheries Company Leases.

Another interesting transaction in this immediate neighborhood was the purchase by John A. Chapman, connected with the management of the McCormick estate, of 173 feet in Ontario street, 75 feet west of the Traver Paper company's purchase, for $69,200.

The lot extends back 100 feet to a Milwaukee and St. Paul switch track, and has old brick improvements, which will be remodeled for the occupancy of the Davies Supply company, under a lease. The property was purchased from Cribben & Sexton and the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee.

Record was made of the lease by Fraser & Chalmers to the Booth Fisheries company of the property at the southwest corner of Fulton and Union streets, 78x140 feet, for a term of twenty years from May 22 last, when the lease was executed. The property was acquired by the company for use in connection with its wholesale business, and the term rental is given at $94,624, or $394 a month, lessee to pay taxes in addition.

The lessee has the option to reduce the monthly payments by the payment of certain fixed sums on or before May 1 during the years from 1910 to 1914.

The property at 2239-2245 Prairie avenue, 105x175 feet, has just been sold by Mary F. P. Thompson and the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company to Olive E. Denton. Nominal considerations were given, and the deal was negotiated by Rounds & Wetten.

The property is located in the neighborhood where Ginn & Co. and Gage Bros. have recently erected buildings, and is in the same block where D. B. Fisk & Co. will construct a building for their business in the near future.

$50,000 Loan Made.

Louis J. Koch has purchased from Rebeka Kaufmann the property in Milwaukee avenue 125 feet northwest of Paulina street, 24x100 feet, northeast front, with store and flat improvements, for $30,000.

The property at the southwest corner of Sacramento and Carroll avenues, 140x64 feet, with brick improvements, has been sold by John F. Conant to Isaac A. Watson for $21,500, subject to an incumbrance of $8,500.

James Griffin has purchased from the estate of James S. McDonald, late of Evanston, the flat property in Prairie avenue 225 feet north of Fifty-fourth street, with 50x180 feet of ground, east front, for $18,500, with incumbrance of $10,000.

The Catholic bishop of Chicago has borrowed through Cremin & O'Connor $50,000, five years, at 5 per cent, on the half block fronting on Washington boulevard between Fifty-first avenue and Fifty-first court. The church and school of St. Joan of Arc is now in course of construction on this property, and when finished will be one of the finest buildings of its kind in Chicago.

It will be remembered that the pastor, the Rev. D. Luttrell, recently erected a frame church on this ground, complete in every detail, in the short period of one week.

The Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company has made a loan of $60,000, five years, at 5 per cent, to William J. Wilson, secured by the property in Canal street 114 feet south of Adams street, with 97x160 feet of ground, east front, with brick factory improvements.

The Western Michigan Section at the Land Show

Exhibits many of the products grown on the lands of THE CADILLAC TRACT. I furnished many bushels of the choicest Northern Spies, Baldwins, Wagners, Canadian Reds, Jersey Sweets, Tallman Sweets, 20 oz. Pippins, Wolfe Rivers, and Alexanders, also potatoes, corn, etc. These were grown right in the midst of the lands I sell. Another exhibit embracing not only a great variety of apples but samples of grains, grasses, root crops, and various products raised by my own settlers on lands in THE CADILLAC TRACT, can be seen, free of charge, at my rooms at the Southern Hotel, Michigan-blvd. If you are genuinely interested you will enjoy seeing the many fine views of farms, the city of Cadillac and her lake scenes, which lie right in the center of my lands. You will also enjoy the apples I will give you. If you are sincere in your desire to get complete and accurate information from the owner of these lands do not hesitate to call on me either at the Michigan section at the Coliseum or at my hotel apartments.

Considered from the standpoint of soil and climate, my lands are much the same as others in that part of Michigan, except that having more altitude my lands are more immune from frost, and that my soil is more generally underlaid with clay. But when you consider the LOCATION OF THE CADILLAC TRACT, close up to the CITY OF CADILLAC, with a population of 10,000 live ones, the SPLENDID HOME MARKETS, THE HARD GRAVEL ROADS, the SUPERIOR TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES, and the fact that my lands are LARGELY CLEARED OF STUMPS FREE OF CHARGE, I can really offer you more than any other dealer. There are many other exceptional advantages which you ought to learn before buying elsewhere. You owe it to yourself to compare THE CADILLAC TRACT with others. I will tell you nothing that I cannot prove to your entire satisfaction, moreover I have some of my settlers now with me—good, sturdy, honest farmers. Hear the true story of their success. There's nothing phenomenal about it. You can do likewise; any industrious man can win out. And when I say to you, as I truthfully can, that I have never foreclosed a mortgage, never taken unfair advantage of any one, just remember that, true as this statement is, it counts two for the land itself and only one for me. The land makes good—so do I. I furnish the most complete booklets and the best map of this area. All my literature is authentic. It gives ALL the facts, and it is free.

FOR SALE—THREE FORKS, MONT. IRRIGATED AND DRY FARM LANDS. $15 TO $50 PER ACRE.
Three Forks, Gallatin county, Mont., is located at the junction of the Gallatin, Madison and Jefferson rivers, where they form the Missouri. It is conceded by all who have been there to be one of the most advantageously located points in the northwest. It was opened up only a year ago and now has a population of 800. It is a division point on the C., M. & P. S. Ry., and is also on the main line of the N. P. Ry. An electric line is now under construction from Bozeman to Three Forks and another line is projected up the Madison valley towards Yellowstone Park. The climate is ideal and rainfall sufficient for the raising of all crops including all kinds of fruits which are grown in the northwest. Unlimited supply of water for irrigating and power purposes. Altitude 4,000 feet. Wheat, oats, barley, and other grains, quality and quantity considered, are unexcelled. Vegetables and fruits are grown in abundance and find a ready market in the nearby mining communities and large quantities are shipped to points outside the state. Now is the time to get lands cheap in this vicinity. No better lands are to be had in the northwest. Tracts of all sizes for sale. For further information or descriptive literature, call on or write,
THE THREE FORKS LAND COMPANAY,
613 RAILWAY EXCHANGE, CHICAGO.

2,000 Acres, Michigan, $10,000.

All the excellent and great variety of products exhibited at the Michigan section of the Land Show at the Coliseum can be grown on this land I am advertising. In fact, many of them were contributed by the undersigned from adjoining lands. The location of this tract, close to a large town with all modern advantages, the surface, which is level to rolling [splendid for fruit], the natural drainage into two beautiful spring fed lakes which this land surrounds, the excellence of the soil and climate, to say nothing of a small body of hardwood timber included, makes it the best proposition in Michigan today. I have sold surrounding lands in forties at $15 per acre. I offer this at a third less for a short time only. Meet me at the Michigan section of the Land Show or at Hotel Southern, Michigan-blvd., by appointment.

SAMUEL S. THORPE, Owner.

FOR SALE—

At the Land Show

visit the Western Michigan Section, where you will find the best display of apples in the Coliseum. Every box of them is labeled with the picture of a Mason County fruit grower, emblematic of Western Michigan. He is holding a 3 foot branch bearing 22 perfect apples from a tree on his farm which adjoins the SWIGART TRACT. Meet me and my representatives in this booth. I will show you a display of all kinds of products. I will also be pleased to meet you at my offices and give you a large map and the best illustrated booklet published about Michigan. REMEMBER, this tract is in the heart of MICHIGAN'S FRUIT BELT proper, which is practically limited to the counties touching on Lake Michigan. It is the largest tract in the state owned by any one man—comprising over 1,200 40 acre and many choice 5 and 10 acre farms, thus giving you the largest selection. Only nine hours' ride from Chicago—no 40 acres over 6 miles from railroad stations or Lake Michigan harbors—tributary to the cities of Manistee and Ludington. It lies mostly in Mason, Manistee, and Lake counties, where you can raise wonderful money earning crops of apples and other fruits, all the staple vegetables, grains, grasses, and clover. Unexcelled for dairying, stock, and poultry raising. Many beautiful inland lakes and trout streams; new town sites; many schools and churches. Present prices of $8 to $15 make these lands absolutely the best bargain in the state, considering their superior location and quality. I am the pioneer in making terms as low as $10 down and $5 per month on 40 acres. THAT'S ONLY 17C A DAY, and has resulted in giving many men of small means a chance to secure a farm home. This is the only proposition in Michigan where it has been necessary to run a special car to take care of its land buyers. Join the next special private Pullman car excursion, leaving my Chicago offices at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday, Dec. 7, and see Michigan for a round trip fare of only $6, which will be refunded if you buy.

Do not confuse this with the ordinary Florida land proposition. This is a developed community, with every social advantage and the best year 'round climate in America.

I do not ask you to invest, merely to read the facts.
No agent will bother you.

I APPRECIATE ACCOUNTS OF HONORABLE people [men employed or in business, ladies with allowances from their husbands, or incomes from other sources] who want large or small sums confidentially, with or without security. My location [30 min. from loop district] and my being the president of a large manufacturing wholesale establishment [Bradstreet's and other agencies show its standing], and not a professional money lender, assures a privacy not possible to those who deal with brokers in downtown office buildings where money lenders congregate. Professional lenders demand high rates, usually asking so much that the average straightforward citizen cannot meet that exorbitant charges for any time are burdensome. My average price, all charges positively included is never more than 1, 2 or 3 per cent monthly, depending on risk and amount loaned. Individual waiting rooms. Ask for WILLOUGHBY, care the Englewood Co., 1101-1103 E. 63d-st., or Greenwood-av. Tel. Hyde Park 4332.

APPRECIATE ACCOUNTS OF HONORABLE people [men employed or in business, ladies with allowances from their husbands, or incomes from other sources] who want large or small sums, confidentially, with or without security. My location [5 min. from loop district] and my being the president of a large manufacturing wholesale vehicle establishment [Bradstreet's and other agencies give its standing], and not a professional money lender, assures a privacy not possible to those who deal with brokers in downtown office buildings where money lenders congregate. Professional lenders demand high rates, usually asking so much that the average straightforward citizen realizes the exorbitant charges for any time are burdensome. My average price, all charges positively included is never more than 1, 2 or 3 per cent monthly, depending on risk and amount loaned. Individual waiting rooms. THE PERSON WHO BUYS THE MAHOGANY Kingsbury Inner-Player Piano which we are offering at $450 will make a saving of $200 on the regular price. The fact that this instrument has been used only for demonstration purposes in our salesrooms has not made any real difference in its value. However, we cannot offer it as a new instrument, and as we need the room for several new ones in later case designs we have marked this one at a price which makes it a decided bargain. BUSINESS CHANCES.

FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE.
We are all looking for this. A little money invested in the stock of the YAZOO VALLEY PECAN COMPANY will eventually bring you an income annually of ten times your original investment. Think this over.
This company owns a plantation of 2,090 acres in the heart of the famous Mississippi Delta, highly improved and profitable now. It owns the town and more than 90 buildings, including stores, cotton gin, etc. It is on the main line of the railroad. It is a cotton and alfalfa plantation now, and, besides, it has 20,000 pedigreed, root grafted pecan trees of an average age of six years. Besides the assured profits from cotton, alfalfa, stores, and gin, which guarantee a substantial dividend now of not less than 8 per cent, the pecans in two years will begin to swell the profits to unbelievable amounts.
There is no waiting. No worry or responsibility on your part. You can be certain of immediate returns, ever increasing.
We have left about 2,000 shares at par $10 a share, which we offer you in amounts of $100 and up. If you are really interested, call or write for descriptive booklet.
